ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insistedupon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 12 words, 4d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

Whatever else you require send for my

Free Money-Saving Catalogue.

There you will find the best Flight Cages, Nursery Cages, Appliances of every description, Seeds of the very finest quality; in fact, everything that can be found in one dozen other places together. The cages are not an imitation lot, cribbed from somebody else's ideas, nor do they possess names that are taken from other people's catalogues; when this has to be done, it tells you plainly what the sellers and their goods must be made of, otherwise there would be no necessity to resort to such mean, dirty practices. This Money-Saving Catalogue of mine contains more matter than all the others published put together. Every Fancier living should see it. Notice.—Best bird lime in the world, 2d. and 4d. box, post free. Thousands of testimonials. Catchers' Illustrated List stamp.

GIVE US EACH DAY

food good and sweet, mixed according to our liking, that will keep us healthy, so that we can sing well and give satisfaction to our owner, is the cry of all birds. If they could talk they would tell you more about the seeds that are best for them. Till that time arrives, feed on A. and G. H. Edwards', of Dorset-road, Clapham, S.W., foods, who are specialists of wide experience and have bred and kept Canaries and know by knowledge the exact proportions required to keep them fit for hobby or show bench. Not a flash in the pan, but a steady day by day growth of study. Your birds just about now require building up before moulting commences, otherwise you run the risk of losing them. Perhaps you have already lost a number. Why is it? Want of experience, or are you, through prejudice, feeding them only on a certain kind of seed which they dislike, and show it by the waste? Feed on Edwards' Song-Producing Seed, in original tins and packets, sold by seedsmen. In addition, give your old and young birds daily drops of Edwards' Norwich Syrup to keep them healthy through the moult. If you do not, the expression of your face will change one day, and you will wish that you had. Grit, use Edwards' Shell Gravel. Edwards' Talking Parrot Food is a perfect menu. Sold only in original tins and packets. Feed Softbills on Iliho, it is a keep-them-alive food. Edwards is an awful common name, so look to it that you get the original and not a pirate. If you cannot obtain our specialities of your tradesmen, send to us.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS.

By C. P. ARTHUR.

(with notes by W. T. Page, F.Z.S., and W. Laskey).

The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognized as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. In this thoroughly practical handbook an eminent authority and highly successful breeder of these two species gives very full details upon

How to Keep, Feed, Breed, Tame and Teach to Talk.

HIGHGATE, HAMPSTEAD AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Held in Spencer Hall on July 10th. This first-feather show was the greatest success the Society has yet scored in its continued march of progress. The membership shows a well-sustained advance, and as things are going at present the only fear is lest the hall may not prove adequate to the requirements. The stewards—Messrs. Bush, Knight, and Hall—worked zealously and well, being assisted on Saturday by the chairman, Mr. Geo. Gardner, and everything was in apple-pie order at the appointed time for judging to commence (12 o'clock). There was some delay, however, owing to the non-arrival of the judge until between one and two o'clock, but catalogues were on sale by five o'clock. The capable hon. secretary, Mr. G. H. Neal, is ever willing, and had the prize-money ready for the successful competitors before the close of the show. Mr. Knight, with his customary good taste, superintended the floral decorations, which added much to the effect of the show. During the evening the show was visited by a large number of fanciers, and the universal verdict was one of approval and congratulation. Mrs. Giddy had out a fine team, and won the £5 5s. points' cup with 137 points; Mr. W. Knight coming a good second with 112 points. Mrs. G. E. Weston showed a splendid team of British and Foreign birds, their condition and manner of staging eliciting admiration. This lady took special for best bird in the show, the valuable special presented by Mrs. Giddy for best bird shown by a lady, with a very attractive Yellow-winged Sugar Bird. Mr. W. Dewbury won Mr. Dickson's teapot for most points in Roller classes. In the Norwich sections, some birds of really good quality were shown, and this remark is applicable in an even more pronounced degree to the Yorksbires; while Crests and Borders were A1. Both Mr. Bush's splendid Greenfinch-Mule and Mr. Sparke's lovely Goldie-Mule were "snapped up" at the low catalogue figures of 15s. and 10s. respectively. They will be heard of again. We hear from the secretary that all things point to the show being a financial success. Mr. J. Robson judged.

CATERHAM.

Held on July 7th at Caterham Valley. Several of the members of this old-established society are determined to increase the popularity and increase the status of the cage bird section. The task is an uphill one, but Mr. A. J. Kilby, son of the hon. secretary, is taking the lead, and eventually success will crown his efforts. On this occasion there was an improvement—decidedly in the matter of quality if not of numbers—over the show last year. Mr. A. J. Kilby staged a splendid team of Norwich. He won special for best in show with a very sweet yellow. Mr. J. Gorringe, who has taken up Borders in earnest, put down a very nice team, ono or two of the birds being very typical, of lovely feather, and easy and jaunty in carriage. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged, and spoke a few words on the Border Fancies after judging.

Canary Breeding for Beginners - - Post Free. 7d.

By Claude St. John.

A practical, up-to-date guide to the cult of Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby. It contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the details and difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

FORFAR AND DISTRICT C.B.I.S.

F.F. Show held on July 3rd, in a room kindly lent for the occasion by Mr. J. Bowman. The entries were far below last year's in number owing to the bad season. Mr. J. Byars (Brechin) judged Norwich, Mr. W. Grewar Borders and British. Messrs. J. Grewar and W. Grewar were the winners in Norwich; Messrs. J. Campbell, P. Falconer, and C. Kennedy in Borders; Mr. J. Fyfe in Mules; and Messrs. J. Laird and J. Fyfe in British.—W. GREWAR, Sec.

BRIGHTON F. AND F.A.

The first of the year's nest feather shows was held on July 7th at the King and Queen Hotel, Marlborough-place. Entries numbered 21, and some nice quality birds were staged, competition being very keen. Mr. H. Frost won special for best in show. Mr. W. Swaysland placed the cards, and gave entire satisfaction.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Second of three young bird shows held on July 10th. Entries were not numerous, being about same as the previous show. Borders fell off considerably, and Mr. A. Walker, after his great success at the previous show, had on this occasion the class to himself. British made a fine show, the winning Linnet of Mr. A. Walker's being much admired. Mr. Waters won the Mule class with a splendid dark Linnet-Canary. Yorkshires came up very well, the number being slightly in excess of that at the previous show. No commendation cards are given at these shows, only the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd birds being awarded prizes. Mr. J. T. Clark (Sunderland) judged, and gave every satisfaction.

NORWICH AMATEUR C.B.A.

Fourteenth annual First Feather Show held at Boar's Head, Norwich, on June 26th, when 229 exhibits, about the same number as last year, were brought under the notice of the judges, Messrs. A. Woollard and R. J. Mackley. This was a much larger number than was anticipated in consequence of the very fickle weather breeders have had to contend with, and promises well for the annual show in October. The champion prize for best Plainbead was taken by F. Harcourt, and the champion for Crests by W. Thompson. Mr. E. Fox was again responsible for the secretarial duties.

DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

Despite the many ups and down experienced recently by the society "Forward!" would appear to be its motto. On July 1st it held a most successful Young Bird Show at the Peckham Public Hall, this being the sixth of the series. If the entries were not quite so strong numerically as in previous years, this was amply atoned for by the high-class quality of the specimens shown. The hall is an ideal one for tbe purpose, and the birds were well set out on the society's splendid, up-to-date staging. Mr. W. Hodson, the ever-courteous hon. secretary, is a past master in the art of conducting a show, and he was ably assisted by an excellent committee in Messrs. A. Jay (assistant secretary), F. Cole, E. S. Lugg, H. W. Tomsett, Jno. Cranfield, A. Goodwin, W. B. Cracknell, S. H. Stephens, Allan Cunningham, J. W. Norris, L. J. Richardson, and F. Johnson. Mr. J. Robson (in the absence, through illness, of Mr. Crisp) judged Canaries, whilst Mr. Maxwell placed the awards in the British and Foreign bird sections. Many well-known fanciers visited the show, among whom we noticed Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Litchfield, Mr. and Mrs. Thyne, Mr. and Mrs. Tomsett, Mrs. Kearney, Messrs. "Bob" Pretty, F. S. Matthes, J. Perkins, H. Welch, C. W. Mabey, F. W. Hamer, C. Botting, H. S. Graham, John B. Waterman, and H. Waterman. The society's gold medallion for best bird in show was won by Messrs. Lee and Kearney. Other specials were secured by Messrs. L. J. Richardson, F. W. Baker, John B. Waterman, F. Cole, F. Putner, H. S. Graham, C. Botting, and J. Holloway. At the close Mr. E. S. Lugg, in a neat speech, thanked the exhibitors for their support, and a vote of thanks to the judges was unanimously accorded.

MIDDLETON O.S.

Tenth annual young bird show held July 10th in the Assembly Rooms adjoining "Old Boar's Head," Long-street. The entries were not quite up to expectation in number, but in quality they were good, especially the Lancashires. Mr. Adams took special for best bird in show with a tkd. yell. Plainhead; also most points for cup. Mr. Hardy (Oldham) officiated as judge, and his awards gave general satisfaction.

NORWICH ALL-ENGLAND C.B.A.

Second annual F.F. Show, held July 10th at the Fanciers' Hall, Pitt-street, and attracted an entry of 150 cages, against 130 last year, the increase being mainly in the Plainhead classes. The judges were Messrs. W. W. Freestone and E. P. Gilbert, and they had brought under their notice a wonderful show of young stock. The Norwich classes were extremely well filled, and contained many specimens of good size, stamina, and feather. Mr. R. Roll, the secretary, had everything well in hand.

LITTLEBOROUGH C.B.S.

The 33rd annual First Feather Show was held on June 26th, in the Parish Church Schools, in a splendid room well lighted, free from draughts, with good facilities for judging. The entries numbered close upon 90, and it is gratifying to know the growth this society is making. There was a record attendance for a first feather show, and as the Secretary (Mr. H. Smith) informed us, this is largely due to the never-tiring efforts of the members. Some very promising youngsters were exhibited both in Lancasbires, Yorkshires, Norwich, and Crests. Messrs. Harrison and Raynor took tbe cup for the next 12 months, with a nice team of Norwich. The three prizes given for most points in show were won by Messrs. F. Fish, Harrison and Raynor, and Smith and Sellars. Special for best bird in show was won by Messrs. Smith and Sellars. The Rev. R. P. Hudson (Bury) judged and gave general satisfaction.

BIRKENHEAD AND DISTRICT F.A.

Annual Nest Feather Show held July 10th in the Co-operative Hall, Catherine-street. The hall is an ideal one for a show, being well lighted and free from draughts. The secretary, Mr. J. Richardson, assisted by Mr. Morton, had everything well in hand in good time, and there was a capital entry of over 100. The Yorkshires mustered strongly, and there were some very promising exhibits. Norwich and British did not turn up so well as usual. Mr. S. Hadwin (Liverpool) judged.

ORMSKIRK C.B.S.

Annual Nest Feather Show held at the Buck i' th' Vine Hotel, July 10th. Owing to other attractions in the district there was only a moderate attendance. Although several members have had only a poor season, over 100 birds were forward. Norwich were exceptionally strong. Borders and Yorkshires were a nice level lot, the winners being very difficult to separate. The British bird section was the chief attraction. The Bunting and Softbill classes would have done credit to any open show, all the exhibits being staged in the pink of condition.

LINCOLN AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

First Feather Show held at the Central Hall, on July 3rd. The room (which has plenty of floor space and light) is most suitable for the purpose. The entry was excellent, numbering 90 birds in nine classes, which is a credit to this new society. Mr. C. Pickering (chairman) and Mr. O. Heath (the secretary) and his committee, all of one mind in making the show a success, carried out the arrangements in a first-class manner. Mr. W. P. Barnes (Grantham) placed the cards, and gave every satisfaction.

NOR. CL. HULL C.B.S.

Annual half-day Nest Feather Show held July 10th, at the Oddfellows' Hall, when an entry of 108 faced the judges, which number, considering the poor breeding season, must be considered very satisfactory. Mr. W. Clews (Grimsby) judged the Norwich and A.O.V., and Mr. Harland (Hull) the Yorkshire and British. Points gained at this show were placed to the champion and novice cup competition respectively, the following being the position of parties up to date:—Champion cup: 112 Calam, 81 Stamford, 50 Stones, 33 Harland, 27 Barwick, 18 Brumby, 8 Oliver, and 4 Prentice, 21 Perkins (last year's winner) retired from the competition. Novice cup: 70 Riley, 63 F. E. Potter, 60 Precious, 48 L. Hope, 42 Hogg, 30 Frith, 24 Bray, 20 W. Potter, 16 Calvard, 15 Constable, 12 Mason.

BRISBANE (Australia).

At the request of several fanciers in and around Brisbane, I am sending you a note re their show, namely, the Poultry Club of Queensland. This season they introduced Canarics, in the hope of furthering this particular branch of their hobby In all thirty cutries came forward, of which ten belonged to one fancier. The quality of the exhibits, I regret, was very much behind the high-class standard to be seen in the shows of England and Scotland, and such a thing as colour feeding is practically unknown, and is never, so far as I could learn, ever practised. They are very much behind in show cages, too, Yorkshires being staged in a wooden back cage of about the same dimensions as the Y.C.C. standard cage and painted blue inside, but with only one perch. The longest bird did not exceed five inches. Norwich Plainheads and Crests were much behind in size and type, and were shown in cages about fourteen inches long, six inches deep, and twelve inches high; some of these, too, had only one perch, although all were nicely made, stained, and varnished outside, and painted sky-blue inside. I got in conversation with a few of the fanciers, who were very enthusiastic and anxious to learn more of their fascinating hobby, but who, unfortunately for them, had never heard of CAGE BIRDS, although they had heard from time to time of the great English shows through settlers coming from various parts of the old country. The Canary Club Show, which comes off about July 19th, should prove more interesting, entries averaging from 100 to 180, a report of which I will send, if at all possible. It is just six weeks since I arrived here from Keith, Scotland, so that I have scarcely got properly settled down yet. My copy of CAGE BIRDS has not arrived yet, but I am expecting it soon, when I shall again get into touch with the doings of fanciers at home and the Fancy in general. In the meantime, success to "C.B.," and a good season to all fanciers in the dear old land.—GEORGE MILNE.

[We are sure readers will welcome gladly any news items Mr. Milne can find time to send them. That he may do the Fancy in Australia good will be the wish of all.—EDITOR.]

Owing to business pressure I regret I am unable to undertake the duties appertaining to our open show, writes Mr. A. S. Treasure, hon. secretary and treasurer of the Cheltenham C.B.S. Mr. W. Pounsett, of 5, White Cross Square, has been appointed show manager, and all communications should be addressed to him.

Owing to the fair here, writes Mr. Joseph Smith, secretary pro tem for the new cage-bird society for Mansfield and District, we could not get a meeting at the Charter Arms on July 10th, but I have arranged a meeting for July 24th, at 7 o'clock, when I hope fanciers will turn up so that we may get to work. We have an excellent room for show purposes, and a table show could be held every month.

A sample of a new glass bird sprayer has been sent us by Mr. W. Rudd, of Norwich. This he is advertising in our columns this week, along with three other very useful articles for the bird-room. The sprayer is excellent; with a very small effort a fine spray of water—almost like escaping steam—can be sent over the bird. This little article should find a ready sale amongst bird-keepers.

Insurance against loss of birds (and other livestock) by robbery and fire can be effected at moderate premiums through Mr. H. W. Mathias, "Lucerne," Stubbington, near Fareham, Hants. The risks incidental to birds being at shows, or sent on approval, may also be covered. Particulars will be sent if application is made to Mr. Mathias.

We learn that £1 from the CAGE BIRDS prizes for the amateurs of Yorkshire has been allotted to the newly-formed National Green-marked Yorksbire C.C., for competition amongst its members. This has been made possible by the fact that the Yorkshire Union shows number 16 this year against 18 last, thus leaving in hand the surplus above for the committee to deal with.

OBITUARY.

Mr. T. BRISBANE (St. Ninians).

It is with feelings of deep regret, writes Mr. W. Bishop, that I report the death of Mr. Thos. Brisbane, of St. Ninians, Stirling, who passed away on Saturday, July 10th, at noon, after a lingering illness of 36 weeks. Of a quiet and kindly disposition, be was a very enthusiastic exhibitor of British birds at the principal Scottish shows. He was but a young man, 33 years of age. He leaves a widow and two children to mourn bis loss, and to them every sympathy will be extended in their sad bereavement.

Kindly note that I have moved from Merton to 14, Claremont Avenue, New Malden, Surrey, writes Mr. H. Dixon. I should be pleased if secretaries will please note when sending out schedules. I bave had a very good season, having reared 50 Norwich and Yorkshires, several of which have won at Wimbledon and other young bird shows. Needless to add, I am a regular reader and advertiser in your splendid paper. CAGE BIRDS.

I note with great pleasure that the Gravesend Fanciers' Society promises us another open show this year, writes Mr. E. Rogers (Gravesend). The show held last December was a very excellent one. I bave attended their shows every year, and they bave always struck me as being as well managed and arranged as any it has been my pleasure to see. May these wholehearted fanciers have what they dearly hope for, a record show, at the next attempt.

The Southern Norwich Plainhead Club's handbook for 1909 reaches us from the hon. secretary, Mr. E. S. Matthes (34, Rotherhithe New Road, London, S.E.), and contains full particulars of the patronage allotted to the various shows for the coming season. The members should have a good time, cash specials being plentiful; the novices, too, are very well catered for. All Southern Plainhead breeders should communicate with the secretary at once, if desirous of joining.

Permit me to say how pleased I was to see my unflighted Yellow Norwich depicted in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, of July 10th date. It is a splendid drawing of him, and reflects great credit on your artist, Mr. Norman. I may say it was bred by a friend of mine, Mr. Venables, of Ewood, Blackburn, for whom the bird won many honours—1st Burnley, 1st Bolton, 1st Manchester, and a few others in the novice section. He was first at Bristol, first at Sunderland, and won others for me in the champion section. My unflighted Cinnamon, which was depicted in CAGE BIRDS on June 12th, has since, I regret to say, gone over to the majority.—W. E. SEED (Blackburn).

That the Yorkshire Union of C.B.S. is progressing marvellously is evidenced by the handbook for 1909-10. This is growing into quite a bulky volume, and in its production reflects the greatest credit on the esteemed secretary, Mr. H. Hill (31, St. Stephen's Road, West Bowling, Bradford), the late secretary, Mr. S. Dean, and the other officials. It contains a full list of the members of the twenty-eight societies comprised in the Union, and a mass of advertising matter interesting to fanciers, together with particulars of the various competitions and rules governing them. Both novices and champions are well catered for. The Hints to Secretaries and Members are very useful. The balance-sheet shows the Union to be in a splendidly satisfactory condition financially, the £17 4s. 1d. balance of 1908 having been swelled to a sum of £26 17s. 7d.

The members of the Ashton-under-Lyne and Dis. O.S. have arranged for an outing to Birch Vale, Derbyshire, on July 25th, writes Mr. H. Foden, the hon. sec. The party will be conveyed in wagonettes. Fanciers or friends wishing to go will be welcomed, and should give in their names at our show on July 17th.

In connection with the recent loss by a well-known crest breeder of a number of valuable birds through septic fever, we are asked to state on behalf of a number of prominent crest breeders in the West of England, that their birds were never in so healthy a state as now, or so free from any suspicion of this fell disease. It is to be greatly regretted if any impression to the contrary has been circulated by the publication of the individual instance referred to in our issue of July 3rd.

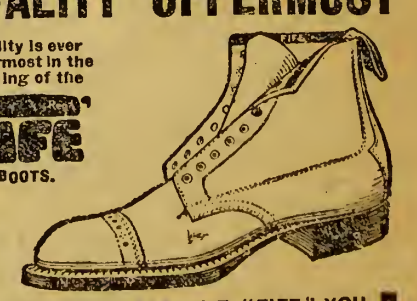
The Lancaster and Dis. C.B.S. Table Show will be held on July 17th, at 2 p.m., in the Coffee Tavern, Corn Market Street, writes Mr. H. F. Middleton. Entries will be received up to the judging. We hope all members will stage some young birds. After the judging, there will be a "musical entertainment" and addresses. Mr. Alf. Hayhurst will speak on "Breeding and Colour Feeding of Yorkshires"; there will also be an address by Mr. T. Fisher on "Hybrid Breeding," which promises to be very interesting. Both these members intend to relate "own experience." By the kind invitation of the generous treasurer, the members will partake of a "potatoe pie supper," and songs, etc., by members. The committee are earnestly requested to attend to consider the 25 guinea "All England Challenge Cup," which is being subscribed for. All members of the Morecambe Society are cordially invited.

Swallows Evicted.

Swallows have for some years nested in the infant school at Billingborough (Lincs.), and have shown no fear of the children, who took the greatest interest in them. This year the school medical officer condemned the Swallows on hygienic grounds, and ordered their eviction, but when measures were taken to prevent their entering through the windows they got in through the ventilators. Their perseverance was, however, without avail, for the managers were obdurate, and finally had all apertures covered with wire netting.

A Choir of Canaries.

In Cincinnati (Ohio) on Sunday, July 11th, says the "Daily Telegraph," forty Canaries were installed in the Lincoln Baptist Church to aid the regular choir in the religious service, and the effect of combining the birds' voices with the pipe organ and the vocalists was declared by members of the congregation to be a success. The text was "Who are these that come flying through the air like Doves?" The pastor had requested the members of the congregation to bring as many Canaries as they could, and the gilded cages were hung all about the building. The birds began chirping with the first strains of the organ, and continued as long as the choir sang.



Cock Canaries & Very Low Prices

A large number of common young hens are at this time of the year sent into England from Germany, and from complaints which reach us we have reason to think that they are offered to customers by unscrupulous dealers as "cocks" just coming on to song (most healthy young hens "twitter" and look sufficiently like "singing" to deceive anyone except the experienced fancier). These pseudo "cocks" are usually priced at a very tempting figure—lower, in fact, than genuine cocks could honestly be sold at; that is, to leave the seller a margin of profit. Of course, it is only fair to say that a high price affords no absolute guarantee of sex; nevertheless, cock birds have always a certain market value below which it is extremely improbable they would be offered for sale. We receive a very considerable number of small advertisements each week, into the bona-fides of the senders of which it is not possible for us to inquire—there is no possible system by which the genuine bargains amongst them can be sifted from low-priced offers deliberately designed as "catches." Therefore when readers come across advertisements, especially if temptingly worded, which offer "cock" birds for an exceedingly low sum, they should take every precaution to ensure themselves getting birds according to description, and not hens masquerading as "cocks."

THE CARE OF BIRDS IN GENERAL.

A Discussion before the Green Canary Association.

At the Green Canary Association's meeting on June 24th, Mr. Metcalfe in the chair, a lively discussion arose on the above-named subject. Mr. Shepherd (late chairman Newcastle Society) was present.

Mr. Metcalfe: Is there anything better than bread and milk after the young birds leave their parents?

The Chairman: Perhaps Mr. Shepherd would give us his views on feeding, and also tell us how the Northern breeders feed?—I have not bred much myself lately, said Mr. Shepherd, but I have exchanged opinions with most of the Northern breeders, and have come to the conclusion that the greatest difficulty is experienced at from 7 to 8 days old. At first I feed on yolk of egg and biscuits; afterwards the whole of the egg is used with home-made bread. Boiled rape is also largely used, but I think boiled rape is sometimes very relaxing. Bread and milk I like after leaving the parents, and crushed hemp, but no water till after the birds are six weeks old, and then I give it very gradually, and only for a little while each day, until the birds are thoroughly used to it.

Mr. Hadwin strongly objected to bread and milk, except in cases of inflammation and other stomach troubles, being of opinion that bread and milk had a very lowering tendency, and that it was impossible to get birds into show condition, on it. He sometimes gave his birds a little rice pudding after Sunday's dinner, but this was different to feeding on bread and milk for a length of time. He had over 60 young ones doing well, and it was a very rare thing for him to lose one after the birds had left the parents.

Mr. Nimmo: I have 50 young ones on perches, and I feed on bread and milk alternately with egg-food and a little hemp, giving the hemp whole to the hens whilst feeding, and crushed after the young leave the parents.

Mr. Haudley: How does Mr. Metcalfe make his bread and milk?—Before answering Mr. Handley's question, I should like to say that I use plenty of green food, watercress for choice. As regards bread and milk, I think it very nourishing. Doctors recommend it very largely. I use no water. I boil the milk and pour on to the bread with plenty of sugar, making it very sloppy, so that the birds can get a good drink. The first water my young birds get is when they get their first bath. I gradually reduce the sloppiness of the bread and milk, eventually getting it as dry as possible, gradually introducing water after birds are six weeks old.

Mr. Handley: Some fanciers boil the bread, and then add milk.—Mr. Metcalfe: I prefer to make it as stated.

Mr. Handley: I do not agree with Mr. Hadwin. I think bread and milk is a fine tonic and conditioner.

Mr. Walker: I think young birds after leaving the parents should be fed on the same food as when with the parents. Sudden changes of any kind are bad. I agree with Mr. Hadwin that bread and milk should only be given as a medicine.

Mr. Nelson: I don't like bread and milk. I prefer Mr. Hadwin's style; only give bread and milk when birds are bad. But I have never been able to save a bird with it.

Mr. Metcalfe: I think egg-food very binding.—Mr. Hadwin. I only use one egg a day with plenty of bread, crushed hemp and groats, and watercress, twice daily, the water being always on the cages.

Mr. Walker: I feed very similarly to Mr. Hadwin, and I only use one egg a day, having about 40 young ones doing well.

Mr. Handley: I can't understand Messrs. Hadwin and Walker only using one egg a day. I like to make my egg-food much stronger.—Mr. Hadwin: I have been accused very often of making bread and egg, not egg and bread, but I find the young ones are strong and well nourished, and take this to be the best guide.

Mr. Green: I have had an unfortunate experience with bread and milk, having lost the young ones I gave it to. I am having good results with egg-food made with bread.

Mr. Bretherton: I never had any use for bread and milk. The Germans don't feed on egg-food; they use only rape seed and bread. I don't use much egg-food. Some of my birds have had none at all. Neither do I use green food. I prefer toast. Athletes train very largely on toast. A friend of mine has been using dog biscuits, but has been disgusted.

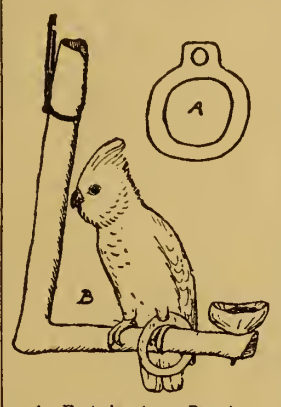
Mr. Handley: How does Mr. Hadwin make his egg-food?—To one egg I add a thick slice of bread (grated), a tablespoonful of maw seed, and two tablespoonfuls of sugar, making about a pint altogether.

Mr. Shepherd: I consider bread very nourishing. I use 8ozs. of bread to one egg after the first few days, when feeding young.—Mr. Brenner: Some years ago I used very strong egg-food, with bad results. Now I use one egg a day with biscuits, and find it sufficient for 40 birds without waste. I use watercress because it is more easily got fresh in a town than any other green food; I put the stalks only in water, and find the water does not get stale as when the whole green food is put in water.

Mr. Hadwin said he liked to keep his watercress under the tap with a constant drip. Mr. Shepherd spoke of the pleasure it had given him to be once more amongst the Liverpool fanciers, and he would tell the Northerners how he had got on. The chairman very regretfully moved the closure on account of time.

ORNITHOLOGICAL ODDMENTS.

By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S.



Author of "The World's Birds."

Anchoring a Parrot.

The other day there arrived at the Zoo a rare Lory, still wearing on its foot the rudely-cut wooden ring by which its primitive owners had kept it fastened to a perch. This ring was of the form shown in the sketch; the bird's foot is pressed through the small hole at the top—which can be done by pressing the back-toes up against the shank and working the whole foot through the hole in this way—and the larger circle which forms most of the ring plays round the perch. In another drawing of a Cockatoo thus fastened I have tried to show how the thing works, but the Cockatoo is wearing, as I have seen them wear in the East, the whole circumference of a cocoa-nut shell as a ring, while his foot is pressed through a small hole made in the breadth of the hoop itself, not in a projecting flange, as on the Lory's ring.

A Clever Device.

Like so many dodges of primitive man, this is an excellent plan for attaining its object—that of keeping the parrot attached. That the poor bird can take but little exercise does not trouble the savage fancier any more than it does those among ourselves who keep Linnets in six by four inch cages. All the fettered parrot can do is to move along its perch, or turn round under it, this being allowed by the play of the big ring on the perch, while the foot can turn freely in the little hole, and so allows the bird to turn round from back to front. A forked branch is selected for the perch, so that the bird sits on one arm, while to the other arm a cord is tied, out of reach of the captive's bill, by which the whole concern can be suspended. A half cocoanut shell, pegged on to the end of the bird's arm of the perch, secured the ring from slipping off at that end, and serves as a receptacle for food.

A: Foot-ring for a Parrot.
B: Polly at anchor.

Sometimes a T-shaped perch is used, and a bird "anchored" to each arm of the inverted T, which is hung up by the centre stem. In this way hundreds of Lories and Cockatoos are brought to Calcutta from the isles of the Far East, even down as far as New Guinea; in fact, I think Calcutta is one of the best places in the world for picking up rare specimens of this favourite tribe of cage birds.

A Cage Bird Census.

The recent voting competition in CAGE BIRDS as to the most popular cage bird interested me very much, but I don't think the results, though they showed how the various species may stand in fanciers' estimation, give one altogether a correct idea of the estimation of our various cage birds by the public at large. Judging from what one sees in walking about most towns and observing the cages in windows, or hung outside, I should say the most popular cage birds with the "man in the street" are as follows:—Canary, an easy first; Linnets, a good second; Parrot—grey African or blue-fronted Amazon, as a rule—third; Skylark, fourth: Chaffinch, fifth; Thrush or Blackbird, sixth; all others are quite rare by comparison, though a good many Goldfinches are kept. The Chaffinch might, perhaps, stand next to the Linnet in London, but not in most other places I have been in; and the Linnet itself is not usually so popular outside the metropolis as within it, though no doubt in the big manufacturing towns a great many are kept, as it is certainly the working man's favourite.

British Talkers Barred.

It is curious how our native talking birds have dropped out; comparatively seldom does one see a caged Jay, Magpie, or Jackdaw, and hardly ever a Starling. Yet once these were all common pets; I suppose the reason why Parrots have taken their place is because they are the easiest of all cage birds to keep—if we had a British Parrot there would not be much chance for the wide sale of many foreign kinds. In India the native ring-necked Parrakeet is certainly far the commonest of cage birds, though it is in many cases not a cage bird in the literal sense, being as often chained to a swing as kept in a cage. The commonest ring-neck kept is the ordinary small one, which is the most widely-distributed kind; but the large "rock parrot"—the bigger ring-neck with the red patch on the wing—is also often seen.

Getting Indian Parrots.

The other day I saw at a dealer's one of these "rock parrots," which was quite young, as shown by its dark eye, the eye not becoming white till the bird is full-grown. Yet these young dark-eyed birds are very rarely imported, although cages full of young birds of both the small and large species are constantly to be seen in the Calcutta market at this time of the year, and it would be quite easy for a dealer to import quantities of them. Being tame and teachable, they ought to command a very fair price, and well repay the outlay for their importation. The name "Rock-parrot," by the way, gives rather a misleading impression, as the bird is not a rock-frequenting species; it does, however, frequent the mountainous or hilly parts of India more than the common species, so that the name is really meant for "Mountain-Parret" probably.

Australian Favourites.

A friend of mine who has recently returned from Australia tells me that the favourite talking birds there are the Rose-breasted Cockatoo—or "Galah," to give it its Australian name—and the Cockatiel. We certainly do not hear much of these birds as talkers over here, but this is no doubt because they are imported as adult wild-caught birds, while in their own country they naturally can be got hand-reared.

It would be quite easy for anyone who bred Cockatiels and had the time to hand-rear a few, to start a profitable line in this way. I fancy a pet Cockatiel would be looked upon with extra pride by its owner if he could inform his friends that it had been bred in England, for few people outside the Fancy know that any kind of Parrot ever breeds in this country. The Cockatiel, too, possesses the rare—one may perhaps say unique—character among Parrots of being usually harmless to smaller birds confined along with it, so that it may be kept by those who are fond of the finches and other ordinary cage birds, without upsetting the peace of an aviary.

THE BIRD LOVER'S LIBRARY.

British Birds for Cages, Aviaries and Exhibition.

By S. W. Birchley, Manchester: Sherratt and Hughes. 2 vols. 25s. net.

The latest British bird book by S. W. Birchley is published in two rather bulky volumes. It deals with all the birds met with upon the show bench, including such rarieties as the Woodchat, Shrike, Golden Oriole (for some reason here spelt "Oriel"), Hoopoe, and others, in all seventy-two species. A very useful reference list of summer migrants with their winter quarters and times of arrival in this country is added, among which is by error included the Stonechat, a bird that may frequently be met with upon our commons and fields in the dead of winter.

The first volume contains a very exhaustive chapter upon seeds and foods, the breeding of mealworms and the collecting of insect life generally. The feeding of each bird is dealt with in the chapter devoted to the species, and we notice the author greatly favours barley meal in many cases as a stock food; which is somewhat contrary to the methods of most bird-keepers, who consider this meal too heating and inclined to turn sour.

A full chapter is given upon each bird, and is arranged in the following manner: Description of parent birds, habitation, nest and eggs, country side notes, catching, steadying, "meteing" off (generally, and surely correctly, written "meating" off), and general feeding, hand-rearing, exhibition, and attractive qualities. The paragraphs upon meating off and general feeding will be most useful to bird-keepers, being written by one who has had the majority of the species through his hands.

The countryside notes are attractive reading, and show that the author has used both his eyes and ears in his rambles through fields and woods. Some idea of his style may be gathered from the following, taken from the chapter on the Wheatear:—"See him as he sits on a fence or gate post, with his tail for ever partly spread and waving up and down, showing distinctly his pure white rump, at the same time his intelligent eye ever on the look out for passing fly or insect, which for the most part are what he exists on."

The soft-bill section is handled better than that devoted to the Finches and Buntings, some of the hints given upon hand-rearing being worthy the attention of experienced bird-keepers. The author does not recommend the hand-rearing of any of the Finches and Buntings, but as many of these birds are annually reared by hand, and under Canaries, we think a few hints should have been included in a book purporting to deal with the subject in an exhaustive manner. The same remark applies to the best methods of moulting birds intended for exhibition, as different species require different treatment, and experts in this direction are generally found in the list of successful exhibitors.

The bird-room, cages, aviaries, and bird-room requisites form a considerable portion of the second volume, which is profusely illustrated by full-page line drawings of cages, drinkers, perches, etc. Some of them are so well known that they hardly required the prominence afforded them. A whole page, for instance, for a single perch or a tin drinker appears to be somewhat overdoing it.

A full-page illustration in line and wash, or photograph, is given of every species of bird dealt with. These vary much in excellence, the best in the book probably being the photograph of Mr. Maxwell's Tree Creeper.

To the amateurs and novices who can afford the work, it will be of great assistance, as on account of its method of arrangement it is rendered easy for reference purposes; and should a strange specimen of a bird come to hand they would at once know how to treat it. The best method of getting such a bird steady; the proper shape and size of cage for it; these he will learn, and he will gather from the description given if his capture is likely to win honours upon the show bench.

The Making of Species.

By Douglas Dewar, I.C.S., and Frank Finn. London: John Lane, 7s. 6d.

The present year being the Darwin centenary is certain to produce a full crop of books on the evolution theory, and among these the present work will certainly not be the least talked-of, for it is the result of the efforts of a very strong combination, both authors being well-known naturalists, and fully accustomed to putting their ideas and observations into popular form.

The work opens with a fearlessly critical exposition of the state of the evolution hypothesis to-day, and many venerable text-book theories of mimicry, protective colouration, etc., find themselves very roughly handled by the authors who have had the advantage of studying nature at first hand in India, where wild life is so much more abundant and varied than it is here. Aviculturists will find the volume of peculiar interest, for while most books on evolution since Darwin's great works have dealt largely with insects and other comparatively unfamiliar creatures, Messrs. Dewar and Finn have selected birds as their main sources of argument and example, and hence their views are far more readily understood than would otherwise have been the case.

The chapter on the Mendelian theory, which has been so much before the public of late, and that on the theory of mutations, are well worthy of careful study by breeders, who should also pay attention to the new hypotheses of "biological molecules" as explaining variation, set forth in the book. A very full account is given of the phenomena of hybridism, which ought to lay finally to rest some venerable fallacies on this subject

Very important also is the chapter which deals with correlation, showing how certain colours go along with definite mental constitutional pecularities, a branch of the subject which has received very little study since Darwin's day, though of the highest scientific and practical interest.

The book is written in a remarkably clear and incisive style, and the authors are unsparing in their condemnation of theorising cabinet naturalists, who endeavour to frame interpretations of nature's ways and wonder from imagination rather than investigation of the facts. One special point they aim at making is that neither domestic breeds nor wild species arise by the adding up of minute variations indefinitely occurring in every direction, but by well-defined "mutations," or sports, and with this no breeder of experience is likely to quarrel; they support, in fact, the views of Professor Bateson on this subject, and at the same time they point out that natural selection is not so simple as it looks—that creatures have to contend more against climate than against enemies, and that a good constitution or a versatile intelligence is probably a far more useful asset in the struggle for existence than much of the "protective colouration" of which we are always hearing. It is also pointed out that there are serious difficulties in accepting fully the theory of the improvement of male birds' colours by sexual selection; in many cases the evidence tends to show that sex-difference may occur from quite other causes, and that male birds may at times be in the happy position of being able to select the hens.

So wide, indeed, is the field covered by the book that it is impossible to give a fair idea of its scope and contents without extending this review to an undue length, so we must content ourselves with here saying that it is one which ought to be in the library of every fancier who aims to find out a scientific reason for the phenomena of bird-life which he makes it his business or recreation to study.

QUEEN'S PARK (Glasgow).

Annual First Feather Show, held in Marie Stuart Hall, Crosshill, June 26th. Mr. Smeaton, Prestonpans, judged, and gave general satisfaction. The entries, for a club, a few months old, came up exceedingly well, totalling nearly 100 birds, and the opinion of the many experienced fanciers who visited the show was that the birds were of all-round creditable quality. The only drawback the show had was the smallness of hall, visitors being more numerous than was anticipated. The prize for best bird in hall was won by Mr. Rennie, Catheart, with yellow hen.

COVENTRY O.S.

The 29th annual Nest Feather Show was held on July 3rd, at headquarters, Sydenham Palace. The entries were in advance of those of previous years, and the birds exhibited, taken as a whole, were of nice average quality. A few good birds, which formed an attraction, were shown in the British bird and Mule classes. Mr, C. H. Walton (Leicester) judged, and his awards gave satisfaction.

ROTHERHAM C.B.S.

Nest Feather Show of Canaries and Mules and of British birds was held on July 3rd. Mr. Webster judged. It was the best show held for years. There were not a large number of entries, but some grand birds were put down.

CLASS 1: 1, 3, Bagnell; 2, 4, Cakes. CLASS 2: 1, 2, Bagnell, both good ones, should be heard of again; 3, Cakes, grand young bird, well shown. CLASS 3: 1, Cakes, smart and long; 2, 3, Waker, good type. CLASS 4: 1, 3, Brotherton, both nice birds; 2, Waker, very smart, and all a Yorkie. CLASS 5: 1, 3, Pickup; 2, 4, Kirk. DULWICH O.S.

Young Bird Show held at headquarters, July 1st. The members on the whole have had poor breeding results, and it was not, therefore, surprising that the entry was not a large one, especially as on this occasion the fixture was only for Canarics and Mules. The number of entries was over 30, however, Norwich being the strongest section. Messrs. Rogers and Mazzoni won special for best bird in show in this section. The judge was Mr. J. Robson. The runner-up for the special was Mr. A. Rees, a novice. Yorks were not strong, but the winning yellow, who won special for best in novice section (bred by Mr. H. Pallett), was a typical specimen and ran third in show. Mules were a grand class. The winner was a large Goldfinch-Canary, quite a baby, and was bred by Messrs. Rogers and Mazzoni. The other prize winners were Messrs. Pallett, Rees, and Woolhouse. The medal for most points in champions was won by Messrs. Rogers and Mazzoni, and that for novice section by Mr. Pallett. There was a good attendance, and altogether a very fine show was seen. The show managers were Messrs. Woolhouse and Rogers, who carried out their duties to the satisfaction of all. —S. J. KENT, Hon. Sec.

BOOTLE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual Nest Feather Show held July 3rd, in the St. Matthew's Parochial Hall. Over 100 birds turned up, and among these were to be seen some very smart Yorkshires and Yorkshire Greens, most of the exhibits being above average merit. The novices put down some fine young birds, and the ticked buff Yorkshire which won the cup for best Canary bred by exhibitor is a really smart one, and the novice, Mr. J. Young, is to be complimented upon being able to win the cup over all sections, beating all the older hands to-day. Mr. A. Holden's ticked buff Yorks. in the champion section was runner-up. The yellows, both Yorkshires and Yorkshire Greens, apart from these two outstanding buffs, were far stronger in numbers and quality than the buffs, and Bootle are strong in yellows in both sections. Norwich, Mules, etc., were few in number, but nice in quality. A very good list of cash and other specials, including the cup, made competition well worth entering into. Mr. J. Hunt, the secretary, is backed up by a strong body of officials and members, and carries out his duties in a most able manner. Mr. Chas. Houlton judged, and appeared to give great satisfaction. We understand the Bootle members are eagerly looking forward to the next "Amalgamated" show, which they hope to conduct and make a great success.

YORKS. CL. YEL. Special prize winners:—Best Nor., F. Chorley; best novice, green foul, A. Holden; best Mule or Brit., A. Horne; best green, fed on Blackledge's seeds, J. Rimmer; cup, best Canary, J. Young.

SOUTHALL C.B.S.

This newly-formed society held its initial First Feather Show at the Church Schools on July 5th, and the members are to be congratulated upon the quality of the exhibits staged. The winning Yorkshires were all birds of distinct promise, being very shapely and of good style; the Norwich also were a typical lot. In the British the Goldfinches were a grand feathered lot, whilst the Bramblefinch who led the way in the A.O.S. class was a gem for marking, colour, and feather; a grand-coloured Greenfinch came second. The birds were nicely staged, and much interest was shown in the fixture by the members. The arrangements were well carried out by Mr. H. J. Hireson, the treasurer, in the absence of Mr. T. G. Jeffrey, who was away on his holidays. The society has made a good start, and should do much to increase the interest felt in cage bird matters in West Middlesex. Mr. C. A. House judged, and afterwards lectured to the members and visitors upon the birds shown.

OLDHAM AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

First Feather Show held at headquarters, the Textile Dining Rooms, Shaw-road, on July 3rd. The entries did not come quite up to expectations, as the breeding season in this district has not been very satisfactory. Still, there were some promising youngsters staged in the Norwich, Yorkshires and Lizard sections. Mr. F. Steeple took honours for best bird in show, Mr. E. Lowe the 2nd, and Mr. J. S. Addisson the 3rd. The attendance at the show was a record one. Mr. W. Hardy, of Oldham, placed the awards, which gave every satisfaction.

STOCKSBRIDGE AND DIS. C.B.S.

The First Feather Show was held July 3rd. Although the society has only been in existence since March last, the membership has grown rapidly. Unfortunately, owing to the terrible weather experienced during the early part of the breeding season, the number of birds staged (65) was rather low, but the standard of excellence in several exhibits showed that, given a good moult, the Stocksbridge birds will be heard of later. Mr. Morgan Gregory judged and gave every satisfaction. The winners of 1, 2, 3, most points respectively, were Alf Jarvis, Messrs. Micklethwaite and Wormleighton, and R. Howe. Messrs. Micklethwaite and Wormleighton won special for best Yorkshire in show.

BOLTON WOODS C.B.S.

Second show of Canaries in first feather was held at headquarters, Victoria Hotel, on July 3rd. Mr. C. Whiting, of Bradford, placed the cards. There were 7 classes, and 40 birds staged, of splendid type and quality. Dykes was again to the front with the highest number of points, making 16 cup points, 3 highest birds only to count. The first 3 in running for the challenge cup are as follows: L. Dykes, 35 points; W. C. Broomfield, 27 points; and M. Skirrow, 23 points.

CL. YELL.: 1, C. Whittaker; 2, J. Boocock; 3, H. Bryant; 4, E. Shepherd; vhc, E. Goodwin; hc, L. Dykes; c, J. Hutton: a very keen class, all exceptionally good birds. KINCORN C.B.S.

A successful Nest Feather Table Show was held at the headquarters (Lea's Temperance Hotel) on 2nd July. Mr. W. H. Cawley judged, and the placing of the awards, without exception, satisfied the most critical. A good attendance put in an appearance. Upwards of 40 exhibits were on view, and but for the bad luck experienced by some members during the early part of the season, more would have been on view. The quality and type were good throughout.

CARLISLE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

The first of a series of three nest feather shows was held in the stock room of Viaduct Temperance Hotel, on July 1st, when about 60 exhibits were put down for exhibition, competition being keen in some of the classes, in the Borders especially. There was a good muster of fanciers, some even attending from Wigton 12 miles distant. Everything passed off very satisfactorily, so the committee had every right to be pleased with themselves. Mr. J. Dixon (Wigton) judged, and all were satisfied with his awards.

SHEFFIELD AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual Nest Feather Show, held on July 3rd, in Wycliffe Hall, Hillsboro'. Considering the complaints received from members as regards their having so poor a season, a goodly number of young birds (over 200) were staged. Mr. G. Browning adjudicated and his awards were received with satisfaction. Messrs. Lindsay and Bingham, the secretaries, assisted by Messrs. Furness, C. Bradhaw, G. Drabble, G. Binge, and C. E. Booth conducted the show satisfactorily. Mr. Walsh's Softbills were a very pleasing feature of the show.

COLOUR-FEEDING MADE EASY

BY

FOX'S

"Egg, Biscuit & Colour Food."

A combination of our renowned "Egg & Biscuit" with the finest red tasteless pepper it is possible to obtain.

Advantages :—

IT IS PREPARED READY FOR IMMEDIATE USE.

No mixing of the pepper with oil, or sugar, or egg and biscuit. Consequently no worry for the fancier. All he has to do is to mix our "Egg, Biscuit and Colour Food" with a few drops of water, and give it to the birds. THE FOOD DOES THE REST. By giving our food in this simple manner, and observing the ordinary rules of moulting, Canaries and other kinds of birds will come out with that lovely rich, bright, orange-red colour, so essential to success on the show-bench, and which adds so much to the value of the birds for purposes of sale.

IT IS A PERFECT FOOD.

Our "Egg, Biscuit and Colour Food" is a perfect food. It contains all the nutrient properties of home-made egg food, with the advantage of having them in an easily assimilable form. Birds may have this food without affecting their livers, or causing them to go "soft." If birds get no seed at all, they will still be perfectly fed.

IT IS CHEAP.

The complaint of the average fancier is "the colour feeding is very expensive." Our "Egg, Biscuit and Colour Food" MAKES COLOUR-FEEDING CHEAP. A one-pound tin costs but one shilling, and there is no waste, remember, and no fear of its turning sour and so endangering the lives of the birds.

Ask your corn or seed merchant for a tin of

Fox's "Egg, Biscuit & Colour Food."

Can be obtained from all leading traders in the United Kingdom at 6d. and 1/- per tin. There is a saving in the larger size.

Our other Leading Lines:

FOX'S "Egg and Biscuit."
The CORRECT Food. Egg is admittedly the essential diet for successful breeding and SUBSTITUTES will not give the same results. 6d. and 1s. tins, post paid 7½d. and 1s. 3d.

FOX'S "Insectivorous Food."
A highly nutritious and superior quality food for the delicate and smaller species of soft-bills. 6d. and 1s. tins, post paid 9d. and 1s. 4d.

FOX'S "Lark Food."
A cheap food of superior quality for larks, blackbirds, thrushes, etc. In 1½d. and 3d. packets, weighing approximately ½lb. and 1lb. respectively.

FOX'S "Mixed Bird Seeds."
A mixture containing all the necessary seeds of the very finest quality in the correct proportions. In 1d., 2d., 3d. and 6d. packets.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following Conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds." 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Slipped Hind Toe.

"Anxious."—In putting the bird into a cage with no perches, and compelling it to remain on floor continually, you have done the worst possible thing for remedying the slipped hind toe. Had you put it in a cage with thin round perches it would have been a far more effectual remedy, and might have quite cured the condition without further interference. Now, you had better put on a rubber ring, as frequently described here, for a fortnight or three weeks. At the same time, put it in a moderate-sized cage with ordinary-sized perches. When you remove the ring, take out the perches, and put in thin ones, almost round, and about the size of an ordinary lead pencil. You will doubtless find that the bird will not settle down to rest on these perches until the hind toe is over the back of the perch, for the simple reason that it cannot comfortably settle down with it otherwise, whilst a few efforts almost invariably enable it to get the claw in its proper position. The cure then takes place automatically, so to speak. It is not necessary or advisable to lash the hind toe close up to the back of leg. If you use a bit of rubber tubing off a feeding bottle, as advised, you will find it leaves a little space between the toe and the leg, which is much better than binding them close together.

Moulting and Feeding.

Kilda.—The marks you describe are simply due to soiled plumage, and when the dirt gets in the feathers in this way nothing short of proper hand-washing will remove it. You say the bird bathes daily. Does it do this by bathing in its drinker? If so, this will only intensify the condition, and you must give it a proper bath inside its cage or hung on the doorway. The slight improvement recently noticeable is due to the bird moulting. The marks will disappear altogether by the end of the moult, but will soon re-appear unless you see that it bathes properly, and is not exposed to dirt, or in a soiled cage. Colour feeding would have no effect whatever upon this soiled condition, and as the bird has already made some progress with its moult, it is too late to commence feeding, with any chance of seeing the bird properly fed this year. Still, if you wish to try, you will find full particulars for doing so in another reply this week. It is not necessary to buy a pound of colour for one bird. You should get enough for sixpence for your purpose anywhere, or the egg and colour food would do. I cannot advise you to add cayenne to the egg food for the purpose. It would accomplish your object without doubt; but think of the bird.

Proposed Aviary.

"Beginner."—I'm afraid I cannot hold out much hope of your succeeding any better in your plans as they stand than you have done with breeding in cages. Indeed, unless you give up the idea of keeping a mixture of foreign birds and Canaries in an aviary of the size you name, failure is practically certain. You would stand the best chance by turning in two or three hen Canaries and one cock, and allowing them to fly loose, hanging at least half a dozen nesting boxes about. The only other scheme I would advise would be to put in three or four hen Canaries, and two or three cock Finches say, a Linnet, Siskin, and Goldfinch, but not a Greenfinch—and throw your chances in with Mule breeding. There appears no door in the aviary large enough to admit even a person's head and shoulders, which would be quite necessary to enable anyone to reach all parts of it for cleaning, whitewashing, etc. I therefore suggest that you dispense with the two small doors at one end, and the proposed floor between them to enable you to make a door treble the size of those shown and occupying the same position as these two and the intervening space. Then you could insert a small door in the centre of the larger one for regular use in feeding, etc., leaving you with the larger door for use only on special occasions. Each end should be boarded, and a group of about six half-inch holes bored at each end near the ridge of the roof to ventilate, or let off the foul air, from the top. Board the front for two feet at one end, and omit the boarding from the opposite end.

Preparing for the Future.

"Undaunted."—Am sorry to hear of your failure, but trust your determination to make a good try for success next year will be amply rewarded. Had you given an account of your present stock, and said in what respect that had failed, I should have been the better able to help you. As it is, I can only ignore the existence of your present stock, and advise you to start with either one or two trios, each consisting of a cock and two hens, the cock to be worked with each hen alternately next breeding season. Whether you begin with one or with two trios must depend upon the class of birds you desire, and the amount you are willing to expend. If you want a fairly good class of show bird you would do best to start with one trio if your funds are limited, and put all you can into that, which might run to anything from £3 upwards. If, however, you are not particular about breeding show birds, two trios of very decent birds might be had for 30s. per trio. From the beginning of December to end of January would be a very good time to buy, when the moult is well past, and many breeders are clearing out surplus stock. If you have only one trio, let the hens be 1909 bred, early hatched, if possible, and the cock 1908 or 1907, but not older than 1907, as you may perhaps require his services for a few years. If you have two trios, let one be composed as above, and the other of a 1909 cock and two 1908 hens, or one 1909 and one 1908. I would not advise you to begin with hens any older than 1908.

Feeding on Saffron.

J. Brown.—Your friends who told you to feed your birds on saffron in order to obtain that deep yellow colour you so much admire and want to see on your birds, are a few decades behind the times. Years ago, when colour-feeding was in its infancy and little understood, this substance was sometimes employed, but its colour-producing powers are weak, and the results obtained very unstable. As colour-feeding goes in these days, it would be quite impossible to feed with saffron to compete with it. In order to carry out your purpose, get a pound of the best tasteless red pepper from any vendor whose advertisements you see in our columns, add three ounces of soft sugar, and if you so desire you may also add one or two ounces of the best hot Natal and thoroughly mix and blend all together. This is the colour-food. Just before you expect the birds to drop into moult, begin to give a little egg food daily, in each half teacupful of which you have previously well mixed a good teaspoonful of the colour-food. As soon as the birds begin to drop feathers gradually increase the proportion of colour-feed in the egg food to double the above quantity, and use it regularly every day at this strength until the birds are nearly through the moult, when you again decrease the colour to the original proportion, and continue giving it at that strength for a week or two after the birds appear to be perfectly fine in feather again. You will then have the satisfaction of seeing your birds come out of the moult with that richness of colour you desire.

Improving Crest.

A Constant Reader.—It is not unlikely your young birds will improve considerably during the moult, and ultimately make up into quite different looking specimens as regards quality and substance of feather. Indeed, judging from all you say, I should rather expect this to be the case. For next year's breeding operations you should get about one-third of your stock yellow, as you appear to have got a little too far away from this colour. This will enable you roughly to have two-thirds of your breeding pairs composed of yellow to buff, and the remainder double buffs. Get all the cocks with plenty of size and substance, and do not mind if the hens are only of moderate size so long as they are good in other typical points, and have as much feather as possible. Pay particular attention to getting the Crestbreds with plenty of dense headgear and correctly-shaped heads, that is,. large dome-shaped skulls, short thick beaks, and a good wide entrance at base of beak. You would have done better to have used a half-bred Lancashire cock this year instead of a quarter-bred one. As you still complain of want of size in the progeny, I should imagine this bird was not a well-selected one for your purpose. Next season mate him with a heavily variegated or green Crest of the same strain as your other Crests, and the greatest amount of crest and body feather as you can command, and the year following mate the progeny up with your other Crests and Crestbreds, and also in this year go back to double-buffing the majority of your breeding stock.

Canary Querists should send to our publisher for "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d.; "Housa's Canary Manual," 1/2; and "Yorkshire Canaries," 1/-, post free.

Yorkshire in Bad Plumage.

F. F. Amos.—Your description leaves no room for doubt as to the cause of the bird's poor condition, which is the worrying attacks of red mite. You should well clean the cage whilst the bird is removed to a temporary one, then thoroughly saturate it with paraffin, using a paint brush for the purpose, and working it well into every joint and crevice, and place the cage outdoors to dry. As it is an all-wire cage, I expect it would bear being dried in the sun without injury, in which case this mode of drying will prove far more deadly to the "livestock" than drying in the shade. Repeat this operation two or three times, allowing an interval of one or two days between each. Then paint, or lacquer, and re-varnish, if necessary. Treat the place where the cage has hung in the same thorough manner. Whilst the bird is in the temporary cage, encourage it to bathe freely each day and add a few quassia chips to the water for the bath. As regards the food, an occasional scrap of fat boiled bacon for it to peck at would do no harm, but the less of such things it has, the better. Feed on a staple of three parts Canary to one part summer rape. Give a little crushed biscuit, sponge cake, or egg food, once or twice a week, and a few grains of hemp, linseed, inga, or a pinch of maw about as often, and a little green food in variety daily. Treated in this way, the bird should moult out in perfect feather. Glad to hear of your success through reading our paper.

About Borders.

Eye Marks.—If required as an improver of natural colour, I do not think there is very much to be gained by the use of saffron during the moult, because in my experience it is far too relaxing to be used in such strength as would be really serviceable for such a length of time. To help to break a bird into moult when it appears to require such assistance, a few shreds in the water for a week or so at a time, then missing a few days, is very useful, and a few drops of whisky added at the same time will help to counteract the laxative effect, and also stimulate the bird. To make the most of its natural colour, give plenty of nasturtium and marigold blooms, and a free supply of green food in variety throughout the moult, and about three times a week either add twenty drops of chemical food to its drinking water or give a little egg food or crushed sponge cake, to which add a slight dusting of saccharated carbonate of iron. Do not expose the bird to strong sunlight. I suspect its present condition is largely due to constipation. Give a pinch or rape every day, and half a teaspoonful of maw three times a week from now until the moult is well in progress. Give a spray of chickweed or groundsel daily. In the drinking water give twenty drops whisky and as much Epsom salts, two days in every three for a week, as will cover a sixpence, and for once only put two drops of warmed olive or castor oil in the vent.

Cinnamon Mysteries.

A. S.—You give me little idea in what direction you require help or enlightenment. The pink eye is a characteristic of the pure Cinnamon, and the Cinnamon possesses unique powers of reproducing its own peculiarities, and leaving traces of its influence on any variety with which it is crossed, which traces are apt to crop up unexpectedly in a variety of ways, even after all external trace of any cross has disappeared for a year or two. In such as the Yorkshire and Norwich, which have a fair amount of Cinnamon blood infused in them, either to build up the varieties marked with Cinnamon colour instead of the usual dark markings, or to improve feather, very unexpected results may often be looked for in breeding, and in these varieties a pink-eyed bird, even though it shows nothing but dark or green markings, has a greater or less proportion of cinnamon blood in its veins, and in all probability will breed birds with more or less cinnamon marked plumage. If you want to know what colour the pure cinnamon is, our manager could doubtless send you a coloured plate that would show you, and the standard of perfection in our ANNUAL would further elucidate it. As regards Cinnamon markings in other varieties, the standard of the variety in question remains quite unaltered, and you have only to imagine the usual dark markings replaced by the correct cinnamon colour. In the case of the Yorkshire, you will find the question of breeding and mating for Cinnamon marks dealt with in Mr. Battye's book on the "Yorkshire Canary." If this does not quite answer what you wish to know, write again and say just what it is you want to know.

Called Him Back Again.

A Novice Again.—Am glad to hear that CAGE BIRDS, which was given you, has rekindled the dormant fire and set you going again after 40 years' absence from its ranks. The best time to buy a trained Roller to ensure having a thoroughly well trained bird, would be about December; anyway, not earlier than November, as previous to this the young birds of the year can have but little testing and selection to weed out those whose quality and purity of song, are not firmly established. Of course, if you stipulate for a low-priced bird, you will, of a certainty, get one of these discarded specimens, no matter what time of the year you buy, or, on the other hand, a discarded tutor, that is of little or no further use for a schoolmaster, but which would still be a very nice songster for some time. It is just as well to remember that there is plenty of demand for the real cream of trained songsters at high prices in their native country, so there is little chance of such birds coming over here to be retailed at a cheap rate. As regards the cages, the birds will certainly sing more in an open wire cage, or one open at front and sides, than in a darkened one, but there is a risk of vigorous young birds putting too much energy into their song and assuming faulty notes when given too much light. This is the sole object of keeping the cage covered, or in a closed song box at times. As a go-between, I prefer a back cage open in front and sides only, and if the bird appears to be getting too high notes, cover the front over with a light cloth, which may be removed or drawn aside as occasion requires. The same treatment as frequently advised here for singing birds will suit them well, except that the staple mixture should consist of two parts Canary to one part summer rape.

Brevities.

Effect of Colour Feeding (J.H.).—No, certainly not. If you colour feed a pair intended for breeding with next season, provided you do it properly with sweet pepper, or mainly so, the process will not have the slightest detrimental effect upon the success of their breeding operations next year.

What Class? (H.D.).—Unless a class is provided for "foul or broken Cinnamons," you could only enter the bird in the Cinnamon class proper, and the foul feathers in wing will tell against it in competition with birds not having such blemishes. You cannot enter such a bird in a class for "Any other variety" so long as there is a Cinnamon class provided.

What Are They? (W. L. Westerman).—I can only guess from your remarks that you expected the young ones to be Linnets, and the fact that they have yellow in the wings instead of white makes it tolerably certain they are Greenfinches. As to whether they are worth keeping to breed with depends upon whether you are interested at all in Mule breeding. For this purpose they should prove useful on account of being so much tamer and steadier than wild caught specimens. If you are not interested in this branch of the hobby, why not offer the birds for sale in our advertisement columns instead of turning them adrift, which is scarcely a kind thing to do with birds reared in this way?

What are its Prospects? (A.B.C Boy).—I should say the bird is a lightly variegated one rather than uneven marked. Certainly, it would stand a chance of winning if good enough in other respects when exhibited in its proper class, which, without seeing the bird, I should say would be the one called "ticked or variegated," or any class which expressly includes these varieties. It is quite possible for such a bird to possess highly-developed typical points and to be, in a sense, a valuable bird, especially for breeding purposes, but as these ticks and patches of variegation are simply proof of the bird's failure to reach the ideal of clear or even-marks, other points being equal, the latter birds would naturally take precedence, and from an exhibition point of view would be the most valuable.

To Bring in Song (Novice).—The moulting season is now so close upon us that I think it very little use trying any special treatment to bring him into song. There is very little the matter with your feeding, but you should drop the inga and substitute a half teaspoonful of maw three times a week to help break the bird into moult. Give only a very few grains of hemp and not more than twice a week, and occasionally give a few grains of linseed when the moult is well in progress. Give a small piece of sponge cake moistened with sherry three times a week for the next two or three weeks. Are you sure the bird is a cock, or did it not sing before it was mated? Add half ripe plantain stalks and chickweed to the green food given.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Greenfinch Ailing.

Green Bird.—Your letter does not help me. Many things may make a bird go "puffy." He may have a cold, in which case you should withhold the bath, keep him in a cosy corner indoors, out of draughts, and give a cough mixture. On the other hand, it is quite likely he looks a little out of sorts owing to being about to drop into the moult. In this case there is nothing to worry about, for it is quite natural. You might stir a teaspoonful of Parrish's Chemical Food into its drinking water daily (two tablespoonfuls) using only a glass or pot vessel. Is he dropping any feathers about the cage? Again, he might merely be constipated, in which case a dose of sulphate of soda, or of Epsom salts, in his water (as much as will lie on a shilling) will put that right. Give him plenty of green food, chickweed, shepherd's-purse, and flowering groundsel tops. Give a little mixed niger and maw seeds daily, as a "tit-bit." But you will have to decide for yourself what it is that ails him; you give no particulars which assist me to form an opinion.

A Woodlark's Management.

W. Hobbs.—The Lark food should answer with the addition of the hard-boiled egg and some good quality ants' eggs. I can better recommend the mixture advised below, however. Woodlarks need to be well (generously) fed. A good stock cage can be made out of the usual type of Skylark cage (bow-fronted), one perch being placed in same (the bird likes a turf; and must also have a dust bath). The cage I myself like best is one of the pattern known as the "Lark runner" (only longer, and wider from front to back), with doors at each end, and a canvas ("false") roof. A large turf fits in at one end, a perch over the other (the "dust bath" end), and the food and water vessels hang on the front. Try this stock food: Powdered Osborne biscuit, five parts; best ants' eggs, and dried flies, two parts each; powdered silkworm pupæ one part; meat meal, half part, by measure. Take the quantity required of this, and mix it just crumbly moist with grated raw carrot, or finely chopped lettuce, watercress, or chickweed (use young leaves only), or cold boiled potato, varying it frequently and adding a little water (but only a few spots) if necessary. Woodlarks ought certainly to have a regular supply of live food—many droop for want of it. Many real good insectivorous stock foods are advertised in CAGE BIRDS every week. A little seed (especially Canary) should be given now and again; while crushed groats and coarse oatmeal are relished.

British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hard-bills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

A Good, Cheap Thrush Food.

Mrs. Throup.—The very cheapest satisfactory way of feeding Thrushes, Blackbirds, etc., is to get a bag of some good brand of chicken meal (without grit), or puppy meal, or dog meal, such as Spratt's, or Clarke's "Melox," from a corn dealer's, and use this softened with hot water, then mixed into some good maker's packet Thrush food (dry). The latter, used dry, will absorb any superfluous moisture; it should leave the finished food just crumbly moist. You will soon find the right quantity of each to use for the daily supply (it must be fresh daily), and find it very cheap, too. Variety is good, of course, and you should give some vegetable or green food with it frequently, such as grated raw carrot, or finely-chopped lettuce, chickweed, watercress, or other green food in season, or cold boiled potato. Vary them frequently, and add a teaspoonful of preserved egg flake, or half a hard-boiled egg, finely minced up, occasionally. Give some mealworms daily, and any other live insects you can lay hands on, also ripe fruit and berries frequently, and according to season. "Blackbeetles" are very much relished, likewise snails, by the Thrush tribe.

Colour-feeding Finches.

J. Cowans.—Respecting the colour-feeding of the Goldfinches, note the reply given "T. Brooks" this week. It is not easy, as I have often explained, to get Finches (Bramblefinches and Chaffinches, of course, included) to eat colour food made in the usual way—viz., with egg-bread. Most have to be "judiciously starved" on to it. There is a risk, of course, of their being upset and succumbing during the process. Some fanciers get over this difficulty by gradually accustoming the birds to eating ground-up seeds (canary, linseed, and maw, generally). Then, about the beginning or middle of July, they commence adding a little colour-feed, working up the strength by degrees. One or two large firms in the seed line sell seeds with the shells removed (some, I fancy, terming these "cooked seeds"), which, of course, can readily be treated with colour food. Both crushed and shelled seeds absorb the colouring agent quite well. A certain successful fancier of my acquaintance, with a liking for colour feeding Britishers (especially Bullfinches), uses crushed linseed only as a vehicle for conveying the pepper. You must experiment and find out which way, or ways, best meet your own case—there is no "royal road" as with Canaries, unless it be with hand-reared British birds. Most fanciers use red-feed (tasteless pepper). The quantity of colour food depends on the bird—a rich yellow Greenfinch would naturally need less than a dingier-coloured one. One in four ought to be the outside strength necessary; one in six or seven might suffice. Use your own judgment. In my opinion, an overfed British Finch is spoiled; and some birds, buffs, it is almost waste of time to try to colour-feed. They don't "take it" (the colour). If you keep insectivorous birds I can give you a good "tip"—cage one with your Finches. I have a Wagtail in my flight cage with some Finches I am giving a little colour-feed. Seeing the Wagtail feed, they soon go down to sample what he is eating, and are not long before they acquire a liking for insectivorous food; the rest is then easy. I put the food on a "feeding board," and mix some crushed seed with it. They pick up quite sufficient colour. Siskins come out quite "warm."

Feeding a Greenfinch.

L. H. Gibson.—You are quite right in dropping feeding the bird on hemp seed alone. Give a little only for a time (daily), but in a dish separate from the stock mixture. For the food of an adult Greenfinch the really important item is a daily feed of good, sound (full kernelled) sunflower (or half sunflower, half safflower) seed. This can either be offered in a separate dish, or placed among the stock mixture. The latter should be made up as follows: Canary and teazle, two pints each, summer rape, charlock, and linseed half a pint each. To this a pint each of sunflower and safflower could be added. Wild seed mixture, and some good maker's special packet Finch mixture, can be occasionally offered for a change, while sunflower heads (gathered from the garden), full of seed, thistle, and hardheads, seeding chickweed, groundsel, and shepherd's purse, should be freely given as in season. Your Greenfinch should flourish if fed in this way. Don't forget the bath.

Brevities.

Greenfinch Ailing (Greenie).—Give the bird a dose of saline medicine as advised "Greenbird" this week, adding a half-teaspoouful of brandy. It should have plenty of seeding green food to eat. Note reply given "L. H. Gibson."

Thistle and Teazle (Four Years' Reader).—The teazle is a wild plant, but not anything like so common as the thistle. It is cultivated commercially in some parts of England. Respecting the thistle seed, note reply given to "Beginner" last week.

Hawfinches in Aviary (H.J.).—Hawfinches have been bred in an outdoor aviary, but are not easy subjects. A fairly large and secluded place, well stocked with thick evergreens and bundles of pearsticks, would be likely to induce a couple to nest.

Preserving Ants' Eggs (A.G.F.).—Answered last week in the reply given to "Initials."

How Many Bullfinch-Canaries? (G. E. Jones).—I do not know that any Bullfinch-Canary Hybrids have been bred (that is, from cock Bullfinch and hen Canary). If you mean from the other way of mating, cock Canary to hen Bullfinch, then I should say that from 14 to 18 examples have been seen on the show bench; exactly how many have been bred, I cannot, of course, say.

Mule or Canary? (J.H.P.).—It certainly hardly seems possible for the bird to be a Cauary; but, really, so many of these "clear" Mules turn out to be actually Canaries that I am somewhat dubious. If you care to arrange to send it up to London for me to look at, I shall be pleased to give you a candid and disinterested opinion. It is curious the other fanciers should say that it is a Canary.

Blackbirds and Thrushes (J.H.H.).—The only sure way of sexing Thrushes is by the song; cock and hen are alike in plumage. In young Blackbirds the cocks are of a darker cast than the hens (by comparison), especially being blacker in the wing and tail feathers. The beak turns yellow towards the Spring. Young birds commence to "warble" soon after they can feed themselves, but rarely sing out well before the Spring-time.

A Mixture (In Doubt).—The mixture sent would answer very well for Linnets if a portion of teazle seed were added to it. Personally, however, I do not give them hemp as a regular thing, except when moulting. An aviary 5 by 3 by 2½ feet, would answer very well indeed for Hybrid breeding, providing the number of birds put in was strictly limited, and that no two individuals of the same species were included (an exception could be made in favour of hen Canaries, if you are thinking of using them).

Egg Food and Colour Food (T. Brooks).—I could not pass an opinion on the egg-food you mention. Judging by the reports one reads and hears about it, however, it ought to be entirely satisfactory. Personally, I believe in sticking to the bridge which has carried one over safely in the past. Whether Bullfinches should be colour-fed is a matter of taste, which the owner must decide. I certainly do not believe in colour-feeding Goldfinches; if pepper is given at all, it should be given after the moult—when they are "coming up in colour." See reply to "J. H." last week; and that given "J. Cowans" this week.

Feeding Young Chaffinch (Only a Novice).—The Canary-reared Chaffinches will eat practically any seed, but should be fed plainly. Hemp is not good for them, and should be given occasionally only; hence the Goldie mixture is not correct. All they want is Canary, rape, charlock, and teazle, and a little linseed and sunflower. Other seeds now and again as a treat. Live foods are appreciated, and good to give, especially during the moult—say, two or three mealworms daily, or a few flies, or live ants' eggs.

Young Blackbirds (Suffragette).—A method of well and cheaply feeding Thrushes and Blackbirds is given this week in another answer. Don't listen to people who advocate hemp seed, etc. I do not recommend keeping birds outdoors in a cage during all weathers; in my opinion it is cruel. The cage for a Blackbird should be of box pattern, about 30 inches long, 20 high, and 12 wide. If the roof is made slanting, and covered with some rainproof material (such as linoleum) showers in warm weather will do no harm.

Mr. Weston regrets to say that he has mislaid or lost a bundle of letters, etc., amongst them being several queries. Would the senders kindly repeat the latter?

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S. M.B.N.H.S., etc.

About Cardinals.

W.S., jun.—(1) The Grey Cardinal is hardy and fairly ready to nest. They are very unreliable as to rearing young. It is very improbable they would attempt to breed in a cage. (2) The distinctions are almost infinitesmal, but the hen has a narrower and more pointed beak than the male, and the grey plumage on the nape of her neck is slightly mottled or scaled with white. (3) A matter of opinion. The Green, Yellow-billed, Virginian, and Pope are all very handsome; it is a matter of individual taste to say which is the most handsome. Their principal diet is seed—Canary, millet, hemp, wheat, and sunflower seeds; they must have in addition liberal supplies of green food (lettuce, etc.), ripe fruit, and one or two mealworms or other insects per bird daily. (4) The cocks have a fair song (Grey, Pope, and Virginian are best), but it can hardly be called sustained. The song is not a lengthy one, but is rapidly repeated again and again. (5) Very difficult to rear in captivity, as the old birds in 99 cases out of 100 refuse to feed the young on anything but live food. But, situated as you are, you should be able to get a good supply of live ants' eggs (cocoons), gentles, beetles, caterpillars, spiders, etc., and if you can spare the time to supply these every hour, you will have a good prospect of rearing some young Cardinals.

Pulling Out His Feathers.

Parrot Lover.—These birds are mostly in the moult now, and this may be the case with yours. But the listlessness points, at any rate, to some slight indisposition. Every other day for a fortnight, providing its voidings do not become watery, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia to each ounce of the drinking water. Diet: Seed mixture, ripe fruit daily, such as banana, apple, orange, grapes, etc., according to taste, nuts and plain biscuit. Mix a little grit with its seed mixture and keep a piece of clean cuttlefish continually in cage. Spray it twice a week with quassia solution to make sure there are no parasites; if you have evidence or good grounds for suspecting these, rub in a little pyrethrum powder into the plumage, wherever the irritation seems greatest, and this should soon clear it of these pests. When you cease giving the magnesia, well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Do not give slops, messes, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever.

Parrot Still Pulling Feathers.

Nurse L.B.—I have carefully considered my former reply and cannot materially add thereto, save merely to emphasise the necessity of continuing the supply of Chemical Food and Dinneford's Magnesia as near the directions given as circumstances will permit. I would also draw attention again to the fact that ripe fruit should be given daily and such salads (green food) as it will readily take. Keep up also the use of the quassia solution and rub in (when the plumage is dry) a little pyretbrum powder, so as to get rid of any parasites there may be. The weather is now warm and genial and I should advise this bird being kept out of doors a good part of the day, choosing some position where it will be screened from a direct wind blowing through the cage. Feather pulling, when it once becomes a confirmed habit, is most difficult and tiresome to eradicate, but with perseverance, conditions can be very much improved even if a complete cure cannot be effected. However, I hope with your bird the cure will be complete, but improvement is mostly slow and will not be very noticeable I expect till after the moult, which is about due.

A Grey Laying Eggs in Cage.

J.A.R.—Such cases are not uncommon, but at the same time they are a great strain on captive birds, and the danger is egg binding. The indisposition of your bird is the result of this, but now the second egg has been laid there should be no further trouble. It would be a wise precaution to keep a lump of old mortar, in the cage of this bird, and also cuttlefish continuously. Its bowels should be kept well regulated. One teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia to each ounce of the drinking water, every third day, so long as the voidings are not watery, will suffice for this. When not giving the magnesia, well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food, and continue this till she is in condition again. I anticipate her indisposition will be but temporary; in the meantime, let her have all the fresh air possible without draught. You are rather fortunate to have escaped loss, as from your details she has evidently had difficulty in exuding the eggs, but I don't think you now need anticipate any further trouble. In case of similar symptoms in future, keep warm, supply as much green food and ripe fruit as it will take and promptly give a dose or two or the magnesia, which is very mild and cooling, and will leave no ill effects.

Foreign Bird Queriers will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

Brevities.

What Bird? ("Quong Sing").—1. This is either a Military Troupial or a Hangnest. 3. Troupial, Hangnest, or Tyrant; will give you a definite reply in next issue. 2 and 4. Supply Canary, millet, and a little hemp, green-food, and some good soft food mixture, and ripe fruit, also three or four mealworms or other insects per bird daily. I should be pleased to correspond with "Quong Sing" if he will write me, c/o Editor of this paper.

About Budgerigars (F.C.).—(1) I should not anticipate any ill effects from hops on the wires of aviary. Budgerigars, though destructive to plant life, are, as a rule, very dainty in the way of green food, favouring nothing to any extent save grass in flower and lettuce. They will strip a bush of leaves in a few hours and eat none of it, simply pull the leaves off and drop them to the ground. (2) The cere at the base of the upper mandible is blue in the male and brown in the female when they are in breeding condition. Apart from this, the distinctions are infinitesmal. You would find "Foreign Birds for Beginners" very helpful. 1/1 post free from "C. B." office.

What Cockatoo? (X.Y.Z.)—It is a Leadbeater, an Australian species, handsome and hardy. It is not one of the least attractive of the varied and gorgeous avifauna of the Antipodes. Diet: Seed mixture (see below), ripe fruit, nuts, boiled maize, plain biscuit, and green food, with regular supplies of grit, cuttlefish, and water. Note: Boiled maize only keeps fresh one day, and the food vessel must be kept strictly clean; boil the maize till the grain is soft; drain off all water and supply to the bird when cold. Seed mixture: Equal parts of rice in the husk, maize, hemp, wheat, dari, and sunflower seeds; well mix and keep a continuous supply in cage. Do not be tempted into giving tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food. A little boiled potato (without fat or grease of any kind) is appreciated by most, as is also a little plain sweet cake; but the latter should be given in strictly limited quantities.

PARK AND LAKE AVICULTURE.

Turtle Doves and Jays.

R. E. Watson.—Turtle Doves—the British wild species—seem not to be shown, and are not provided for at shows, which, I think, is a pity. Feed them on small grain, such as wheat, canary, and hemp, with a turf and some old mortar and rock-salt to pick at. Jays, at large shows, are classed along with Magpies and Choughs; at small ones, they have to take their chance with a mixed lot of Softbills in an A.O.V. class.

Quail Queries.

A.N.—1. Yes, an adult Quail is the size of a Thrush. 2. They are easy to sex; the hen's throat is plain white, and her breast speckled like a Lark's, while the cock's breast is plain cinnamon and his throat either all reddish brown, or, more commonly, has an anchor-shaped dark mark on a white or brown ground—it is never plain white. 3. This is equally easy; give Canary and millet, a turf to pick at, and insects when convenient; grit and some sand to dust in should not be forgotten. They drink, but do not bathe. 4. They have bred in captivity; but this is rare with the common Quail, though its foreign relatives breed readily enough. 5. If you are buying a cage, get a "lark runner," or take the perches out of a Canary breeding cage; they do not perch. But it is easy to extemporise a cage out of a box for these birds; it need not be high, but should be long, and have a good deep tray for plenty of sand.

GENERAL.

Answered by the Editor.

Alteration of Date (T. G. Jeffery).—Yes; the notice came too late, reaching us Thursday morning, whereas we go to press Wednesday morning. It shall have due attention this week.

Illustrated Ideas (A. T. Horrill).—We have already illustrated this food-vessel holder. (C. Palfreyman).—This perch-holder has been given.

Crest Show Cages (J. Arnold).—The Crested Canary Club has not, we believe, adopted a "standard" show cage. The usual size of a Crest show cage is 12 inches long by 10½ high by 5 wide, with ½-gauge wires. The front is bowed at the top. The Norwich Plainhead show cage is 12 long, 11 high, and 5 wide, with ½-inch gauge wires. Illustrations of them would be found in any cage-maker's catalogue.

Some Hints to Would-be Hybrid Breeders.

SIR,—In reply to "Colonist" as to what breed of Canary to use, I should advise him to use Norwich or German, or a Norwich-German cross, as he would find them good sitters and feeders. As to pairing them up, don't do this before April or the beginning of May, as that is soon enough to catch the British pairs.

WILLIAM LOVATT.

Should Unflighted Birds Have their Tails Drawn?

SIR,—May I trouble you for space to ask the above question? During the last show season or so we have found classes for unflighted birds. In the Norwich the birds have their nest tails; in the Yorkshires the greatest number do not have their nest tails in, and some have the long wing flights (not nest feathers). Should they be shown in the Unflighted or not? I hope to have the feeling of some of the Yorkshire fanciers on the subject.

A. W. P.

Noted for Singing and Breeding.

Some Rearing Feats.

SIR,—I think Canary breeders will agree that the German Canary is noted for two things, singing and prolific breeding. I have seen it stated in CAGE BIRDS that the little German is of no use as a feeder except for small varieties. I beg to differ, as I think the German has no equal, as the two following cases will show. Last year I had five young in one nest and four in the other, and they were 12 and 14 days old respectively. Now, the hen with four had a quarrel with the hen in the next compartment and injured herself between the wires so badly that I gave her up for lost. I have no chance to hand feed birds, and this is how I saved them. I got one of the old-fashioned wood nest boxes, put in a little hay and the nine young. The other hen was only 9 months old at the time, but she fed them until they got on milk-sop, and bonny birds they were. This year one of my hens died when she had three young four days old. I put them with another hen, and she has brought them up grand. The other week I visited a noted Hybrid breeder's bird-room, and the first thing I saw was four Goldfinch-Canary Mules being fed (on the perch) by a German hen. I remarked that this hen was the right bird in the right place. He agreed, and said that a Hybrid breeder without German hens was like a ship without a rudder. My advice to the novice who goes in for Mules is: Always have a few German hens on hand, then if you have luck to get fertile eggs you will have a good chance to rear them. Don't think because the German is a small bird she can't feed. The Titlark is a very small bird, yet can easily bring up a Cuckoo. The Cuckoo knows this, and selects the Titlark's nest before any other bird's.

JOHN CANNING.

A Word in Praise of the Goldfinch.

SIR,—The Goldfinch, or, as some call it, the Thistlefinch, is too well-known to need description. It is an elegantly formed and beautifully coloured bird, with a very sweet, natural song, and great power of imitation, and is therefore a universal favourite. No aviary would be at all complete without Master Goldie, and where only two or three birds are kept he is pretty sure to be one of the species. He is the great rival of the Canary in the affections of most bird fanciers, and it is difficult to decide which has the advantage as regard vocal powers. For tractability and the facility with it may be taught sundry amusing tricks, the Goldfinch, I imagine, is the superior bird. In its wild state its usual resorts are gardens, shrubberies and plantations. It builds a nest beautifully round and compact of moss, lichens, grass and other materials, and lines it with the down of thistle, seed, etc. The eggs, about five in number, are of a greyish blue, sparingly spotted with purplish grey or brown. The nest is placed at a considerable height from the ground, often in an apple or elder tree. Goldfinches do not feed their young on insects, but, like the purely granivorous birds, upon grain and seed moistened in the crop. When taken to be brought up by the hand young Goldies should be fed on white breadcrumbs soaked in milk and squeezed dry to a stiff paste; thus formed, let a little poppy or well-soaked rape seed be added. They require great attention. The full-grown birds may be fed on Canary, rape, poppy and other seeds. Some hemp seed may be given when the birds are breeding, and green food occasionally; at all times lettuce or cabbage leaves. Groundsel and watercress are most relished by them. I had one that would freely eat whatever came to the table, both meat and vegetable. The Goldfinch is a great eater, and will drive from the feeding trough other birds which attempt to approach it. Bird dealers divide Goldfinches into several varieties in this country, the chief being the speckled birds, which have a white spot under the throat. The Bastard White Throats have a streak of white half-way down, and the Whitethroats, or Cheverals, have the streak down to the breast. Before their first moult Goldies do not get the bright crimson hue on the face; they are therefore called Greypates, and these are the best birds to purchase if you have a good songster to place them under. These birds should not be kept in a bell-shaped cage, nor in any other in which the perches are very high, as they are apt to become giddy, or, as it is generally called, they get the "noddles." The best habitation for them is one about ten inches long and seven or eight wide, and the same height. They are not, generally speaking, very healthy, although I have seen them live from fourteen to eighteen years in confinement. Epilepsy is the disorder to which they are liable. They are often affected with inflamed and swollen eyes, which may be cured by an application of fresh butter. If allowed to indulge too freely in hemp seed, stupor and giddiness are sometimes the result. A diet of soaked lettuce and thistle seed will generally remove this. An occasional supply of this food will always contribute to the health of a Goldie which in old age becomes blind, and loses the bright red and yellow colour of its plumage. Of their attractive qualities I have perhaps said enough, yet another word on this subject. They may be taught to come and go at command, ring a bell, feign death, and do anything which a feathered performer can accomplish. They are exceedingly lively, and sing at all seasons of the year, except during the period of moulting.

P. HOPE.

A One-legged Yorkshire the Father of Six Youngsters.

SIR,—Being a reader of CAGE BIRDS for the past two years, I must say I have had very good luck, which I attribute to following the advice in "Questions and Answers." Last year was my first year as a breeder, and I had 22 young from one cock and two hens, and reared them all. This year, up to date, I have 14 young, six of these being from a Green Yorkshire cock with only one leg. I have never at any time seen such a thing mentioned in your paper, and I thought that if any readers possess such a bird (with one leg only), they may learn that it may be of some use to them. I have spoken to an old fancier friend of mine, and he says he would not have credited that it could have been of any use to put him up for breeding. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

F. C. COLLETT.

Trouble in the Yorkshire C.C. of Ireland.

SIR,—A committee meeting was held on July 8 at the Douglas Hotel. In the absence of Mr. Cloke, Mr. Sholedice occupied the chair. There were eight members present. A letter was read and considered satisfactory from Mr. Mundell, re judging our show. The Hon. Secretary was directed in future to send short reports of committee meetings to Fancy Press for the benefit of the country members. With reference to the requisition which appeared in last week's columns, the following resolution was proposed, seconded, and carried: "That inasmuch as the committee, who are entrusted by the rules with the management of the club, have, after mature consideration, already decided by a majority of six to two, on the very matters referred to, it is unreasonable, and even frivolous, to take up the time of the committee with further discussion, or the time of the members by a general meeting as suggested; and furthermore, the requisition is hereby rejected on the ground that this matter was dealt with at the annual general meeting and adopted." Some correspondence was held over till next meeting. This concluded the business.

NORWICH CANARIES

HOW TO BREED, MANAGE AND EXHIBIT

BY C. A. HOUSE.

The young fancier is told all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder, and as an exhibitor on the Show Bench. This work, which has been written in a plain, practical manner, contains much of untold value to lovers of the Norwich Canary.

The chapters on "Forming A Stud" and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book many times over.

Prize-money at Dulwich O.S. Annual Show.

SIR,—I was instructed by the Committee of the Warrington C.B.S. to write to the Secretary of the Dulwich O.S. concerning the prize money and special won by one of our members at their show held last November, he having wrote several times without receiving an acknowledgment. I have received no reply to my letter of June 26. If this is the way exhibitors are to be treated, there is little wonder that novices leave the Fancy. I notice that the Dulwich O.S. held a show on July 1st, and that it is said the prize money and specials were paid to the winners during the show. I think that before such reports appear in the Fancy Press, their old debts should be cleared up.

A Singing Skylark which Laid an Egg.

SIR,—As a lover of birds, may I ask your many readers through CAGE BIRDS if the following is a common occurrence? In the middle of November, 1908, I called upon a friend of mine and began talking about birds as usual. He asked me if I could find him a purchaser for a cock Lark and cage. Eventually I bought it. I may say that the Lark was hand-reared last season. It was a rather peculiar bird; it had white flights and a white tail, and a beautiful "top-knot." It was whistling when I bought it, and whistled through the winter. About a fortnight ago it stopped whistling, and I was wondering what was the matter. On June 29th I fetched it down to feed as usual, and what should I see but an egg lying on the sand in the cage! It has not laid since. I am wondering if any of your readers have ever had this occur with them. I wish your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, all the success it deserves.

The Song of the Linnet North and South.

SIR,—In answer to the Leeds, Blackburn, and Yorkshire Linnet fanciers, I think I am right in my statement as regards a pure Linnet song, which you can see. The Bristol fanciers have the same class of song as we have in London, and I don't see much to laugh at in that. If you read my mention of the song which I gave on July 3, you will see it consists of "weeting," "chowing," and "fearing," and I don't think anyone can find a better Linnet song than that. I have been in various parts of the country bird catching, but have never heard the Linnets do "peeing," "feeing," and "water blubber," which it is stated I might have done if I had gone to the Hartz mountains. I should think the proper name for this song in London would be "scriggleing" and "squirking." Of course, this class of song is used for bird catching by Londoners, but it is of no use for contest singing. I have no doubt but what they are good singers. There is one question I should like to ask: whether these birds have got their own wild song, or whether they are trained by some artificial instrument?

LONDON FANCIER.

The Allotting of the Southern Norwich P.C. Patronage.

SIR,—I am in receipt of the S.N.P.C. rule book for 1909, which also contains a list of the societies favoured with the club's patronage for the forthcoming season. In a very friendly way may I be allowed a little criticism on the method adopted by the committee in allotting the same? I am sure my fellow members will take it in this spirit. The society I am joint show manager of this year, the Dulwich O.S., has not been favoured. I do hope this will not be put down as the pith of my argument, or be considered the proverbial "sour grapes." I can assure them it is not the case, for I, in common with the other 14 members who belong to the D.O.S., bow to the decision of the committee, although, if numbers are taken into account, the D.O.S. must have had strong claims. I am afraid figures are, however, not considered, and this will be found to be my strong point. I do not mean to suggest unfairness on the part of the committee, but rather of over-anxiety to please everyone. To my mind the idea of distributing the patronage to towns which have no other claim except that they are in the limit restricted to the membership of the S.N.P.C. is entirely wrong. Would it not be more fair to give preference to those towns or district which show the best percentage of members? Then we should be conforming to rule 2 (a), viz., to advance the interests of members. London, I see by the list of names, supplies to the club quite two-thirds of its members. Therefore, my contention is that the metropolitan area should have two-thirds of the patronage. Next in number, I believe, come Surrey, Sussex, Kent, Plymouth and district and Essex in the order named. Following my line of argument, it is quite in order that Plymouth and Hastings should be favoured, and that also Surrey and the other counties mentioned should have chosen a show central for them. But what claims have Cheltenham and Swansea, for instance? Neither of these towns provides a single member of our club, nor does it support it in any way—in fact, we have only one member in all Wales. Now, this cannot be a case of if we help you we expect you to help us (although admittedly our good friends in these towns often do figure in the list of exhibitors at other shows, and I hope London fanciers will always support them). But I am now, of course, referring to the S.N.P.C. competitions. Perhaps the Secretary or a member of the Committee will enlighten me by stating the object of asking the members to send all these miles to towns which do not provide their quota of members. I quite understand that we want to advertise our favourite variety, the Norwich Plainhead, and it is well, say, to choose a district annually for working up the interests of the breed where it is little known (though methinks it will be hard to find one). The Border Specialist Clubs have done good service to their variety by adopting this course, but they would not dream of allotting their patronage haphazard. There is only one way, to my thinking, to endeavour to give satisfaction all round, and that is to obtain all applications for the club's support, and send them by circular to each member, stating how many London and Provincial clubs the committee require, and a recommendation for a centre like I mentioned above. A natural result would follow: Members would vote for their local society, and those shows it would be convenient for them to patronise. We should then get the proper feeling of our members, and it would be an incentive for those societies behind the times to induce their members to join the S.N.P.C. and help along the good work. I may be wrong, and if some more enlightened spirit of intelligence could expand the narrow limits for my feeble reasoning powers, I should feel grateful. At any rate, should my proposal meet with any favour I shall be pleased to make a proposition to this effect at the next annual general meeting. My object in writing now is to give members time to think it over, to enable me to reach them through the medium of your valuable columns, and, above all, in the best interests of the S.N.P.C., to which I have belonged since its formation.

Linnet Singing at Leeds.

Unvarnished Reports versus Bluff and Bounce.

SIR,—Will you kindly allow me space in CAGE BIRDS as regards the Whit-Monday contest held at the "King's Head," Shannon Street, Leeds. I asked if any one could enter a bird in that contest, and I was told only those who joined the club and paid up a week or two before the time could do so. I asked how much it was and they told me "8s. 6d. per bird." So, Mr. Secretary, I want you to answer me these questions: Supposing I had asked for you on Whit-Monday, and wanted to pay 8s. 6d. to be able to hang my bird, could I have hung my bird in that contest? Who, then, is in the right; and who is in the wrong? I will take the first gentleman he refers me to, viz., Mr. Topping, of Blackburn. I would like Mr. Topping's opinion on that contest. Supposing a gentleman had come 60 or 70 miles, could he hang his bird in the contest on Whit-Monday if he had not paid anything before, and was wanting to pay 8s. 6d. that day? Would he be allowed to sing his bird that day? I hope Mr Secretary and Mr. Topping will oblige by letting the readers of this paper know.

How to Moult Canary-reared Linnets.

SIR,—Could any of the readers of CAGE BIRDS give me any hints as to the best way of moulting Canary reared Linnets? I have a nest of four—three cocks and one hen—which have done exceptionally well up to now. I have heard such birds were very difficult to moult, so if anyone can help me over the trouble I shall feel very much obliged. Any other knowledge I possess about Canaries is almost entirely due to the perusal of your paper, CAGE BIRDS.

Turtle Doves in Yorkshire.

SIR,—The following is a copy of a cutting taken from the "York Herald":—Having read with much interest the correspondence in your columns re Turtle Doves in Scotland, I venture to send you these few notes, which (if you will kindly publish) will be highly interesting to many lovers of natural history. About a month ago the gamekeeper here noticed a bird shoot out from among some bushes overhanging a rocky place, and thinking it to be a Jay, shot at it and brought it down. On picking it up he discovered it was a bird of unusual beauty, but could not tell what it was, and gave it to Mr. Wm. Hutchinson (the noted rose grower), who brought it to me for identification. It turned out to be a very beautiful specimen (male) of the Turtle Dove. Mr. Hutchinson placed it in the hands of Mr. Allen, of York, taxidermist, and I learn that that gentleman has preserved and mounted the bird. Another instance of their presence in this neighbourhood may be recorded. A friend of mine, and a lover of birds, went for a ramble in a neighbouring wood, and on approaching a small spruce noticed a strange bird fly from a small nest made of twigs, but the flight was so rapid that he could not identify the bird. He took the trouble to return an hour later to the nest hoping to see the bird sitting, but discovered that the nest was forsaken, and contained two young birds, probably about eight days old, and quite cold. He took them home and placed them under a pair of Ring Doves, and the following day asked me to tell him what they were (as he took them to be the common wood pigeon or stock Dove); but I soon found out they were a pair of young Turtle Doves, and I am glad to say they are going on well under their foster parents. I have been a keen observer of birds and their habits all my life, but this is the first instance I have known of the Turtle Dove being found in this neighbourhood, and I trust this splendid specimen of the Dove species will multiply and escape the wiles of the collector and his gun, although no doubt this grand specimen was shot through ignorance and not through wantonness.

ALF. RUTTER.

The L. and P.O.S. and the "Weaker" Society.

SIR,—In answer to the writer who uses the nom de plume "Member of the L. and P.O.S.," I wish to say that if, by producing the official receipts, he is able to satisfy you, sir, that his subscriptions to the L.P.O.S. for the years 1908 and 1909, were paid prior to the appearance of his letter, then the questions contained therein will be readily answered by

H. E. TRINGHAM,
Hon. Sec. L.P.O.S.

SIR,—Your correspondent dismisses the whole of the remarks made by saying that they are "mere sentiment." If a request for straightforwardness and fair dealing is "mere sentiment," then I can assure your correspondent that the Fancy is built up on it, and that what he calls "sentiment," other men call "honesty." His request for a business-like statement is, in my opinion, a piece of confounded impudence. Here is a man who, after throwing mud from behind a fence, complains that he is not treated as a gentleman. If he wants his questions answered, let him go to his own committee and stop writing foolish letters. I say that he is ashamed to sign his name because it would expose his reason for writing these letters. If he will sign his next letter I will withdraw my remarks and apologise; if he does not, I do not think it is worth while replying to any more of his letters.

S. STEPHENS.

SIR,—The "Member of the L. and P.O.S." does not understand the ordinary courtesy expected from a member towards the officials of his society. Not being a member of the society mentioned myself, he surely did not expect me to answer questions that were obviously those that should be directed to his secretary and committee? If he reads my letter again he will note that I referred him to those gentlemen who, I am sure, will gratify his wishes. In the "Twitterings" columns of CAGE BIRDS, of July 10, he will read all that is necessary in regard to bowing oto the inevitable. Why not attend the next L. and P.O.S. meeting, which, to my mind, is the most straightforward thing to do? It will show, at any rate, some regard for the society, as his correspondence tends to show some incapacity on the part of the management. This means will secure for him the pleasure of not becoming notorious, in other words, still being able to hide his identity. He did not answer my question, which he alone can do, whether he is a member or not.

H. W. TOMSETT, D. and P. C.B.S.

SIR,—I readily admit that sentiment did enter largely into my letter of a fortnight ago. But then, I would respectfully submit that the Fancy, after all, is but a hobby—or at least it should be—and that as such it would naturally, like most other hobbies, be governed very largely by what your correspondent calls "sentiment." I would again state that I believe the gentlemen concerned in the movement for the proposed amalgamated show were actuated by better motives than mere mercenary ones; but at the same I feel convinced the officials of both the L. and P.O.S. and Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S., as shrewd business men, would see to it that neither society suffered pecuniarily or otherwise in the matter. I would only add that from the fact that your correspondent states I am a member of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. (while I myself made no such statement in my communication), seems pretty conclusive proof to me of the source of your correspondent's letter, and I cannot help feeling very greatly surprised that a body of gentlemen who profess to take such a very deep interest in birdy matters should be in any way opposed to a movement which is believed by its promoters to be conceived in the best interests of the Fancy.

JOHN B. WATERMAN.

The Golden Oriole in Scotland.

SIR,—In looking over my weekly copy of your interesting and valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, I read with great interest the letter of Mr. R. G. Jolliffe, re the Golden Oriole in Scotland. I have very much pleasure in informing you that a fine specimen of this rare bird was caught at Giffordtown, parish of Collusie, Fife, in June of last year. This specimen is set up, and is in the possession of Mr. John Dewar, Balbirnie Square, Markinch, Fife. Interested parties can view same any week day at any reasonable hour.

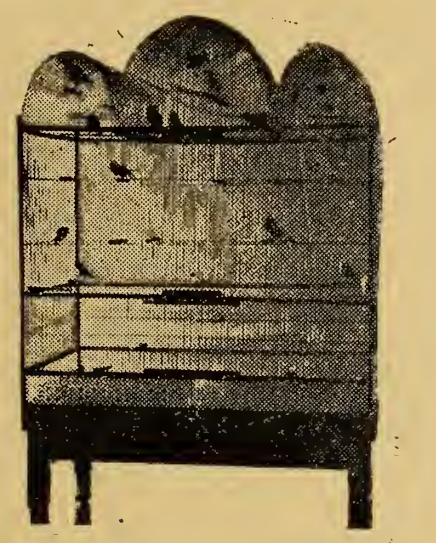
GEORGE THOMSON.

SIR,—I am sorry to see that another of the pests who occasionally disgust bird lovers has been permitted to ventilate his prowess in the columns of your excellent paper. From what I glean he is a native of "Glasgie," and that he, or a friend, lately "obtained" a Golden Oriole in beautiful plumage, and that it is now on view in a shop window somewhere. I would gladly undertake the pilgrimage if the sportsman (!) was also to be seen alongside the unfortunate Oriole.

A BIRD LOVER.

[Our correspondent allows his feelings to run away with him and put a quite unjustifiable construction upon Mr. Jolliffe's letter. This gentleman merely sent us a record of the happening, and we think would be the last person to try his "prowess" in the shooting of Golden Orioles.—EDITOR.]

Should Our Canary Shows be Reorganised?



Suggestions to Secretaries.

SIR,—I should be very glad to be allowed a space in your valuable paper with reference to Canary shows. I have visited shows for nearly 20 years from time to time, and one idea has always rested in my mind after leaving them. Many times I have thought that secretaries and judges would do well to alter the system slightly, namely, that all breeders with first-class and high-priced birds who have obtained one or more first prizes in any class, should be allowed to show only in a stand styled "the Premier Section" at all times. The rest of the show might then be styled "the General Section," and be allotted to all those who have not won a first prize. I have often been in conversation with exhibitors and fanciers who have been disappointed to a certain extent, after their efforts in outlay, etc., to obtain fairly good type, etc.; no doubt their hopes have been a little below zero when entering their birds, as they were aware that So-and-So would certainly have birds showing, and that their chances were light in competing, and no doubt this may be quite correct in every sense. I should also suggest that rather larger rooms be obtained, and that the shows be advertised a little more to the public, the admission to be 2d. to 3d., as may be desired. I think it would help secretaries in the matter of funds greatly in course of time. It would be quite easy for two or three of the staff to supervise the care of the birds during public inspection. At present it is rare that any people other than exhibitors and a few of their friends know there has been, or that there is going to be a show. I feel certain that a few extra shillings in printing would help every society, etc., with these shows, as they are really worth seeing for a copper or two during the few hours' stay by the public. I hope my suggestions may be thought over, and I wish every success to my paper, CAGE BIRDS.

JOHN H. JOWETT.

A Much-admired Home-made Aviary and Its Inmates.

SIR,—I am taking the liberty of sending you a photo of my home-made bird aviary. I made every particle of it myself, and the total expense was, including table casters for legs, glass panels, and all complete, 15s. It is of tinned wire and American white wood stained. It has 15lbs. of wire on it, and its occupants are one pair of Bullfinches, one pair of Redpolls, one pair of Goldfinches, three Linnets, one Chaffinch, and one Siskin—eleven birds all told. Everybody here is in love with the aviary. I have lately taken one Goldfinch (that I have had for six years) out to pair with a Canary. I had two young ones, but the hen refused to feed after 11 days, so I was very disappointed; but better luck next time. I may say that I followed all instructions given in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," by Claude St. John, so I don't think it was my fault they died. I have also got one pair of Yorkshire Canaries. They had one clutch of four eggs. The hen refused to sit. Then she had another three eggs; one proved clear and two addled. And now, to crown the lot, the cock bird is moulting, so no luck this season for me. But I'll do as the soldier says, "Stick it." I have another 18 months to do to complete my 21 years, so I hope to go in for birds for all I am worth. I may say I am pretty handy at making all kinds of cages; but still it is not my trade, so I hope you will let me know what you think of my birds, as they all seem very happy in there. I have lately put in two Canaries which you will see depicted on the right of the photograph. You will also see there are no cumbersome, long perches, but only short ones, which are attached to the wires, and which can be easily scraped or taken out occasionally by putting the hand in the bottom door. I have no sand-trays, but a small trap-door fitted just behind the large door at the bottom of the cage (there being no top to the table), enables me to brush the cage out easily into a tray when necessary. I also have a large glass bath of the ordinary kind—glass top and sides and open ends—which I put right inside. The glass saves a lot of splashing. I put cuttlefish in the bottom right-hand corner of the cage. I trust the photograph and these notes will interest some of the readers of CAGE BIRDS.

Under the White Rose.

THE various specialist clubs are now very busy arranging for next season's competitions. The Y.C.C., all will be pleased to hear, will again offer valuable prizes, and more particularly so in regard to the money specials; this has been extended to all shows held under their patronage, the amount being as usual, 5s. for most points gained by birds holding third position, 3s. for most points gained by fourth position birds, and 2s. for fifth birds, a total of 10s. at each show. Surely the membership will now advance when such prizes are offered. And please note, ye amateurs and novices, that any member standing first in Yorkshire classes does not compete for these specials, so you have a good chance.

NATIONAL Green Marked Y.C.C. is making good headway; 75 members are now on the books, and a fine list of specials is to be provided, six substantial prizes for the champion section, two for amateurs (CAGE BIRDS specials), and four for novices (and there may be more) The first in the champion section (promised by Mr. W. H. Shackleton), value £5 5s., is open to be doubled by the donor on one condition, viz., should the club be successful in raising £5 for specials, etc., over and above subscriptions, then the trophy offered will be valued £10 10s. Truly a good offer, and no doubt the conditions will be fulfilled.

YORKSHIRE Union of Cage Bird Societies year-book for 1909-1910 is now out, and all members should make sure that they obtain their copy, as all rules for shows, competitions, etc., are contained therein, and show rules will not be sent out with schedules as previously. The book contains several new items, viz., last year's balance-sheet, so that all members may see how their money has been spent, secretaries' memoranda for meetings, to enable them to see at a glance when business connected with the Union should be transacted, giving dates such business should be in the hands of the Union secretary, and last, but not least, all the novices are distinguished by being marked N.

HOW many arguments there have been during the last few years on the question of the "backbone of the Fancy" (novices), it is impossible to tell, but they have been very numerous, and now that the proportion is made known, many will be "staggered." There are 1,192 members' names and addresses, and of these 836 are novices and 356 champions. About 70 out of each hundred novices! My word, what a backbone! Strong enough to carry the Union through anything.

SOCIETIES taken individually present some peculiarities. Several contain only one champion member, only three societies have a preponderance of champions, and in one they are exactly equal, the remaining twenty-four societies comprising the Union having a very large percentage of novice members.

STILL another new cage-bird society for the Bradford district. This is to be known as the Bankfoot and District C.B.S., headquarters at the Bankfoot Schools. Over 30 members have been enrolled at the first meeting, and a good list of specials is already promised for the few shows to be held this season. Full particulars can be had from the secretary, Mr. F. Gelder, 14, Centre Street, Little Horton, Bradford. "STRAIGHT-'UN."

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

A Companionable Robin.

A Robin always visits a kitchen at Endon, where lives a girl named Jennie. The Robin waits on the wall each morning to be let in, just like a cat. When he has warmed and fed himself, he retires to a plant which stands on a cupboard, while Jennie does her work.—(Sent by Aline Lycett, Apedale View, Chesterton, Staffs.)

*A Boot that Became a Home.

At a certain church which was in repair a boot was found, fixed between two pipes. This was the home of two birds. It contained two eggs and two little birds. The nest was removed until the repairing was completed and was returned to its original position, seed and water being placed for the birds each day.—(Sent by H. Walker, 10, Bedford Street, Walworth, S.E.)

*A Nest Lined with Confetti.

A pied Finch which built its nest in a tree near Crewe Church decorated the same both inside and out with confetti, and the various colours have given the nest a very pretty appearance. The confetti, no doubt, was got from outside the church, where many weddings take place.—(Sent by Hilda Boyd (age 11), 99, Huskisson Street, Liverpool.)

Country Rambles

City of Bradford and Bingley Societies (Combined).

A ramble took place on July 3rd, previously arranged between the City of Bradford O.S. and the Bingley and Dis. O.S. There was a fine turn up of fanciers and their wives, and I feel sure every one of us enjoyed the outing immensely. The day was not as bright as it might have been, but it kept dry until we landed at Bingley for our tea. We from Bingley met our Bradford friends (who came by car to Nab Wood end), on Cottingley Bridge. Then we went into the fields and through the woods round by what is known as Black Hills, and Goit Stock, into the village of Harden, coming along through the Bingley Woods (which were looking at their best). At this juncture I heard some of our friends complaining about being tired, and wanting to refresh "the inner man." However, they had not long to be anxious, as we were then nearing our much needed tea-room. On our arrival we had not long to wait, as our president had tea all ready for us, and I can assure your readers that we were all ready to partake of the good things which he had in plenty. After tea we had intended looking round the park at Bingley, but the weather (which had held out well during the afternoon) spoiled that part of our programme. So we went our different ways, satisfied, I believe, that we had spent a really good half-day's outing. I can recommend these joint rambles, and I feel sure they are a step in the right direction. They have a tendency to cultivate that spirit of fraternity which is essential to the general wellbeing of the Fancy.—A. LIVESEY, hon. secretary Bingley and Dis. O. S.

Club Reports.

LANCASHIRE CANARY ASSOC.

I send the list of societies which have up to date applied for the Lancashire Canary Association patronage for this season's open shows. We are holding a meeting on July 17th at the rooms of the R.O.C. at 6.30 p.m. (they are holding their annual First Feather Show on this date), and the committee requests that a good attendance of members be present. Shows:—Oct. 22nd and 23rd, Rochdale O.C.; Oct. 29th and 30th, Manchester and N.C.O.S.; Nov. 6th, Rochdale Good Intent; Nov. 13th to 15th, Nottingham; Dec. 4th, Middleton O.S.; Dec. 2nd, Frome; Dec. 2nd, St. Helens; Nov. 26th, 27th and 28th, L.C.B.A.; Feb. 4th, 5th, 7th, and 8th, Crystal Palace.—WM. ADAMS, Hon. Sec.

NORWICH PLAINHEAD CLUB.

At the meeting of the committee, held on July 3rd, it was resolved that the selection of shows for club patronage be left over until August, in order to give more societies a chance of applying for same. Will societies therefore who have not applied kindly do so as soon as possible, giving the necessary particulars as to judge and classification? I may say that there will be a grand lot of specials to be competed for this season by both champion and amateurs, including the £1 1s. cash or value for most points gained by a new member. Fanciers desirous of competing for same should join at once. I shall be glad to send full particulars to anyone applying to me for same.—JNO. HOPKINS, Hon. Sec., 126 Bury New-road, Bolton, Lancs.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Special meeting to revise rules held at headquarters, June 24th, Mr. J. W. Metcalfe in the chair. The committee had carefully gone into the rules and filled in all amendments that had been carried since the rules were last printed. No very great changes were made, most of the alterations being with a view to make things read more clearly. In future, all new rules and amendments to old rules will have to be sent to the Secretary by February in each year, and will then be put on voting papers so that all members will have a voice in the matter. The new rules and standards when printed will be enclosed in a stiff-backed card case, so that they can be carried easily. The following applications for patronage have been received, and any member wishing to vote on same and not being able to get to the meeting on July 22nd, must send his vote in writing to the Secretary by July 21st. October 22nd and 23rd, Rochdale and Newcastle; October 29th and 30th, Manchester; November 5th and 6th, Liverpool; November 12th and 13th, Preston; November 19th and 20th, Pendleton; November 26th and 27th, Sale and L.C.B.A.; December 3rd and 4th, Altrincham and Harrogate; January, 1910, Scottish National, Feb. 1910, Palace. Will members please note that patronage is given to only one show in one week. Any other society wishing to apply for patronage must do so before July 21st to me.—S. HADWIN, Sec., 28, Pembroke-place, Liverpool.

NATIONAL GREEN-MARKED Y.C.C.

Committee meeting held July 10th, at Market Tavern, Bradford. Mr. W. H. Shackleton (President) occupied the chair, and some very important business was transacted. Nineteen new members were elected, these having been enrolled since last meeting. Mr. A. Hirst (Accrington) was unanimously elected on committee as one of the outside Yorkshire representatives. The committee have been fortunate in having some very valuable specials presented for competition during the ensuing season. The President very generously offered a trophy valued at £5 5s., which will be further increased to £10 10s. on condition that the members subscribe £5 5s. to the prize fund. He also offered two boxes of 50 cigars and a gold-centre silver medal. Messrs. Ogden Bros. also presented a £2 2s. trophy, Mr. J Sandiford (Preston) a £2 2s. cup, Mr. F. Carl £1 for amateur competition through the committee, of which Mr. F. Hammond is the hon. secretary. Mr. T. C. Crawhall (Newcastle), a gold-centre silver medal, and the Secretary a 10s. 6d. special. These, together with specials value £3 3s., presented by the club, should induce many more fanciers of this variety to join and clubs to apply for our patronage on or before July 24th. We are also preparing a handbook, containing rules, lists of members, competitions, and judges, which will be forwarded to the members as early as possible. The committee passed an unanimous vote of thanks to the donors for their generosity. The competition and specials were divided into three sections: Open competition—(1) The Shackleton trophy, value £5 5s. to £10 10s., as above, £1 1s. club medal to winner; (2) Ogden trophy, value £2 2s., presented by Messrs. Ogden Bros.; (3) club special, value £1 1s.; (4) special, value 10/6 presented by Sec.; (5) box of 50 cigars, presented by President; (6) gold-centre silver medal, also by President. Novice competition—(1) Sandiford's cup, value £2 2s., presented by Mr. J. Sandiford; (2) special, value £1 1s., presented by the club; (3) one box of 50 cigars, presented by the President; (4) a gold-centre silver medal, presented by Mr. T. C. Crawhall. A novice is one who has not won a first prize in open competition previous to the current season. Amateur competition—CAGE BIRDS prizes for amateurs: The Editor of CAGE BIRDS will give two prizes (not cash), first value 12s. 6d., second value 7s. 6d. Members and friends desiring to contribute to the special fund would greatly oblige by notifying any member of the committee or myself.—F. ARMSTRONG, Hon. Sec. and Treas., 78, Pear-street, Halifax.

SOUTHERN NORWICH P.C.

The club patronage for season 1909-10 is given to:—Oct. 19th and 20th, Plymouth Show, ten guinea cup and specials (1-6); Oct. 22nd and 23rd, Battersea, one guinea cup or cash; Oct. 27th and 28th, Clapham C.B.A., ten guinea cup and specials (1-6); Nov. 3rd, Cheltenham, ten guinea cup and specials (1-6); Nov. 9th and 10th, Hastings, ten guinea cup and specials (1-6); Nov. 10th and 11th, Swansea, one guinea cup or cash, 10s. 6d. for member gaining most points with four birds; Nov. 23rd and 24th, Bournemouth, one guinea cup or cash; Dec. 2nd, L.C.B.A., ten guinea cup or specials (1-6); Feb. 4th, L.P.O.S. Crystal Palace Show, ten guinea cup or specials (1-6). Novice Section: Oct. 27th and 28th, Clapham; Nov. 10th, Southend; Nov. 17th, Wimbledon; Nov. 23rd, Bournemouth; Dec. 2nd, L.C.B.A.; Feb. 4th, Crystal Palace. Our membership now is over 150. Will members kindly read Rule 3 and take same as a notification from myself?—F. S. MATTHES, Hon. Sec. and Treas.

LANCASHIRE AND LIZARD F.A.

Meeting held at Great Eastern Hotel, Oldham, on July 3rd. Mr. Joy found us a fine room and the only thing to spoil matters was that there was not a bigger meeting, owing to Manchester and Oldham First Feather Shows being on the same day. We got through a good evening's work, as we had a large number of applications for patronage. Provisional patronage was given to six societies, subject to same being confirmed at next meeting, which will be held at Glossop in early August. We are trying to make this meeting a very attractive one, and an effort will be made to secure one or other of our prominent fanciers to give an address on one or other of our special varieties. Mr. J. W. Ramsden, of colour-food fame, generously offered us a plated cruet for competition for next season, the same to be offered for colour only. Needless to say, the offer was accepted, many flattering remarks being passed whilst we were discussing the subject. I am pleased to say we had another member proposed for the Lancashire section in Mr. A. Hordern (Shaw), so that things are still on the move.—JOHN RUKIN, Sec.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

Meeting held July 6th, Mr. J. Davison in the chair. It was carried that the Secretary get the cup for most points over table shows (Mr. Davison has a long lead for this), and that the balance he used to provide for a second prize. It was also decided that last year's cup winner he depicted on the front page of Rule Book this year. A hearty vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Shepherd for so kindly judging. The following new members were elected: Messrs. J. J. Bright (Stanhope) and G. Shackley (Harrington). It was decided that we allot patronage at next meeting, July 28th. Will secretaries who wish for same please apply before that date? The following societies have applied: Newcastle, October 22nd and 23rd; Harrington, October 28th and 29th; South Shields, October 29th and 30th; Blaydon, November 5th and 6th; Wallsend, November 12th and 13th; Sunderland, November 19th and 20th; Darlington, November 27th; Gateshead, December 10th and 11th. For open competition we require five classes for Yorkshires, and for novice competition, two classes. A full attendance of members is requested when we allot patronage, so that we may have a thoroughly satisfactory selection of shows.—T. C. CRAWHALL, Hon. Sec.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held July 1st, at headquarters, Lockhart's, 65, Grainger-street, the chairman (Mr. Currah) presiding. Amongst those present was Mr. Birchley, who, I am glad to say, has promised to attend our next meeting, August 5th, and give us a lecture on the Romanees of British Bird Life. We hope there will be a large attendance, and non-members will be heartily welcomed. The report on our late social was read; after all expenses had been paid a balance of £1 5s. 6d. was seen to be left, and we decided that if our next social proves a success, we use the balance in buying another cup to be competed for by members at our annual Nest Feather Show. Mr. R. Young is to read us, at our September meeting, a paper on the Border and the Scotch Fancy, kindly written by Mr. Alexandra. The next item was the novice question, whether he be allowed to show in the members' section, as well as the novice members' section. After a heated discussion it was decided to leave it over until the August meeting. Mr. Shepherd, whom we were glad to see again, said a few words on his trip to Liverpool. —CURRY and HUTCHINSON, Secs.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

During the Young Bird Show held July 10th, the ordinary business was proceeded with, Mr. J. Farrar in the chair. It was decided when drawing up the schedule to give the number of classes required by the various specialist clubs to whom we have applied for patronage, in the event of such patronage being granted. Will the secretaries of the specialist clubs please note this? The Secretary informed the members that Mr. P. Hunter, of Bombay, India (one of our Colonial members) had kindly forwarded a cash special of £1 for our annual Open Show, November 19th and 20th, whereupon Mr. A. Walker kindly gave a 2nd special of 10/-, and Mr. J. Riseborough a 3rd special of 5/-. As we already have a special of £1 to be given to the best bird in the show, the above three specials will probably be given for the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd most points throughout show, besides the usual specials of 2/6 for most points in each class. With the above specials and good prize money, it will be seen that our members intend making our next show the most successful on record, and we trust fanciers will rally round us. Further subscriptions or specials will be thankfully received and acknowledged through the Fancy Press. We were very pleased to have our old friend Dr. O'Neal amongst us at our last meeting, and he kindly gave us a cash special for the most entries at the next young bird show, which will be held at the same time and place (6 p.m., Fawcett-street Cafe) on July 24th.—W. Reid, Hon. Sec.

An Easily-made Nest-pan Holder.

Sent by Mr. J. Cairns, New Double Row, Choppington Colliery, Morpeth, Northumberland.

The accompanying sketch represents a simple device for making nest-pan holders for breeding cages. The holder fixes perches so that there is no need for the nest-pan to touch the back of cage. Fanciers who have their perches fitted with red-mite traps may therefore ensure the nests being free from this pest. All one requires is a pair of pliers and a piece of fairly strong cage wire. Cut the latter into four pieces—two large (say about eight or nine inch) pieces, and two small (about one and half inches). Bend the larger pieces as shown in Fig. 1, and the small pieces as in Fig. 2. The loops marked A in Fig. 1 must be large enough for the perch to pass through. The small pieces marked CC and BB must be fixed across as indicated,, and nipped tight with the pliers or soldered. The holder then is ready for use. The finished article ought to somewhat resemble Fig. 3.—JAMES CAIRNS.

An Anti-splash Bath.

Sent by Mr. Arthur M. Rees, 36, Silvester Road, East Dulwich, S.E.

I send a sketch of an anti-spash bath. I have had the pleasuro of making a good number for the members of my society, all of whom speak highly of it. To make, take two ordinary one-pound tobacco boxes, remove the lids, and cut off the edges where the hinges are (see Fig. A). Now solder one lid on to the long side of box (see Fig. B), and the other lid on opposite side, these forming the sides of bath. Drill four holes (just big enough to take pieces of cage wire, leaving enough room under the edges of lids to allow window glass to slide under. Put four pieces of wire through holes from side to side, and solder in position as indicated. Get two pieces of glass cut to fit tight, one for the top and one for the back; solder on two wire hooks where shown in the sketch; enamel all the tin inside and out, and fill with water—and you have an ideal anti-splash bath.—A. M. REES.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE C.B.S.

Members' annual Nest Feather Show, held July 10th, in the Co-operative Hall, Darn Crook. Entries totalled 119, being 30 less than at last year's, many of our members doing badly this season. Norwich were a fine lot, and some of the novices quite held their own with the champions. Crests and Crest-bred only counted six in two classes, but the winner of the cup was found among this lot, a nice Crest of Messrs. Dobson and Son's. Cinnamons were a level lot, showing great improvement in size and colour. Yorkshires were a fine section. The "Wee Gems" were one of the strongest sections—23 in two classes; our friends across the border will have to look to their laurels when the show season comes round. Scotch Fancies were a poor turn-out—only four in two classes. In the British bird section the entries were only small, but some will be heard of again. In the Foreign bird class there were eight entries, and the birds were shown in beautiful condition. There was a capital attendance. The judges were Messrs. Thos. Robson (Canaries) and J. Maddison (Mules, British and Foreign); their awards met with approval.

GRIMSBY.

This fixture, organised to aid the local charities, was favoured with fine weather on July 8th. The day after opened dull and gusty, but turned out beautifully fine, and a huge crowd of people patronised the show. The cage birds were staged in the live stock tent, and were carefully tended. The unsuitable time of the year prevented the Canary classes from filling as the committee desired, and these were cut out. Mr. T. J. Ambrose judged.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

The annual Young Bird Show of the City and Suburban A.C.B., held July 3rd, in the fine club-room at the Church Institute, Marylebone, W., was a tremendous success, the entry (234) easily surpassing all previous records, and entitling it to rank as about the best fixture of its kind ever held in the Metropolis. We should think there was, too, about a record gathering of fanciers during the afternoon and evening, a fact which must have given the officials considerable pleasure, and no doubt accounted for the "all smiles" of the genial Secretary, Mr. V. Wynn. The admirable arrangements testified to the care and foresight of this gentleman, and to the energy of the stewards, Messrs. Shepherd, Wyse, Page, Curtis, Daintry, and others. The Chairman (Mr. A. C. Burn) was also in evidence, and we were pleased to note an improvement in his health. Coming to the birds, we unhesitatingly say that the quality among the Canaries was fully equal to anything we have seen this season, while the display of British and Foreign stood out alone—a simply wonderful show, many Palace and other winners being on view, and in really splendid condition. They almost eclipsed the imposing case of shining cups and other trophies which occupied the centre of the room—testimony to the financial strength of the Association. The cup for the best young bird in the show went to a capital clear yellow Yorkshire belonging to Messrs. Hawes Bros., a very stylish bird. Other specials were secured by Mrs. Maher, Mrs. Morrison, Miss Shephard, and Messrs. Botting, Curtis, Dickinson, Graham, Hawes Bros., Menhennett, Monger, Marley, Page, Quantrell, Saytch, Watts and Wynn. Mr. J. Robson judged.

THE McQUISTON MYSTERY.

STILL NO WORD FROM GEMMELL!

McQUISTON CONTENT TO LEAVE MATTERS AS THEY STAND.

Some Views of Bathgate and Edinburgh Fanciers.

Last week we commented upon the fact that up to the time of going to press no letter from Mr. McQuiston, as mentioned in his telegram of July 6th, had been delivered. On Friday, July 9th, however, a letter arrived which contained the following statements bearing upon the case:

July 8th, 1909.

DEAR SIR,—I duly received your kind favour of 3rd, and also your wire, for which please accept my thanks. I may say that I have not yet seen Gemmell, although I have been at Dalmellington both on Saturday and Monday. I got a thorough drenching on Saturday in my endeavours to hunt him up, but was never able to catch him up. He left word with his Mrs. on Monday that he would be down to Ayr to see me the very first day he had an hour or two to spare, which he expected would be early this week, but up till time of writing he has not turned up. You will understand, therefore, the reason I have not written sooner. I have put off from one mail to another, always thinking I would have matters clinched for next mail sure. This is the season of the year that shopkeepers in Ayr have in a large measure to depend on for making up for the dull trade at the coast in winter, and it is a very difficult matter for me to get away so often from the shop, otherwise I would have stayed in Dalmellington till he came home. Then I wrote to Mr. Smith for the copy of the letter he received from Gemmell, but he only gave me an extract from the letter, in which he (Gemmell) admits his guilt in staining the bird. It is, I think, on mature consideration, not a wise thing on my part to enter into a newspaper correspondence with the clique from the East. In the meantime I think my case is quite safe in the hands of the members of the National B.B. and M.C., and I am sure I will receive full justice from them, which is much more than I have got from my "friends" in Scotland. You will, I hope, leave matters as they stand until I have had an interview with Gemmell, and I will advise you immediately after I have seen him, how matters stand. But, candidly, I do not see how I can spare the time to thrash out matters in the papers. As I have already said, at this season of the year we are so specially busy I cannot really see how I could find time. During the winter, when the coast season is very dull, I could have plenty of time on hand, but not in the height of the holiday season. I do think and hope matters will come out alright in the end.

P. McQUISTON.

Judging by this letter, it is Mr. McQuiston's intention to let matters rest where they are until after he has seen the "elusive Gemmell." Of course, when penning it, he had had no opportunity of reading the matter contained in our last issue anent the case, consequently, we presume, was unaware of the fact that others—"the clique from the East"—openly threw doubts upon the genuineness of his case. He, however, has not written us since our last number came out. Anyway, a man's honour and good name should be safe in his own keeping, so we take it that Mr. McQuiston will leave no stone unturned to confute the aspersions cast upon his explanation of the incidents leading up to the disqualification of his Bullfinch at Bathgate show.

Proof that is Needed.

As Mr. Gemmell refers to "sending along" the Bullfinch, and Mr. McQuiston to the fact of the bird "reaching him," we presume it would be sent by rail from Dalmellington to Ayr—on, say, January 13th or 14th last. Therefore, of this railway journey there should be no difficulty in obtaining convincing proof from the books of the railway company. Thus the all-important affidavit from Mr. Gemmell could, when obtained, be backed up in no uncertain manner. We take it, too, that there must be fanciers who can substantiate the fact that Mr. Gemmell actually had in his possession a British Bullfinch which was good enough to exhibit at shows of repute—"class" enough to catch the eye of a judge and keen exhibitor of this species. And we take it that the discrepancy between the statement made both by Mr. McQuiston and Mr. Gemmell that the latter exhibited a Bullfinch at Ayr show, held November 21st, which won second prize, and the fact that the catalogue of the said show does not give Mr. Gemmell as an exhibitor of a Bullfinch at all—we suppose that this discrepancy can be explained. We need hardly, we take it, impress upon the parties concerned the vital necessity for the clearing up of this latter point. We have examined the catalogue of the Ayr show referred to, and find that a Mr. Gemmell, of Main Street, Dalmellington, is given therein as an exhibitor, but as an exhibitor solely, apparently, of pigeons. We cannot trace a single entry to his name in the cage-bird section. As both Mr. McQuiston and Mr. Gemmell have committed to writing the statement that the Bullfinch in question took second prize at the Ayr show at which the former gentleman judged, there can surely be no mistake.

To continue the account of our representative's pilgrimage across Scotland in search of information, he journeyed from Ayr to Glasgow, and thence to Bathgate, the scene of the disqualification. At the latter place he was very courteously received by the secretary of the local society, Mr. R. Bald, himself well-known as an exhibitor of Hybrids and British birds. Naturally, the meeting took him very much by surprise. He well remembered the incident of the disqualification of Mr. McQuiston's Bullfinch, though of the actual details surrounding the examination of the bird he had little personal knowledge, being engaged in his secretarial duties at the time. But that the examination was both fair and conclusive is not disputed. (Mr. McQuiston acknowledged to us that he himself removed colouring matter from the breast of the bird after he had got it home.) He strongly denied that Mr. McQuiston had anything to complain of in the way of "unfairness" from the show officials. Nor did he think that there was any particular "scene" when the disqualification became known. (We learned that the trouble mentioned by Mr. McQuiston occurred between himself and a certain Glasgow fancier who was living up to his reputation for over-indulging in the "strong waters" of the land.) He had no recollection of hearing it mentioned at the show that Mr. McQuiston had stated that the Bullfinch disqualified was a bird he had only just bought.

"Preparing" Birds in Scotland.

Afterwards certain other prominent local fanciers were seen, and these were highly interested in, and seemed very astonished at, the latest developments in the case. None appeared to have any recollection of the recent purchase of the Bullfinch being mentioned in the showroom. One or two seemed to agree with the suggestion that the Edinburgh fanciers present were delighted to find Mr. McQuiston "bowled out." They had said that there was over-much "faking and staining" going on in Scotland, and that the case would be a warning to others. With the former part of this opinion the men of Bathgate seemed to fall in; as one of them humorously put it, "many of us do too much, and a little is done by too many." They said that it was stated at the show by the "men from the East," that the judge had used a new preparation for testing the Bullfinch—a very potent chemical which came from a fancier away in the far North who was skilled in such things—a chemical guaranteed to "move anything." It was further pointed out that Mr. McQuiston could not know who was likely to judge the Bullfinch—or any other—class, as this was only decided on the morning of the show. The two judges—in this case Messrs. John Brown and Sam Ward—spin a coin, and the one who calls correctly takes the classes with odd numbers, and the other those with even numbers. Thus, that Mr. Brown had the Bullfinch under him was entirely a matter of chance. And this gentleman said when he took the bird out of its cage—he had it at the top of the class—that it was either "first or nothing."

Mr. J. Livingstone, one of the fanciers talked with, and who is also a member of the Scottish British Bird and Mule Club Committee, strongly repudiated the suggestion that Mr. McQuiston did not receive "fair play" at the committee meeting at which he was sentenced. He pointed out that Mr. McQuiston was convicted of "showing a stained Bullfinch," which was not denied; that the letter he produced contained a repudiation of the allegation that the writer of it was responsible for the staining; and that the rules of the S.B.B. and M.C. allowed of no sentence other than one of expulsion being passed. Mr. Livingstone readily admitted, though, that if the statements Mr. McQuiston now made (as told to him by our representative) could be substantiated, a great wrong had been done, a wrong which he personally would certainly do his utmost to get put right. He pointed out, incidentally, that if Mr. McQuiston intended the Bullfinch to compete in the trophy competition (it was marked to do so, he believed), then he was breaking a rule of the S.B.B. and M.C. which stated that all birds competing in the said competition must have been the property of the exhibitor for a certain period prior to the show.

Do they Emulate the Fair Sex?

The Bathgate fanciers made some caustic comments on the "jealousy" existing between the Scottish fanciers in different localities. They said that the fanciers in the East were, as a body, certainly jealous of the fanciers in the West. But, they added, we poor "country" fanciers are the worst off of any; we come in between, and get the benefit of the jealousy of both! The allusion to a party who "egged on" Gemmell to do so great an injury to McQuiston filled them with astonishment and speculation—but with speculations as to the identity of the person we can here have nothing to do. Most of the fanciers, however, seemed to find the story very difficult to credit.

Edinburgh—most beautiful of cities—is but an easy stage from Bathgate. Here the latest news of the McQuiston disqualification case was received with even greater astonishment than in Bathgate; and in most quarters with emphatic expressions of disbelief.

The idea that there was any "jealousy" of Mr. McQuiston, beyond the legitimate rivalry due to keen competition at the shows, was scouted on all hands, and as to the Edinburgh (or other) fancier who, presumably, was at the back of Gemmell's action—well, they would like to know his name. Until then they should regard the insinuation as too far-fetched for credence—some bluntly said: as "bluff." Those who were in a position to speak upon the point were all agreed in the opinion that the disqualified Bullfinch was the bird which Mr. McQuiston had been exhibiting so successfully through the season, unless, as they admitted, their eyes had deceived them. This bird had naturally become well known, and at Bathgate they said they saw nothing to lead them to think they were looking at any other bird than this, the most noted winning Bullfinch of the season.

A Pertinent Enquiry.

Our representative enquired why, if there was any question about Mr. McQuiston's birds, they were not protested against and tested at the great Edinburgh show (the Scottish National), where practically all of them stood high up in the prize list? The only explanation seemed to be the obvious one that nobody wanted to have them tested. It was pointed out that the fact of Mr. McQuiston fearlessly showing his birds in Edinburgh, where, according to his own account, he could not expect to find any favour shown him, was a fact which on the face of it supported his version of the affair. Well, came the reply, he simply had to show if he wished to keep his place in the trophy competition, as the runner-up, Mr. L. J. Arrighi, was very close behind him in the matter of points.

Our representative was fortunate enough to catch Mr. Arrighi, and have a short conversation with him. This gentleman is very well known as an exhibitor and lover of birds in Scotland, and probably almost as well known (by name, at least) this side of the border. He won the S.B.B. and M.C. trophy in consequence of the disqualification sustained by Mr. McQuiston. Very few points would have separated them in any case, while the third on the list was a very long way in the rear. The latest details of the case caused Mr. Arrighi evident surprise. He said that so far as he was concerned he strongly repudiated any suggestion of "jealousy" or animosity towards Mr. McQuiston—if, of course, the suggestion applied, as the second in the competition, to him. He knew nothing of any Edinburgh "clique" aiming at the downfall of Mr. McQuiston, and did not believe that such a thing ever existed, except, perhaps, in Mr. McQuiston's own imagination. He agreed, in the main, with the views expressed by the other Bathgate and Edinburgh fanciers, and said emphatically that no injustice was knowingly done. He was not aware that Mr. McQuiston's birds had been previously tested—by a judge from Edinburgh, or anywhere else—and he should be inclined to doubt this. He gave it as his opinion that there was certainly too much staining and "faking" of birds done in Scotland, and that it wanted putting down with a firm hand.

Jackdaws and Wood Owls.

Although the Jackdaws have safely reared their young in one of the big elm trees in the park, they are still as watchful and jealous of their nesting site as when the young were first hatched. The elms are favourite perches for the larger birds, but the two or three where the 'daws have nested have been quite unused during the spring, these dusky rascals having kept all birds at bay. No Rook dare settle down within fifty yards, and even the fierce Sparrow-Hawk keeps at a respectable distance. The Blackbirds, Thrushes and Starlings, too, have had a sorry time of it, few having managed this summer to successfully rear broods. More than one nest we have located showed evidence of destruction.

Owls were at one time plentiful here, and even now a few remain. In the early part of the year a fine Wood Owl was seen in the middle of the village of Carshalton flying across the road from one large garden to another. Where wild creatures are undisturbed it is astonishing what rare and interesting birds will take advantage of the seclusion, and nest and rear young close to inhabited houses. I have seen it stated that the Wood Owl is a thorough bird of the night, and never wanders abroad until the sun has dropped behind the western horizon; but this bird must be an exception to the rule, as he has been seen quite early in the afternoon. The Owl measures about eighteen inches in length, and yet when he moves not the slightest sound is heard. A dead branch of one of the old trees is a favourite perch. He sits quietly, and then hoots loudly, gliding into the gathering darkness and returning again in a few minutes. He drops like a shadow to the ground, and is quickly away with his prey to the nesting site. These birds are more noisy in the early spring months than when the young are hatched; but these in turn are very noisy in the nest, which is not difficult to locate.

Game Birds and Carrion Crows.

In the spring numbers of Carrion Crows fly to the moors, and are very destructive to game. When a nest is discovered, they dally round and round until they provoke the brooding bird to leave her eggs. They then rush in, seize one, and fly straight to the nearest stone wall, to suck the contents at leisure.

The Wood Warbler's Nest.

One of the most difficult nests to locate is that of the tiny Wood Wren. It is invariably placed on the ground, often in a little hollow, or it may be upon a bank well covered with rank vegetation. It is semi-domed and made principally of dry grasses, moss and dead leaves, and is lined with horse hair. This well concealed nest is generally found by accident, but by careful watching one may see the parent birds attending to the tiny nestlings.

The Crossbill and the Apples.

Here is a quaintly written account of the visit of Crossbills to this country many years ago: "The yeere 1593 was a greate and exceeding yeere of apples, and there were greate plenty of strange birds, that showed themselves at the time the apples were full ripe, who fedde upon the kernells onely of those apples, and haveinge a bill with one beake wrythinge over the other, which would presently bore a greater hole in one of the apples, and make way to the kernells: They were of the bigness of a Bullfinch; the henne right like the henne of the Bullfinch in colour; the cocke a glorious bird, in a manner al redde or yellowe on the brest, backe, and head. The oldest man living never heard or reade of any such like bird; and the thinge most to be noted was that it seemed they came out of some country not inhabited, for they at first would abide shooting at them, either with pellets, bowe, or other engine, and not remove until they were stricken down; moreover, they would abide the throweing at them with apples. They came when the apples were full rype, and went away when the apples were clean fallen. They were good meat."

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insistedupon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT. Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 12 words, 4d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

EVERYTHING

for the Bird Fancier. Cheapest & best. Note

EXAMPLES.

Norwich Favourite show cage, ready for immediate use, 1/6 each, 8/- half dozen. Show cage travelling cases for two, 3/6, 5/- for four, 6/6 six. Yorkshire ditto, 3d., 6d., 9d. extra. For new novelties, see page 2, last week's issue, "Cage Birds."

Free Money-Saving Catalogue.

There you will find the best Flight Cages, Nursery Cages, Appliances of every description, Seeds of the very finest quality; in fact, everything that can be found in one dozen other places together. The cages are not an imitation lot, cribbed from somebody else's ideas, nor do they possess names that are taken from other people's catalogues; when this has to be done, it tells you plainly what the sellers and their goods must be made of, otherwise there would be no necessity to resort to such mean, dirty practices.

Club Reports.

BLAYDON-ON-TYNE & DIS. C.B.S.

At the monthly meeting held July 10th, there was a large turn-out of members to hear an address by Mr. Blaylock on his experiences as a Canary Fancier, for which he was tendered a hearty vote of thanks.—Geo. Harver, Sec.

TONG AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

At our meeting on July 13th, occasion was taken to give to Mr. B. Worsman, one of our Vice-Presidents and a very active worker in the society, our heartiest good wishes for his future success in the United States of America. He sails on July 27th from Liverpool on the "Saxonia." I am sure that all fanciers along with us will wish Mr. and Mrs. B. Worsman God-speed.—J. Smith, Hon. Sec.

CHESTER C.B.F.A.

Monthly meeting held at Nag's Head Cocoa House, July 6th. Mr. Crane presided over a capital attendance. The schedule for annual show, December 4th, was discussed, and an extended classification in Norwich and Yorkshires was agreed upon. On the proposition of Mr. Whally, seconded by Mr. Morris, it was decided to add three classes for field-moulted British birds, viz, Goldfinch, Bullfinch and Linnet; also two classes for Mules, and Hybrids, yellow and buff, as our last entries were very good in numbers, one class only being provided. The society is making good headway, and fanciers from North Wales are making enquiries as to membership. All present reported good results, good clutches, and good, strong birds.—J. Swindley, Hon. Sec.

THE SOUTHERN YORKS. C.C.

The patronage of the club has been given to the following shows: cup competition: Battersea, Gloucester, Weybridge, Swansea, L.C.B.A., and the Palace. Trophy: Plymouth, Gloucester, Southend, Wimbledon, L.C.B.A. and L. and P.O.S., and Dulwich and Peekham (joint). Novice: L.C.B.A., Battersea, Wimbledon, Southend, and Weybridge. 10/6 specials (champion): Cardiff, Maesteg, and Frome. 10/6 specials (novice): Cardiff and Barnstaple. The novice support is yet to be given to one or more show (in the West of England or South Wales, if possible. Will any Society desirous of this please make application to me at once? The club will also give another 10/6 special to a novice show in South Wales; application for this can also be made. —J. W. Rennie, Hon. Sec., The Junction Hotel, Andover.

GRAVESEND, NORTHFLEET F.S.

Monthly meeting held at the Anglo-Saxons' Hall on July 6th. Mr. A. H. Terry occupied the chair, supported by a large number of members. The judges for the open show to be held November 3rd and 4th were appointed, these being Messrs. Broomhead, Billett, North, Waters and Coupland. It was arranged to make the classes still more popular, and with an up-to-date fee and prizes it was hoped that the show entry would prove a record. As on former occasions the committee appointed have always done their utmost, and given exhibitors unbounded satisfaction, so it is hoped that this year will prove no exception to the rule. It was decided to hold a members' show at a date to be fixed at the next meeting. Several other items were discussed, including an outing, and the meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman.—E. R. Fox, Hon. Sec.

GRAND UNITED METROPOLITAN.

Meeting of delegates, held on July 14th, at the "Raglan," Aldersgate-street, E.C. Present: Messrs. Aslin (in the chair), Heppel, Milledge, and Walton (South Met. F.A.), Bird, Kendal, Skey and Thursby (Ealing F.S.), Amery, King and Clarke (Islington F.A.), Ager, Moss, Smalley and Watson (Civil Service F.A.), Smith, Freer, Butler and Vickers (East Ham F.S.). Correspondence was read from Messrs. Kendal and Dent, offering a challenge cup to the management of the show. The secretary was instructed to write and thank donors for the cup, which was viewed by the delegates present. The reply to the legal query re binding the societies to the rules was read, and finally dealt with. The secretary reported that the final number of societies joining the Grand United Metropolitan Show was five, viz., those named above. It was agreed that 500 copies of the rules be printed and distributed among the members of each society. The following were elected officers for 1909: Chairman, Mr. Aslin; vice-chairman, Mr. Skey; treasurer, M. Smalley; assist. secretary, M. Ager; secretary, A. Watson, 116, Maurice-avenue, Noel Park, Wood Green, N. A very lengthy discussion ensued on the question of entry fee, prize money, and the number in a class to constitute a guarantee. Several suggestions were put forward, and in the end it was resolved that the matter be deferred till next meeting. A sub-committee was formed to find a suitable hall for the show, and report result to next meeting. The usual vote of thanks to the chair closed the meeting.—A. Watson, Hon. Sec.

DUNDALK C.B.A.

Annual meeting, held July 9th, Dr. Lavery presiding. A statement of accounts was presented, and officers for the coming year were elected. The accounts showed that 76 members paid their subscriptions last year, a fact which redounds to the credit of the popular hon. treasurer. Owing to pressure of business Mr. Niblock was obliged to resign the position of hon. sec. His resignation was accepted with regret, and a vote of thanks was given that gentleman for the services he rendered during the past season. The officers for the coming year are: President, Mr. J. D. Rowe; vice-presidents, Dr. Lavery and S. H. Moynagh, Esq., solicitor; hon. treasurer, Mr. W. Keating; committee, Messrs. M. Byrne, J. Murray, P. McArdle, P. Grimes, Thos. McKitterick, L. Goodman, H. J. Niblock, G. Twibill, A. Murgatroyd, and M. Kirk.—P. J. Gaskin, Hon. Sec.

LANCASTER AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Kindly allow me to thank Mr. H. F. Middleton for the invitation given to all cage bird fanciers in this district to attend the potatoe pie supper and entertainment provided by the treasurer of the Society. The supper, lectures, and entertainment that followed were a great success. Mr. Middleton, through pressure of business, was unable to attend, but thoughtfully provided several vases of artificial flowers (made, I believe, by his mother), which were used for table decorations, and after the entertainment were sold for the benefit of the Society. The handsome 25 guinea All-England Challenge Cup and 4-guinea electro-plated tea and coffee service were on view, and many envious eyes were fastened upon them. The members present seemed to think that competition for such handsome prizes ought not to be confined to all England, but open to the other three countries. It was decided, after a rather heated discussion, that the cup be awarded for most points for four nominated birds, the entries to be opened by the committee, as the members have a keen recollection of how the last cup was won. The meeting was the best attended, and the proceedings the most enthusiastic in the history of the Society. The absence of Mr. Middleton was regretted by all present, but he is assured of a very warm welcome when he can arrange to appear amongst us.—John Vic.

The Shows.

WOOD GREEN F.F.A.

First Young Stock Show held on July 13th, at Parish Hall, Station-road. We had a good entry and the show was voted a success by everyone. We had a great number of visitors, and ought to make some new members as a result. The medal for best in show was won by Mr. C. W. Penuy with a Crest-bred. Other prize winners were: Messrs. Brooks, Ayling, Pettit, Callegari, Griffin, Boston, Clarke, Pledger and Clay. Mr. J. Robson judged.—T. CALLEGARI, Sec.

DOVER & DIS. P.P., ETC., & C.B.S.

Very successful F.F. Show held in the Barton-road Boys' School, June 30th, when some very fine Yorkshires were staged. Mr. E. Birch judged and gave every satisfaction.

Second Nest Feather Show of Canaries and Foreign birds, held July 14th, at headquarters, Y.M.C.A. The entries were hardly up to expectations, but the quality of the birds was good. Some very nice Yorkshires were staged, and the Norwich were a success, whilst the Foreign birds exhibited by Mr. Ward had many admirers. A good number of fanciers and visitors attended. Mr. B. Evans judged and gave every satisfaction.

BEDFORD C.B.S.

July 15th was Regatta day, and in the evening the members held a regatta amongst the birds, the competition between them being quite as keen as the competition on the river, no less than 59 entries being made in the four Norwich classes for young birds. Mr. Martin (Wellingboro') made the awards, and must have found some difficulty in separating some of the birds. He, however, succeeded in giving entire satisfaction. The type and quality of most of the birds were all that could be desired,and gave promise of a capital entry at the annual show on October 28th.

WATFORD C.B.S.

Bad though the breeding season has been in Watford, the entries at the annual F.F. Show, held at the Conservative Hall, July 17th, totalled within half-a-dozen of last year's figure. In champion Norwich and Yorkshires, Mr. Buckingham was easily ahead with nice, typical, close-feathered specimens. Messrs. Wright and Perkins also showed some smart exhibits. Mr. Pratty had matters all his own way in Crests and A.O.V. champions, but the best Crest in the show was that shown by Mr. Youens in the Novice class. Amongst the Norwich and Yorkshire Novices some grand birds were shown. The British bird section, as is usual at Watford, contained a lot of very high-class and well-known exhibits, whilst the Foreigners were the centre of much attraction. Special for best Hardbill British fell to a well-marked, rich-coloured Chaffinch of Mr. Goodall's, Mr. Shirley's handsome Meadow Pipit taking that for Softbills. In the Foreign bird section, special for best exhibit went to a gorgeous superb Tanager of Mr. Watts'.

LOWESTOFT & DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual F.F. Show held in club room at Fox and Hounds on July 10th. Through the energy of the secretary, Mr. W. Lang, jun., with that of that veteran of Canarydom in Lowestoft, Mr. H. Hart, and a genuine committee, a most creditable lot of youngsters were staged. We understand, speaking generally, that the season in the district has not been a good one, but what was lacking in quantity was made up for in quality. The winning Norwich were good, typical specimens, and had the appearance of making fine birds. Mr. W. E. Greaves judged.

CL. YELL.: 1, Lang, jun., fine typical bird, splendid quality and colour; 2, Hart, fine quality; 3, Wigg, similar. BUFF: 1, Catchpole, first-rate bird all round; 2, Hatch, quite a youngster, A1 type, head and back, with a good moult will be heard of later on; 3, Rickards, well shown, good quality, type and colour; vhc, Cooper, Hart; hc, Mumford. TKD. YELL.: 1, Hart, marked left wing, well-made youngster, very promising. BUFF: 1, vhc, Cooper, dark tail, another good Nor. type, fine in feather, nice colour and quality; 2, vhc, Castleton, very similar, marked neck and wings; 3, Clarke, cap and wing marked, nice quality, well shown; hc, Hart; c, Hatch; a good class. CREST: 1, Hart, buff, neat crest, good body, marked wings; 2, Rickards, close up; 3, Lowe, nearly green, crest neat. C.B.: 1, Hart, green, well shaped head, good body, heavily feathered; 2, 3, Lowe; vhc, Rickards. CINN.: 1, Cooper, nice youngster, well moulted and fed, will make a good bird. A.O.V. CAN. OR MULE: 1, 2, Kemp, Goldfinch and Can. Mules, 1st evenly marked, 2nd marked eyes, wings and saddle, well shown; 3, Blackburn. Prize money is paid on the sliding scale. In addition to this a special of 2s. to given to each 1st prize, and 1s. each for every 2nd and 3rd prize.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Young Bird Show held at St. Luke's Schools, North-street, on July 10th. The entries numbered 175 in 23 classes. The judging was over, and the show opened at 5 p.m. prompt, but the attendance was only moderate, owing no doubt to the heavy showers. The members scoring most points with six highest birds at this show were: Mr. D. Duncan, jun., 38; Mr. W. Harland, 35; and Messrs. Chew and Stokoe, 33. The points scored with birds nominated for the Leeds cup and president's cup were: Mr. F. Farrer, 19.31; Mr. G. Stead, 19.29; and Mr. W. Johnson, 18.29, respectively; these being closely followed by several other members, which leaves the competition in an interesting position. Specials were won in the Novice Norwich Section by Messrs. W. Harland and D. McMillan, and in the Novice Yorks. by Mr. Buckley. Mr. M. Broadley judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction.

ALNWICK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Members' Nest Feather Show (also five classes for old birds) held July 17th in the Town Hall, a splendid room for a cage bird show. The entries for a club so young came up exceedingly well, totalling nearly 100 birds. There was a good muster of fanciers, and everything passed off satisfactorily, so the committee had every right to be pleased with themselves. Prize for best Canary was won by Mr. Straughan, and that for best British by Mr. Staig. Mr. A. Dippie (Morpeth) judged, and all were satisfied with his awards.

HETTON-LE-HOLE AND DIS. C.B.S.

Annual Young Bird (Nest Feather) Show held in the Crown Inn, July 10th, when they had a record entry, having 110 entries in 17 classes. Quality, as well as quantity, was very conspicuous, some grand young birds making their debut on the show bench; with a good moult they will be heard of again. The attendance was only moderate, owing probably to there being so many counter attractions in the district. Mrs. Hy. Fenwick won silver medal for most entries, also special for most points, Mr. Hy. Wilson winning special for second most points. Mr. A. Brown (Gateshead) ably officiated as judge, and gave every satisfaction.

Monthly meeting held in the Chorus room of the Mechanics' Institution, July 17th, when a members' F.F. Show took place. Mr. T. Poole kindly placed the awards, giving every satisfaction. Mr. H. Smith had on view three fine specimens of the Lesser Spotted Woodpecker, their condition being the subject of much favourable comment. In answer to questions, he stated that he fed them on bananas, ants' eggs, flies, mealworms and Pheasants' meat. They fed themselves before they were a month old, and were very frugal eaters. They had a bath every day, and were kept in a flight three feet square, lined with bark and tin. He said they were very rare in this district, and the few pairs found here could generally be located near the same spots

F.F. Show held July 17th in the Stock Room of Mackworth Hotel, kindly placed at the Society's disposal by Mr. R. E. Jones. Success crowned the efforts of the hard-working officials, headed by the well-known Mr. Alf. Hitchings, Hon. Sec. The gate was far above the average, and many fresh faces were seen. The show was nicely laid out and made quite a pretty spectacle. Norwich and Borders were the best. The exhibits totalled over 100. Messrs. G. J. Rees and B. Prosser were down for judging, but owing to unforeseen circumstances, Mr. Rees could not be present. His place was kindly taken by Mr. D. A. S. Longden. Both gentlemen gave highest satisfaction.

YARM, EAGLESCLIFFE C.B.S.

Annual F.F. Show, held July 15th, in Town Hall. Considering the rather disappointing breeding season, a goodly number of youngsters were staged, with a few classes for British birds. The winning Yorkshires were birds of great promise. Norwich were also a typical lot. The exhibits were well staged, and the awards well placed by Mr. J. Wilkinson, who gave every satisfaction. There is keen competition among the novices this year, they having a section to themselves, which does much to increase the interest among young fanciers.

Killing a Swift with a Whip.

Frank Green, a young labourer, of Glastonbury, was recently summoned, under the Protection of Wild Birds Act, for unlawfully snaring and killing a Swift during the close season.—The defendant, according to the "Central Somerset Gazette," pleaded guilty, but said that he killed the bird accidentally.

P.C. Hillman deposed that on Tuesday, June 8th, he saw the defendant in Chillwell Street, and told him that he (witness) was making inquiries about a bird that the defendant had cruelly ill-treated the night before. The defendant said, "I don't know that I cruelly illtreated it. I knocked the bird down with a whip, and Wilfrid King, who was with me, had nothing to do with it." Witness accompanied the defendant to the garden of the house where he lived, and he dug up the bird and showed it to him. He said that he had no intent to hurt it, and was sure that the bird was dead when it reached the ground.

Inspector Robert Rigg said that the defendant might have been proceeded against on a charge of cruelty, as he brought the bird down with a whip and then killed it by tramping upon it. When witness saw the defendant he said that he had been able to bring a bird down before. It was a serious offence, as the Swift was one of the most harmless and useful birds we had.

The Chairman admonished the defendant, and warned him against breaking the law, besides killing useful birds. He was then allowed to go on payment of the costs of the summons.

Country Rambles

Great Horton Good Intent O.S.

A party of about 30 members and their friends, wives and children set out on July 10th for Guiseley by train, leaving Mid. Station by the 2.2 p.m., and then on to Menstone, via fields, woods and hedgerows. We had both sunshine and rain. We kept the train waiting five minutes for us in Bradford Station; in fact, there was such a to-do over it when our secretary came chasing on to the platform and then jumped into a luggage van, he looked as if he'd just dropped into t' soft-moult. But coming back, the train kept us waiting, for revenge. Of course, t' railway company hed odd t' brass then, do you see. Arriving at Menstone a splendid tea was soon put out of sight by the hunger-marchers at our old friend's (Joe Kay'e, "Swallow Nest Cottage"). Nah for it. "Hello, Joe, lad, owt fresh?" "Nah," he said, "nowt partick; only I hevn't a nod hen 'ats browt a deead young un up this time." Then we had another shower. Joe ses t'ut t' wimmen follow me; and he jumped ower some railings abaat 10 foot high. I kept mi E on, but I didn't see noa wimmen foller. After tea, we had another shower. Well, yer can't say 'at it wor a dry do. Meeting in a shed in Menstone schoolyard; lecture by Joe Kay, subject, "Big Buff Hens." Then we had a ramble raand some fields and sludge and dirt, and then were sailing towards t' station, where we arrived threequarters of an hour too sooin. Lucky, for yer owt to a seen t' raids they made on shops. Well, we did very well considering what sort of a day it was. Better luck next time.—H. CHUBB, assistant secretary.

SOME BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1909 SEASON.

Notes on the results of the present breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others, and must be accompanied by the sender's name and address in every case.

Forfar and District C.B.I.S.

The breeding season so far has not been very encouraging in this district. The first round was practically a failure, owing to the changeable weather, it being quite mild throughout the day and exceptionally cold at night. Some had plenty of young birds, and the hens feed well for a week, but after that they would not sit at nights, with the result that the young were found dead full of food next morning. But things seem to be shaping better now. As far as I can gather, the fanciers of Montrose, Brechin and Arbroath are having a bad time of it also. Our results up to now are: Messrs. J. Bowman 20, D. Kydd 19, P. Taylor 15, W. Brown 16, Js. Grewar 8, Jn. Grewar 9, W. Grewar 50; the foregoing are all Norwich. Messrs. C. Kenned 30, and J. Campbell 21. Messrs. P. Falconer, J. Stevenson, D. Lawson are all doing fairly well, all with Borders. Mr. J. Fyfe has got a number of Greenie and Linnet Mules. I have four hens yet to rise, when I will be finished for the season, which has been a record for me.—W. GREWAR, sec.

Twitterings.

I have sold out all my Lizard Canaries through advertising in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. F. M. Philcox (Woking).

Messrs. Rutherford and Bright have dissolved partnership by mutual arrangement, writes Mr. Wm. Rutherford (West Roddymoor).

Whitchaven C.B.S., writes Mr. T. C. Crawhall, hon. secretary of the Northern Y.C.C., have also applied for our patronage.

Owing to the entries being small, write Messrs. Bohn and Welch, hon. secretaries of the Stratton, Bude Show, August 2nd, we are compelled to extend the date for the closing of same to July 28th (1st post).

Mr. James Johnston (Kilmarnock), has been appointed to judge Norwich and Border sections of our open show on November 6th next, writes Mr. J. Robertson, jun., secretary of the Darvel O.S.

Should any fanciers be visiting Grantham, writes Mr. W. Ratcliff (Grantham), if they will drop a postcard to Mr. Allen, 82, Alexandria Road, they will receive a welcome to have a look at our birds.

Kindly thank all who answered my advertisement in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, re-exchange, writes Mr. T. Sherratt (Burton). I could only send answers to those who sent a stamp for reply, as I had so many inquiries.

I have very reluctantly had to discontinue my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS, as I find I cannot cope with the orders I have got through same, writes Mr. H. Orford (Manchester). I am getting now a great many repeat orders.

Will the fancier who bought a Yorkshire Canary from the gift class at Wood Green Show, writes Mr. T. Callegari, hon. secretary of the Wood Green F.F.A., please communicate with me at 17, Gladstone Avenue, Wood Green?

Mr. Chas. Houlton has been appointed, write Messrs. Wilkinson and Danby, hon. secretaries of the Yarm, Eaglescliffe and Dis. C.B.S., to judge at our open show on January 8th, 1910, when there will be a treat in store for exhibitors.

I was pleased to see your remarks about hens being passed off for cocks, writes Mr. J. W. Norris, hon. secretary of the British Roller C.C. Something ought to be done to protect the public, but the only thing is, I suppose, to warn them.

The list of members of the Border Fancy Canary Club, writes Mr. M. Jamieson, the hon. secretary, 3, Green Terrace, Hawick, N.B., will be sent to the printers in a few days' time. Intending members should therefore send in their names at once.

Kindly notify secretaries of societies of my change of address to 132, Chapel Lane, Wigan, where I am opening a shop for the sale of birds and seeds, and all kinds of fanciers' appliances, cages, etc., writes Mr. W. Dyer, assistant secretary of the Wigan and Dis. Cage Bird Society.

J. Gostling, the well-known bird specialist, Bolton, writes to say that he is giving a gold medal and a silver medal at the annual show, October 16th and 17th, of the Bolton and Dis. Ornithological Society, for the two hottest fed birds fed on his colour feeds. Open to all. See advertisement.—(ADVT.)

Kentish societies desirous of availing themselves of the patronage of the Kent County Cage Bird Association, writes Mr. Geo. Sanderson, the hon. secretary, are reminded that applications must be made to me at 17, Beaconsfield Avenue, Dover, not later than August 4th, as on that day the committee will proceed to allot same.

The British Roller C.C. book of rules, etc., for 1909, reveals the fact that the club is "going very strong" with a membership of over 150. The 1908 balance-sheet shows cash in hand of £7 1s. 6d. which, considering the amount brought into the accounts from the previous year (£2 18s. 8d.), is highly satisfactory. The secretary is Mr. J. W. Norris, 31, Scylla Road, Peckham Rye, London, S.E.

I am only newly home from New Zealand, writes Mr. Peter Wylie, of Kelty (late of Paisley), after being away for two years. I have been a British bird fancier for 17 years, and could not sacrifice my hobby; that is what brought me home again. I am sending three CAGE BIRDS away to New Zealand this week. They are very far behind with the bird hobby there. I send my best wishes for every success to CAGE BIRDS.

Mr. W. Mundell (Bradford), will judge at our annual open show, writes Mr. N. Peake, secretary of the Hanley and Dis. C.B.S.

We note that Mr. James Dewar, the respected Edinburgh fancier and judge, is again to officiate as a judge at the great show of Belgian Canaries to be held on August 8th, at Antwerp.

A homing pigeon, No. Derby 19910 ('06) and 556, landed on our boat coming from Bordeaux, writes Mr. Thomas Hoey, 43, Rockingham Street, Liverpool. I have same at above address.

We hear that a new Linnet Club has been started at South Moor, West Stanley, S.O., and that Mr. Wm. Barrass, of 24, Poulton Terrace, West Stanley, R.S.O., is the hon. secretary.

The Millom and Dis. C.B.A. have engaged Mr. J. H. Roe to judge at their forthcoming show, to be held on November 19th and 20th, writes Mr. Wm. J. Thomas, the hon. secretary, when we expect the fanciers to give us a bumper. We are providing a good classification.

The Sale O.S. have engaged Mr. A. Wellings to judge at their Open Show on November 26th and 27th, with Mr. Barnes, writes Mr. J. Irlam, the secretary. The next meeting will be held on August 2nd, when it is hoped the members will have finished their hand-rearing and attend.

CAGE BIRDS, has done much towards raising the standard of the Fancy all the world over, writes Mr. G. T. Jones, secretary of the Welsh C.B.C. Personally I owe a great deal to CAGE BIRDS, for all the knowledge I possess has been derived from same. I shall always do my best to extend its circulation.

On picking up last week's CAGE BIRDS I was agreeably surprised to see your illustration of my Norwich birds on your front cover. I must congratulate your Mr. Norman on his sketches, which I consider lifelike. You will be pleased to hear that the hen has already reared seven young birds, and is again sitting on five eggs.—A. HUMPHRIES (York).

We learn that the Exeter and Dis. C.B.S. are having a drawing competition among the lads in three of the large schools in Exeter, with the sanction of the Education authority. These drawings will be done in connection with the society's November exhibition, and silver and gold medals will be presented to the most successful eight boys of the three schools.

"Bird Notes"—the journal of the Foreign Bird Club—for July is a profusely illustrated issue, and contains several interesting articles including those by Mr. H. Willford ("My Birds and their Doings—nesting notes for 1909"), Mr. E. J. Brook ("My Birds of Paradise"), and Mr. R. Suggitt ("Nesting of Blackcaps and Snow-buntings"). There are also several book reviews and a number of editorial notes.

Allow me to thank you for my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS. I am only a working man, and had never advertised before, and I did not know what to expect from it. But I soon had a reply to it on Saturday morning, and a genuine deal too. I had other offers as well. One came on the Sunday, and the replies keep rolling in. I shall not forget when I want to sell or exchange anything to send an advertisement to good old CAGE BIRDS, of which I have been a reader for three years.—W. J. STAGG (Birmingham).

We learn that the society known as the Strathnaver Fairy Circle has just concluded a busy winter's work in London's hospitals and poorer districts, where they have cheered over 15,000 old and young folk with their flowers and pipe music, Highland dancing, and Scottish and other songs. The S.F.C. has just presented to the Royal Caledonian Asylum Schools at Bushey, Herts, a fine set of 27 glass cases of British birds and animals, to adorn the walls of that excellent Scottish Institution's large hall. The society is arranging to move into more commodious headquarters in the autumn, in view of the growth of the work. The hon. secretary is Miss A. C. M. Sutherland, 7, Balcorry Arcade, Shaftesbury Avenue, London.

The following appeared in a recent "Yorkshire Observer," and will doubtless interest readers:—A correspondent sends a remarkable story of a Robin which struck up a warm friendship with the owner of a residence near Shipley Glen. The bird used to come through a small opening into his greenhouse and sing to him as he worked at his potting, etc., he talking to it at the same time. By-and-by it brought a mate and they made a nest in one of the corners. All went well until the eggs were hatched, when somehow or other only the male bird was left to look after the chicks himself. Right well he fulfilled the "mothering." Unfortunately, one day last week the bird found its way into the bath-room of the house, and was accidentally shut up there all night. When the owner of the house went in the morning for his bath he found it there, and immediately let it out. He himself as soon as he was dressed followed to the greenhouse, and to his great regret he found two of the chicks dead, and a third nearly so—presumably with exposure. Then to his amazement the bird flew at him, pecking him in the neck quite savagely. It then went out, and after a short absence came back and carried the whole of the five chicks, dead and alive, away, he knew not where, and they are friends no longer.

I have been very successful with my advertisements in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. E. Barrett (Thame). I am certain "C.B." is the best paper to advertise in, and I wish it every success, which it really deserves.

We have engaged Mr. R. J. Howe, of Wellingboro', to judge the British, Hybrid and foreign bird classes at our Open Show, on December 1st, writes Mr. J. H. de Maillet, hon. secretary of Birmingham C.B.S.

The judges for our Open Show, to be held October 30th, are Mr. J. Patterson (Chirnside), all Canary classes, and Mr. J. Clark (Rothsey), all Mule, British, and foreign bird classes, writes Mr. C. C. Irvine, secretary of Ayr and Dis. C.B.C.

I have taken in CAGE BIRDS since its first appearance, writes Mr. Richard Moore (Ballinasloe). I am delighted to see its great and worthy success. It is in my humble opinion the best and most instructive pennyworth of bird news that has ever come amongst bird lovers. I heartily wish it the greatest possible success.

The following gentlemen will judge at Airdrie and Coatbridge Annual Show, to be held on Saturday, November 6th, writes Mr. A. Murdock, the secretary: Scotch Fancies, Mr. Menzies (Edinburgh) and Mr. Smith (Glasgow); Norwich, Mr. Watson (Kilmarnock).

Intending exhibitors from afar, writes Mr. R. Lolestrong, hon. secretary of the Harleeh Sports and Cage Bird Show, can rest assured that their birds will have every attention, and that I shall be happy to take care of them over the Sunday, and return them on the Monday morning. They will all be quite safe in my bird-room.

I have been a regular reader of CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. T. Walker (Gloucester), for about three years. I was first introduced to CAGE BIRDS by having a specimen copy given me at our local show, and I have kept up an acquaintance with the journal ever since. I am a British bird fancier, and if I am ever in a fix about anything I require to know I simply have to refer to my scrap book, for I make it a practice to cut out replies to querists that I think are of service to me, and stick them in a scrap book for reference.

I regret that through business changes, writes Mr. W. Nichols, I have to part with all my birds, and leave my friends at Norwich. Since I have been in the Fancy I have always found your paper, CAGE BIRDS, a great help. In leaving Norwich I have had to resign the honorable post of chairman to the Norwich Hand-in-Hand Society, and auditor for the Norwich All-England Society, and you can imagine I leave them with regret. But one day I hope to return to the Fancy. I thank you and your staff for the treats given us from time to time in good old CAGE BIRDS.

Yorkshire Canary Club.

Will societies desirous of the patronage of the Y.C.C., and who have not already done so, please send in their applications for same before July 31st, along with date of show and judge appointed?—J. GREAVES, hon. secretary, 279, Hollings Road, Bradford.

Southern Norwich P.C.

Several members have written as to the balance-sheet not being issued with rule book. The accounts have been audited by Messrs. Heath and Simpson, and passed as correct, also accepted by committee, but as I want to put several items in my report as treasurer, which have not been quite settled, I beg the indulgence of members until the first week of August. Then I will post on (with a full detail of the work), the financial position of the club.—F. S. MATTHES, hon. secretary.

The Parrot Burglar Alarm.

People who object to having burglars about the house, and yet do not see their way to sleeping with a dagger, a sword, or a revolver by their pillow, might (suggests the "Evening Standard") well imitate the example set by the ex-Sultan Abdul Hamid, and keep a Cockatoo in the pantry, a Parrot in the dining-room, and a Parroquet in their bed-room. These birds are nothing if not intelligent, and would make excellent watch-dogs. Their value also came out in the earthquake at Messina, when a young lady's life was saved by her Parrot keeping on calling out among the ruins, "Maria! Maria!" until she was discovered by the exploring party. If silly (proverbially silly) geese saved the invested Capitol from the marauding Gauls, how much more might a Parrot save our invested capital from the burglar?

Chapter XXXII.—My African Crimson Finches.

If the wish were granted, would not the love in many hearts—not in yours or mine, but in the case of the inferior person—be endangered by familiarity and become first tepid and then cold? It is a perilous temptation even to those who love birds the best, not only to exaggerate the importance of colour but also to deprecate the worth of common things. When we find ourselves among the lords and ladies, we cannot be expected to retain all our former veneration for the squire and the clergyman. "How can you keep these common little birds," I was once asked; "everybody has them?" And why should not everyone have them? May not the eye of the poor and humble be gladened by things beautiful, merely because they are so common? If you and I were valued by our looks, how much should we fetch?

Every spring little African Finches come over in tens of thousands, packed in low box cages like herrings in a barrel. They can literally just hop on and off the perch to feed, and then fight their way back to a roosting place. These cages are about 10ins. high, very deep in width, with perches gradually rising from the front to the rear. What the heat on the top-perch must be I should not like to say; it must be well on to tropical. A nasty musty smell comes from the cage, as, of course, there is no proper ventilation, and besides, the cages are never cleaned out; as a matter of fact, to do so would be impossible.

Strange to say, when these cages first arrive, containing, I believe, about 400 little Finches, the birds are generally in very good condition. The time to buy is immediately they reach the dealers from the Continent—Marseilles usually. They arrive as a rule on a Tuesday, and I have often hovered around the East End bird shops on that day to have first pick.

After the birds have been picked over two or three times, they get flustered and worried, and then they begin to go wrong, and besides, they have, in addition to the great heat of the cage, to breathe the "air" of the bird shop, in which birds have been stored from time immemorial, and where probably the only ventilation comes from the occasional opening of the shop door.

A Wholesale Order.

I often thought I would buy a whole box and turn them out in a bird-room and watch their gradual improvement; but my dream has never been realised. If two or three friends would join at a box, the little birds would come very cheap, and probably with care there would be very few losses. Of course the great thing to remember would be to lower the temperature very gradually. To buy a box of these little Finches, and, with the best intentions in the world to turn them straight out into a bird-room, would be to invite endless deaths. In fact, probably the whole lot would die. The way to go to work would be to put the birds by fifties into box cages, and so gradually harden them off.

In these dealers' cages all sorts of little Finches come over, and amongst them there is always a large proportion of African Fire Finches. In the minds of most people African Firefinches and Death are synonymous terms. I don't know why, because if only healthy to start with, I do not consider African Firefinches any more delicate than others of their kind. So many are afflicted with bird fever, a species of bird typhus, and if this is the case, they are doomed, and not only they, but all that may be placed with them.

The majority of the Firefinches that arrive each spring are young birds in the nesting feathers, little snuff-coloured things with here and there a dash of crimson. Now and then you will find an old cock in all the glory of claret plumage.

There is no more lovely little creature than a cock Crimson Finch in full plumage and good tight feather, but how many can boast of such? And yet there is no reason why they should not. I do not pretend to be anything out of the way, and I have often had a dozen Firefinches darting about in lovely condition. Of course we must expect failures, and they come to teach us the way to success. Time is the best of all teachers. He not only exposes our mistakes, but shows us how to correct them, and so to learn to bear any disappointments, like the Irishman, who said that his pig had not weighed as much as he expected, but then he never thought it would.

Cheap, if Healthy.

One good thing about Firefinches is this: they are well within the reach of all. Three-and-sixpence a pair is not ruinous, but still, three-and-sixpence soon mounts up into a respectable sum, if your Firefinches die at the usual rate.

The best plan is to wait before buying until you can go and pick the birds yourself. Firefinches newly come over will not stand a lot of throwing about by porters, and delays at draughty stations. Railway clerks are horribly curious, and they think nothing of tearing off the paper to see what is inside. The consequence is that the birds get a chill, and on arrival they appear to suggest the old gladiatorial song, "Morituri te Salutant."

Well, then, possess your soul in patience, and wait for the annual holiday. Picture the joy of rushing round from one East End bird-shop to another. Then you need not be seriously alarmed that you will not be able to get any. There are some birds of which it is now or never; but Firefinches, like the poor, are always with us—at any rate, up to July. If you are making a stay, put off buying till the day before you leave. Then go to the shop you most favour, and pick out a dozen Firefinches and put them in a small box cage and spend an hour in watching them when they have settled down.

The "stirring up" caused by catching will make the most moribund just a bit lively; but the spryness will not last. In a quarter of an hour the "doomed" will be sitting all puffed out, and with their heads under their wings. Mark these and put them back in the dealer's cage, until you think you have got, say, half a dozen healthy ones. Never mind broken tails or damaged plumage, if only they look tight and sleek in body. Pack the cage up in thick brown paper, taking care to put in plenty of seed and a water tin with a sponge in it; and then do not open them any more till you get home, even if it makes you nearly burst.

On reaching home, take off the paper and have a peep. If it is as I think, you will find your birds in good fettle and quite lively. Now, if you have such a thing, give them some fresh ants' eggs or rose aphides, and see how they will go for them. Let them stop in the little cage for a few days in a nice, sunny room. If they seem to be going on alright, don't be in too great a hurry to move them, especially if the weather is at all English. When you think they are fairly fit, put them into a big box cage with plenty of nice sleeping boxes and let them stay there for a month.

I know it all sounds very tedious, but it is the only way. When summer is far advanced, put them into a bird-room facing due south, and let them enjoy themselves. It is wonderful to see how quickly they will get into proper plumage, and there is nothing handsomer than a pair of Firefinches in full feather; but how few have ever seen them? The cock is like a little ball of deepest crimson, with queer little white spectacles, whilst his partner in her snuff-coloured gown reminds you of a little demure Quakeress.

The Breeding & Management of the Green Canary.

By S. HADWIN.

A lecture given before the Sale O.S. on April 26th.

Sand is an important thing in connection with the moult, and should be of a sharp, flinty character. The iron contained in flint grit is very beneficial to the new feather, and is also a tonic, whilst the sharp particles grind the food, and so assist digestion. This last item is particularly applicable to young birds, and there is no fear of their choking themselves, even if the particles are on the large side.

Baths are very beneficial at all seasons of the year, and especially during breeding and moulting. They are the finest conditioner we have at any season, and should be given at least twice a week all the year round. They should be given betwixt 10 and 12 o'clock in the morning, providing the weather is bright, and they must not be given when hens are sitting until after the tenth day, as in the early stages of incubation it is not advisable to risk chilling the eggs. After the tenth day they will help to hatch the eggs.

During moult the paradoxical thing happens. Baths help to get the old feathers off, and they also bind the new. The show season follows the moult very closely; in fact, it frequently happens that one's birds are not through the moult when the season starts. Some birds are very slow in getting rid of the pen feathers about the head. In such case if the bird is gently caught and the head well brushed from the beak backwards with a soft tooth brush, the fining down process will be much assisted.

Training Birds for Show.

All show birds should be trained to run backwards and forwards from the stock cage to the show cage, and this training should commence as soon as the young are a month old. At this stage they are very easily taught to follow the guidance of the running stick, and once having been taught they never seem to lose the knack of things. At the same time, it is advisable to keep it upright through the moult, as it teaches the birds to steady down in the show cages, and does away with a lot of that proverbial nervousness during moult.

A very good plan is to slightly damp them in the spraying cage, and then run them into the show cages for a little while. In most cases when damped the birds will concern themselves with pluming operations, and so forget to sample the wires of the cage, a thing they are fond of doing unless otherwise occupied. In all cases where possible this spraying should be done early in the morning of the day it is intended to send the birds off to a show. Just sufficiently spray them to make them plume themselves, and get thoroughly dry before being packed up.

Show cages should be got ready the night before and the labels attached. It is a bad plan to start fixing labels on the cages after the birds are in them. A frightened dash about a show cage will often account for a broken flight or tail feather, thus discounting the bird's chance on the show bench.

If a little crushed oats is sprinkled on the top of the sand in the stock cages, and frequent baths are given, Greens will seldom require washing; all they will want is to be clean when they are being got ready for sending to the show. Glycerine is frequently recommended added to the spraying water; but it is a dangerous thing in the hands of a novice on account of its stickiness. A far better and a perfectly safe agent is bay rhum. A teaspoonful of this to a pint of water is sufficient. This is very cleansing, very refreshing, and puts a nice sheen on the feather.

Show cages should be of the standard pattern of the specialist clubs. They should be as clean as a new pin, and the best plan is to put nothing on the bottom of cages but plain white Canary seed. Nothing looks cleaner, and the expense is slight when the advantage is considered.

Half a teaspoonful of maw seed put on top of seed box when packing up is a good thing when the birds are unpacked; they get this little tit bit, and it pulls them together after the journey. A dose of the iron mixture when they come back from a show will also very often be found beneficial.

Travelling cases should be just large enough to receive the cases, not so that they fit tight, as then the birds are upset when one is taking the cages out. At the same time, room for the cages to rock about in is not desirable.

A Little but Important Point.

There is just one more point in connection with showing that I should like to draw attention to. It may seem a little thing, but it is most important; that is the way to tie the address labels on the travelling cases. All show secretaries send out with cage labels a large address label with a hole at each end. Two holes corresponding with the address label should be bored in the top of the travelling cases, and a piece of string run through them and under and over the top of the case. This string should be tied lightly, so that the show stewards can turn it over after unpacking the birds without tearing the labels. If labels are only tied at one end railway companies often make the mistake of sending birds back home instead of to the show, not being able to differentiate betwixt the outward and homeward addresses. So you see a simple little thing like the tying on of a label may mean the difference betwixt getting to the show or not.

In conclusion, gentlemen, I would suggest sending entries along early. Send your birds in good trim, and do everything possible to assist the show authorities. You must remember that you have only your own little lot to consider, whilst show stewards have the whole show to handle; so that any little thing you can do to help makes it better for the show people, and infinitely better for yourself.

I have to thank you for your kind attention, and if there are any points overlooked I shall do my best to answer them.

The Discussion.

Questions were then asked, which Mr. Hadwin replied to, to the satisfaction of all. The following were the chief among the questions put and answered.

Mr. Fields: What is the difference betwixt Liverpool Greens and the Bronze Greens?—Ans.: There is only one kind of Green, whether it is in Liverpool or elsewhere. The Bronze Greens are coarse specimens merely.

Questioner: For colour-feeding the ordinary Norwich, does Mr. Hadwin recommend the saffron and ammoniated citrate of iron?—No; I should use cochineal in place of saffron and red carbonate of iron in place of the ammoniated citrate. The saffron and citrate of iron are used in Greens because they are both green colouring agents.

Mr. Hurst produced a pair of birds, and Mr. Hadwin pointed out from them the various things illustrating the lecture.

Mr. Tom Harrison: Should the best pair be self Greens?—Yes, if not too dark and having some previous light blood bred into them.

Mr. Hurst: Are marigolds and nasturtiums good for Greens when moulting,—No. These are red colouring agents, and would spoil the green colour.

Double Buffing.

Mr. Harrison: Will double-buffing increase size of head?—Yes. Anything that broadens the feathers gives more covering properties, and by these means gives the head a broader appearance. Another advantage of this broadened feather is that it does away with horns or skimpiness behind the skull; in fact, it gives the poll a well filled-in appearance.

The Questioner: Does double-buffing increase body bulk?—Yes. Buffs are naturally heavier in body substance, and have more stamina than Yellows; hence the mating of two heavy-bodied birds is bound to increase body bulk.

Mr. Irlam: Would Mr. Hadwin use the bronze green from the cock or the hen side for colour purposes in clear Norwich?—From the cock side. By this means you get advantage of colour. If used from the hen side you would get the disadvantage of harsh feather without gaining much in the way of colour.

Mr. Royle: How does Mr. Hadwin account for the bluey tinge so often seen in the Norwich Greens?—This blueness is probably set up by the different crossings used in the making of this variety, but in the best strains colour is getting more fixed, and consequently the blue tinge is being eliminated.

Mr. Raynes (C.B.U.): Did I understand Mr. Hadwin to say that Liverpool Greens are made from Norwich Greens?—There is no such variety as Liverpool Greens. The present-day Norwich Greens have certainly been largely made from pairing heavily variegated Norwich Plainheads together, and the use of the Green Crestbred occasionally.

Mr. Fields, the chairman, asked if there were any more questions. Several members remarked that Mr. Hadwin had gone so fully into the subject that there was nothing to ask. Messrs. Fields and Irlam then moved a hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer, Mr. Hadwin suitably replying, which brought the meeting to a close.

The Management of Scotch Fancy and Belgian Canaries.

By THOMAS SMITH.

The foster parents have not only to be procured, but should have every attention bestowed on them day in and day out, and should be paired off as they are to be bred. They may be kept in a large cage with others, but they may suffer from the persecution of a vicious neighbour, and it may be injured physically; so that when the season comes round the peaceable member is not in condition. Speaking generally, the foster parents that are kept in pairs do well. A little extra labour in keeping stock brings compensation.

Some males will do nothing in the way of bringing up the young. They (the males) take a fair share of the good things, and may feed the hen; but they are of no use in feeding the young. It is well-known that hens stop feeding when the young are eight or ten days old, and the feeding should be taken up by the cock-birds. So that it is double safety to have a male that takes a share of the work.

Dividing the Labour.

I have had an old hen that reared by herself as well as any pair could have done, but the strain was too much, and so she has broken down. There is nothing like a fair division of labour. I have heard it maintained that Buff hens are preferable to Yellow hens on the plea that they are stronger. Where does the strength come in? They are coarser in feather, but that is the only difference. Yellow hens feed as well as buffs.

There is a practice in vogue of clearing out all the feeding stock at the close of the breeding season, to make room for the class stock, and to save work. Bad feeders should be got rid of at any time. The first failure to bring up may be due to their being out of condition, and should not be taken as a final test. Every hen should have a fair trial. A bad feeder passed on to another has proved itself an extra good rearer.

There is a bird which can be secured for 1s., and is not regarded as being of much use. I refer to the Goldfinch-Canary hen mule. She has been found to be a superior foster parent, and both smart and alert. She is well adapted for rearing. Mule hens are not all equally good and bad feeders, among them are those which could be described as commonplace. But when a feeder has been picked up, stick to her.

When Buying.

In the month of December the fancier who has visited the exhibitions and taken an interest in the exhibits, ought to have a grasp of the characteristics of Scotch Fancy and Belgian Canaries, as they are for the time being; and if he has a wish to advance a comparison should be made between his own stock and the winners. Where a wide difference exists an effort should be made to strengthen the weakness.

In bygone years, nearly every Scotch Fancy Canary, with pretentions to having the recognised qualities, appeared at shows, but all that is changed. So soon as the two or three leading birds in each class have come to be known, the major number are kept at home, and after a defeat or two are never seen at open shows. Many ordinary birds, which would be of service to breeders, and which would be smartly picked up, can only be seen by visiting the owner.

Those who require to purchase, and have waited till December, may be very fortunate. The birds being in a forward state then, they display their qualities more correctly, and the purchaser can form a better estimate of their various properties. An exhibitor who is not very keen, should his exhibit not get a place, runs it into a flight and may pay little attention to it. That same bird may be purchased, and may found a thoroughly reliable strain.

We have far too little of this visiting of one another's bird-rooms, and too much of the running-down of each other's stock. Frequently breeders would find it an advantage to move about, take a mental survey, and think for themselves. The fancier who has to be guided in every move by others seldom makes progress. Self reliance in everything pertaining to the Fancy is of great importance.

Keeping the Stock Well.

The use of the bath in cold, sunless weather is not to be recommended. The day is too short, and the atmosphere, especially about a town, is foul, both of which factors are against a bird's feathers drying, and reaching normal condition before they settle down for the night. Further, the bird that has freely indulged in a plunge is apt to contract a cold, which may end in an attack of asthma, pneumonia, or some other dangerous malady.

When stock are well they can stand the cold, but Scotch Fancy and Belgian Canaries are, of course, liable to the vicissitudes of life. The average fancier is apt to content himself at this time with giving seed and water. It is dark when he gets up in the morning, and dark when he returns home from business. He may not manage to get home for dinner, and thus has no opportunity during the week of seeing the birds in daylight, and keeping a watchful eye on the ups and downs of the birds.

It is of vast importance to successfully winter one's birds. The stock that are intended for breeding should be kept in the best of health in the winter months, and should every second or third day be supplied with sound mixed seeds, and daily with a limited supply of hemp, in addition to the ordinary fare of wholesome Canary seed and a pinch of rape seed.

Sand, Cages and Perches.

Seedsmen and grocers realizing the demand for suitable sand, keep a supply which can be had at a moderate price, so that fanciers are without excuse in not having a supply of sand. I recommend it in the cleaning of the cages, and fresh sand daily sweetens the bird's surroundings and materially assists in keeping them in the pink of condition.

The spare evenings can be taken advantage of to tighten up and repair defects in the cages. Loose wires should be soldered or fastened up with light flexible wire. Every cage, in other words, should have a thorough overhaul to guard one against losing the inmates. A stray member flying about a bird-room may permanently injure a Scotch Fancy or a Belgian Canary, which, being birds of position, have more at stake than the ordinary Canary.

If the Scotch Fancy Canary is to retain its upright, steady position, it must have suitable perches firmly fastened. With the wear and tear they get they become loose. Fresh perches are therefore necessary, and a few evenings can be well spent in making new perches. It is pitiful to go into a room and see a Scotch Fancy or Belgian Canary trying to steady itself on a well-worn, slackly-fastened perch. It gives the bird the appearance of being top heavy. Keep the birds cool and steady.

Procuring Nest Boxes.

The disposition is to leave the making of nest boxes over till they are required in March and April. But then everything has to be done with a rush. It would be an advantage to have the nest-boxes made, and those that are in need of repair put right at one's leisure.

It is pleasing to the eye to go into a room in the early spring and see everything spick and span. One cannot then help feeling that a fancier, who has everything in a forward condition, is sure to succeed.

The claws and beaks of the birds should be carefully attended to, and kept short, so that the birds can move about freely and not run the risk of being hung on the perches or the wires.

The weather usually is changeable and the temperature variable in December, causing risk to the general health of the birds. Special care should be taken from this time onward (and, in fact, at all times) to see that the stock is not in draughts. Never keep a bird at the window, as very few windows are free from draughts. The birds should be kept in a cosy and comfortable part of the house, with plenty of light.

The Use of Flights.

Flights are very handy at this time of the year, one for cocks and one for hens. By their use the work is simplified. In place of having, say, a dozen cages, the cleaning may be confined to two cages. They are also of great advantage in enabling the birds to get plenty of exercise by taking a long jump and flying from end to end. Nothing is more detrimental to the health of Scotch Fancy and Belgian Canaries than to be cribbed up in a small cage, which renders exercise impossible.

A spray of millet seed may be fastened inside the cage. The seed is good for the birds, and it induces them to jump on the spray and move about it.

Cuttle-fish bone also should be available. In a flight cage a large piece can be fastened; it keeps the bills of the birds in a normal condition, and is also good for the birds. It is frequently overlooked at the end of the year. It should be available, in fact, all the year round.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES.

By H. W. Battye (President of the Yorkshire Union Illustrated by Messrs. H. Norman and A. J. Simpson.

Absolutely the very best Handbook that has ever been put on the market. It deals fully with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties, and should be in the hands of every breeder of the Bird of Grace and Beauty. It contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

"CAGE BIRDS," 154, FLEET ST., LONDON

The Construction and Furnishing of an Outdoor Aviary.

By Miss F. M. McLeod.

The male Cockateel is slate-grey, with a white bar on his wings, and a long tail. His head is pale yellow, with a tall upstanding crest, and there is a brick-red patch on each cheek. The hen is duller in colour, and has very little yellow on the head. The red patches on the cheeks are also duller. The tail is long and barred with darker grey. A small mustard barrel makes a good nest for these birds. They are extremely hardy and may be kept out of doors all the year round.

Hardy and Easily Kept Species.

I will now mention one or two other birds, which, though not of the Parrot tribe, are well able to take care of themselves, and may be kept with any of the preceding birds.

The White Java Sparrow is a handsome bird with his snow-white body, bright red beak, and pink legs. Many specimens are mottled with grey, and are then of no use for breeding or exhibition purposes. The sexes are alike, though the hen is a trifle slimmer, but the cock has a curious little song which distinguishes him. They should be treated the same as the others, with the addition of paddy rice to the Canary and millet. The price varies from 6s. 6d. to 12s. 6d., according to the birds. They breed freely in an aviary or cage, and are fairly hardy, but it is best to bring them into the house if very cold. These birds are fond of bathing, and should also be supplied with green-food, such as grounsel or lettuce.

The Red-Crested Cardinal is another suitable bird for the beginner, being handsome and hardy, while the cock has quite a nice song. These birds are grey on the back, white breast, and red head, with a bold upstanding crest. Male and female are alike, except that the hen has a smaller crest of a duller red, and she does not sing. In addition to seed, give the Cardinal a few mealworms, caterpillars, or earwigs, now and then. He is also very fond of blackbeetles.

The Pope or Dominican Cardinal is rather smaller than the Crested, and has a red head, but no crest. He is a very handsome bird, and is very prettily marked with grey and white; black on the back and wings. As the Cardinals are very pugnacious while breeding it is best to keep single specimens, or else give them a place to themselves.

All these birds together, or some of them, make a capital mixed collection for the beginner, and if he keeps to these birds I do not think he will be troubled with many deaths.

In case my reader should wish to keep a greater variety of birds, a simple way of dividing the aviary will be seen in the accompanying sketch. In the largest half at the far end the Budgerigars, Lovebirds, etc., may be kept, and in the two smaller side divisions, some hardy smaller Finches, or insectivorous birds, such as Pekin Nightingales. It will be found useful, however, to have only one side division, and in the remainder of the space have a narrow table or tables on which should be some smaller cages in which any bird that is seedy or needs separating from the rest may be kept. A curtain should be hung from the table, behind which the tins of seed, travelling cages, husks, etc., may be kept.

For the small division I advise the following birds:— Zebra Finches, Saffron Finches and Pekin Nightingales. But there are many other small birds which would do equally well. The Zebra Finches are very small, pretty, and hardy. They can be bought for as little as 2s. 6d. a pair, and they breed freely. Small cocoanut husks make cosy nests for them.

The Saffron Finch is a handsome bird, hardy and will breed in an aviary. They are bright yellow, marked with greenish black. The cock has a bright orange patch on the head. The Pekin Nightingale is a very lively, pretty bird, and soon becomes quite tame. It is much larger than either of the two preceding species, but will not molest them. Both sexes are alike, and it is rather difficult to get cocks. The latter sing, while the hen has only a monotonous call. They should be fed on a good insect food, such as those advertised in Cage Birds. Also supply ripe fruit, such as bananas, pears, grapes, and give them insects, such as spiders, flies, earwigs and mealworms, of which they are very fond. If these birds are kept with smaller ones, put the seed for the latter into a small box-cage, with one bar taken out. This will allow the smaller birds to enter, but not the Pekin. They should not be allowed to have free access to the seed dishes, or they will eat too much of it and die of indigestion. Supply plenty of water for drinking and bathing for the birds. The price of the cock varies from 3s. 6d. to 6s., while the hen can be bought for 1s. 6d.

THE SISKIN-BULLFINCH HYBRID.

Many attempts have been made to produce a cross between the lovely cock Siskin and the British hen Bullfinch, but none of my acquaintances have brought young ones to the perch. It is quite as probable a cross as the other Hybrids were considered ten years ago. The Siskin and Bullfinch are put together; they mate without trouble and settle down to domestic life with every indication that they mean to have a family. The Siskin is about the same as the Redpoll in point of size, and his rich green colour and his black cap will no doubt blend admirably with the Bullfinch colours.

A small British Bullfinch hen is most suitable. Care should be taken to select a hen that is in excellent health. The Siskin frisks about the cage, so that the nest should be placed in a far corner of it. A plentiful supply of dried grass or hay should be available; it is preferable with the Bullfinches to moss. The birds should be kept together throughout the winter and spring. They seldom start building before the month of June. June raises the hopes of the Hybrid breeder, but these hopes may not be realized till July or August.

Should a Siskin-Bullfinch Hybrid be hatched it should be placed in the charge of a gentle and good-feeding pair of Canaries. The eggs should be left alone and not handled, as they are very apt to become addled. The Siskin cock and Bullfinch hen should produce a charming show bird. As to whether or not it should be colour-fed, I think it would not do any harm, and might help the colour, and make the plumage more brilliant.—T.S.

A Pet Hand-reared Song Thrush.

This photograph shows a delightfully tame Song Thrush, which was hand-reared this season by Mr. J. Brighty, a well-known Clapham fancier, and is in the habit of coming out of its cage for a bath, and for dainties in the way of food.

House's Canary Manual - - - - Post free 1/2

By C. A. House.

This is a thorough and practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, written by a well-known expert and judge. It contains chapters dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, and an illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman, reproduced in the finest art style. There are also exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge approached by no other book of its kind at the price

The Young Cuckoo Again.

A young Cuckoo, says a correspondent to a daily contemporary, was esconced in a cosy nest within six yards of our kitchen window, and being fed by its foster parent—a Robin that built its nest in an old cracked flower-pot which had been fixed to a low wall under a branch of ivy, a spray of which is cleverly interwoven with its nest. A large bird was noticed not long ago apparently peering into the nest, and was frightened away, but in spite of that the usual tragedy took place. Four little Robins were ruthlessly tumbled out, and lay dead on the floor. This is, no doubt, an unusual occurrence, continues the writer, as we live just within the precincts of the borough.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following Conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mules and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Park and Lake Aviculture—Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. M.B.O.U., &c. Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Design for Aviary.

"Beginner."—Considering you have never seen an open wire aviary I think the design previously sent very good for the purpose you have in view, and this, with the modification pointed out, would answer very well. If you would prefer seeing a few varied designs I don't think you could do better than look through a few back volumes of CAGE BIRDS, if available, in which you would find lots of designs in the shape of photographic illustrations of different fanciers' aviaries, as well as many building plans and erection designs. Then you might get the handbook on "Aviaries, Cages, etc.," from our Manager, which you will see advertised every week. This will give you a very good insight into the methods of making aviaries. Had the aviary been ready, the present time would have done well to stock it. As regards foreign birds, you should address a separate query to our Foreign Bird Expert.

Young Dead in Shell.

Beginner, P.H., Sheffield.—There are quite a variety of causes, and without having some knowledge of how and where the birds are kept, and some idea as to the period of incubation at which the young died, it is impossible to say definitely what was the cause. It might have been due to the eggs getting chilled by the hen remaining off them too long at a time, to weakness of the germ, or, if the young were fully grown, it might have been owing to lack of sufficient moisture. In the latter case you ought to have allowed the hen to bathe the last few days of incubation, and it would also have helped matters had you immersed the eggs in warm water for a few seconds morning and night on the thirteenth and fourteenth days. Then, had you watched these replies you must have seen details of other assistance in several replies during the season. The thunder would not be likely to affect the eggs in any way whatever.

Details of Feeding.

I. Hunter.—The information asked for has been given repeately during the breeding season, so you might easily have saved some of your young had your feeding been the cause. As you do not now say how you have been feeding, I cannot tell whether this is the probable cause or not. It is almost too late now to allow birds to begin nesting, but in case you have any more near hatching treat as follows:—During the last few days of incubation let the hens bathe freely each day if they so desire. Feed on a staple of plain Canary only, with just a scrap of egg food once a week, and a pinch of rape on two other days, whilst the hens are sitting. When due to hatch give about half a teaspoonful of egg food, perfectly sweet and fresh, night and morning. On the second and third day repeat the quantity three times morning, mid-day, and evening. On the fourth day slightly increase the quantity given each time, and give a little freshly-gathered green food. After this gradually increase the quantity of egg food as the young grow older, always trying to give just as much as the birds will clear up shortly before the next serving is due and no more, and give as much fresh green food as they care for twice each day. Also add a proportion of summer rape to the Cannary in the hopper, and when the young are about ten days old add a supply of slightly cracked hemp. If the hens have refused to feed whilst the cocks were with them, try removing the cocks next time if the hens show signs of repeating the former behaviour. Observe the utmost cleanliness in all food and water vessels, and wash out the egg drawers every time a fresh supply of egg is given.

Various.

X Rays.—(1) The youngsters will probably begin to moult at the end of August or very early in September, when from seven to eight weeks old. You should begin to give a little weak colour food two or three times a week as soon as they are turned six weeks' old, and about a week later increase it to half-strength, and continue giving until they begin to cast feathers, when you must increase it to full strength and give regularly each day. (2) When mating yellow to buff in the usual way the young produced are both yellows and buffs in varying proportions. Some pairs will breed a majority of yellows, and vice-versa. Yellows in their nest feathers are generally a paler tint than when they get their adult plumage, even without colour food, so perhaps you are confusing some pale yellows with buffs. (3) Quite probably these are cinnamon-marked ones. Judging from your description, I should say they are. (4) The specimen of weed is a nice seedy example of chickweed, which is one of the very best green foods you could use. Thanks for kind remarks.

Age and Perches.

Novice.—It is quite possible to breed successfully with a cock and hen, both of which are only ten to twelve months old. But, as we frequently point out, although it is not really essential, one of the birds should be over a year old; it is most advisable to arrange so for several reasons, particularly in the larger breeds, which make up perceptibly in their second year so that there are good grounds for believing that they are not quite fully matured in their first year. By mating a bird of last season with one that is older, one of the pair is fully matured, and I believe, more robust young are reared in this way than by mating together two birds under a year old. The best kind of perches for Yorkshires, or indeed any other medium-sized Canary, is made of a strip of soft deal half-inch by five-eighths of an inch, with just the sharp edges planed off, so as to make it into a kind of flattened oval. Do not be particular to plane them very smooth. They do not want to be glassy smooth, or they will not give a secure foothold. If too smooth, rub them lengthwise with a bit of very coarse sandpaper.

A Yorkshire Hen.

W. Widdows.—Am strongly of opinion the primary cause is the worrying attacks of red mites, with which you will probably find the cage swarmed if you examine it carefully, especially in the joints of door, and any cracks, joints, or small nail-holes, and ends of perches. The wheezing is simply the result of the hareness, aided, perhaps, by a draughty or changeable position, being too chilly for it to withstand in its weakened state. First of all, thoroughly free the cage and its surroundings from this pest, as advised to one or two last week. Then see the bird is kept free from draughts, and is in a pure atmosphere—that is, not hung up against the ceiling or over a burning lamp or gas jet—and add twenty drops of chemical food to its drinking water every second day for a fortnight. On the alternate days give twelve drops glycerine, twenty of whisky, and six of oxymel of squills. Before starting to give this, however, add a pineb of Epsom Salts and six drops of lemon juice to the water for two days. If this does not stop the irritation, give a small piece of bread and milk twice each week, and slightly dust it over with a mixture of two parts flowers of sulphur to one part chlorate of potash, and sprinkle lastly with maw seed. The bareness should disappear when the bird moults, but will not at this time do so earlier.

Eggs Drying Up.

"A Novice."—I can add little to my last reply beyond saying the eggs you send plainly showed the imperfect condition of shell to which I referred. Had you put one aside for a day or two without allowing it to be sat upon, it would almost certainly have become covered with moisture, which I believe is drawn from the egg substance. As the trouble has been so persistent with this hen it is exceedingly probable the lower portion of the oviduct lacks strength and tone, so that the final stages of egg production are imperfectly performed. Do not allow her to nest again this season. If she seems in too fat a condition put her on a diet of plain Canary, with plenty of green food, and add a pinch of Epsom Salts to the water every second day until sufficiently reduced. After this give a dose of five drops of aromatic sulphuric acid once or twice a week for a few weeks, and for a few weeks before mating her next spring give twenty drops of chemical food in the water three times a week, and let her have free access to cuttlefish and a little crushed old mortar, with a slight sprinkling of common table salt mixed in it. During the winter allow her plenty of space for exercise, and occasionally give a pinch of small rolled oats, crushed groats, or coarse oatmeal, and once a week give a scrap of butter and milk, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it.

A Doubtful Ailment.

T.N., W.B.—I should feel inclined to doubt the correctness of the diagnosis that your birds died from heart disease and liver complaint, although it is certainly comprehensive enough to cover a good deal. I know several medical experts who consider it doubtful whether heart disease is at all a common ailment among caged birds, but to suppose you should lose over fifty old and young birds in one season from such a complaint seems quite ridiculous. Some form of liver complaint might, of course, be the real cause. But I am strongly of opinion improper food is at the root. The hemp alone, on which you say you have fed freely, is sufficient to account for the condition of the birds. It is a very poor sample, a large number of the grains being damaged, the kernels stale and rancid, and a lot of light grains in it. Worse still, judging from the sample, I should say the hulk is terribly dirty. The Canary, although of fair size and substance, and fairly sweet, appears to have been badly harvested, contains quite an appreciable proportion of linseed, and is probably kiln-dried. I should regard either samples as unfit for use. The rape is very fair, and quite good enough. Get some better seeds of the other kinds. Stop breeding for this season, and feed on a mixture of three parts Canary to one part rape as a staple. Twice a week give a little bread and milk, three times a week half a teaspoonful of maw seed, and a little green food daily. Limit diet solely to these, and give no hemp for the next month. In drinking water give as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence, and six drops of lemon juice every second day for a week, and during the following week give six drops each of syrup of rhubarb and dandelion juice every second day, and five drops of aromatic sulphuric acid on the alternate days. Let them have free opportunities for bathing if they are so disposed, plenty of space for exercise, and, above all else, fresh, pure air, but avoid direct draughts.

Not Feeding Young.

"Nemo."—As you omit to say how you fed them after the young were hatched, I have no idea whether this might have had anything to do with the hen's refusal to feed. As regards the feeding during incubation, I do not care for hemp. Unless the weather should happen be cold and unfavourable, I think it is best omitted, and should prefer giving a little dry summer rape instead. It does not necessarily follow that such behaviour on her part this year will be repeated next season, but if you discovered that she acted in the same way last year, then I should hold out but little hope of her reforming for another year; that is, of course, providing she has been treated fairly correctly hitherto. Good, plain, wholesome feeding through the winter months, with plenty of fresh air, and vigorous exercise, such as she would get in your outdoor aviary, is certainly the very best preparation she can have to make her "fit" for next year, but if she has not hitherto been accustomed to cold-room treatment, it may not be quite wise to compel her to remain out all the winter. Put her out at once, and when winter is closely approaching keep an eye on her, and if she seems to mope and suffer from the cold and wet, take her indoors and keep in a cold, dry, and draught-proof room in a good, large flight cage. But as long as she remains bright and active outdoors, let her stay there. When mating her next season, mate a common German hen at same time, so as to be provided with a foster parent should the necessity arise.

To Assist Moulting.

R.S.—I have very little data upon which to found an opinion as to the cause of the green hen's death. Had she started to cast her feathers, and how were you feeding and treating her generally? If in fairly good normal health, birds should require little artificial assistance to help them through the moult. The chief point is to avoid exposing them to any draught or chills during the moulting season, and especially just as they are about beginning to shed feathers. If they do not seem to break into moult satisfactorily, but appear to sicken and not commence to drop feathers, add fifteen drops of whisky, five of sweet spirits of nitre, and a few shreds of saffron to the water daily for three or four days; keep rather warm; add half a teaspoonful of maw seed to the diet every second day, and on the alternate days a similiar quantity of egg food or crushed biscuit, over which sprinkle a slight dusting of a mixture of two parts flowers of sulphur and one part chlorate of potash two or three times a week for a fortnight. Of course, if you are colour-feeding, the soft food must be given daily as a vehicle for the colour agent; but you must still adhere to the above-mentioned frequency of giving the sulphur which will be quite often enough for all cases. Allow them to bathe freely during the moult in suitable weather, providing they remain fairly active after doing so. If your birds are not in good health, send fuller particulars about the condition they are in and the symptoms exhibited, and I will do my best to help.

Three in Charge.

G.C.L.—The crosshred cock probably has a kind of warty excrescence beginning to appear on beak, which is not very unusual with Canaries that are getting old. In the majority of cases they seem to be no trouble or hindrance to the bird, so that in a pet bird I scarcely think it worth worrying over as long as the bird seemed all right. Moisten the spot four times in a fortnight with a small feather—such as a bird's moulted flight or tail feather—dipped in Friar's Balsam. If this does not remove the unhealthy appearance, write again in two or three weeks and mention this reply. As you have two hens both suffering from diarrhœa since being egg-bound some weeks ago, I should suspect the treatment for that complaint or subsequent has upset them. Your present feeding is not a very good one. Put them on a staple diet of two parts Canary to one summer rape, and give separately half a teaspoonful of maw seed twice a week, and every second day the same quantity of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod-liver oil emulsion mixed in it each time. Twice a week give a few grains only of hemp. Discontinue all other foods, and give no green food until birds are quite well. In a fortnight or so you should be able to revert to the usual diet frequently given here. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of glycerine, for two consecutive days. After this give twenty drops whisky and five tincture of opium every second day until the diarrhœa is stopped. Five drops of aromatic sulphuric acid may be given for a few days afterwards to help to tone up the system.

Brevities.

Age for Removing Young (A. E. Storey).—Young are usually quite able to leave parents when a month old, or a little earlier in the case of small broods which have been well cared for. Before removing them, however, satisfy yourself they are feeding with some amount of freedom on the soft food supplied, and are also able to crack seed fairly well. At this time of year, when it is scarcely advisable to allow the parents to start nesting again, it is as well to remove the hen into a flight cage and leave the cock with the young to continue feeding them as long as he likes and they like to let him.

Bleeding Under Wings (Spartie).—I suspect the cause is indirectly due to red mites worrying the bird, which has to peck itself until it has either wounded sprouting feathers in quill or made the skin "raw." Thoroughly cleanse cage as advised "W. Widdows." Give a bath frequently, in which dissolve a crystal or two of permanganate of potash, two or three times a week until wings are well, and see the bath is large enough for it to bathe properly, and not merely a drinker full of water (a tea saucer half filled with water makes a good bath if it will go into the cage; if not, put it in a small cage that is minus one end and hang this cage on the open doorway of the bird's dwelling cage). Give a scrap of bread and milk sprinkled with maw twice a week, and add twenty drops chemical food to water every second day for a fortnight.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S. M.B.N.H.S., etc.

Birds for Exhibition.

"Enquirer."—(1) This is certainly a difficult question to answer, as you give me no idea as to what amount you wish to spend. The real answer is: The rarest and most brilliantly-coloured species you can obtain, and, of course, the names of such are continually changing; the rarity of to-day is often comparatively common to-morrow. Speaking generally, a King Parrakeet or a Ceram Lory stands a very good chance of being in the money, if in perfect condition. Stanley and also Crimson-wing Parrakeets are both good exhibition species. (2) As to Red-headed Gouldian Finches or Diamond Sparrows, all other things (condition, etc.) being equal, the Gouldians ought to score over the Diamond Sparrows; but I very much doubt if you will be able to get a pair of Red-heads at the present time, or Black-heads either for that matter; there are very few in the country, and it would have to be a good figure to tempt their owners to part with them. I may say this, that good large specimens of Diamond Sparrows, in finest condition, have always more than a passing chance of catching the judge's eye. Hope you'll have a successful season.

What Birds are they?

"Quong Sing."—The scarlet and black bird is the Scarlet-headed Mask Bird. The yellow and brown one is undoubtedly the Sulphury Tyrant. Am of opinion you will find both correctly named. The difficulty lies in the fact that unless each part of the bird is minutely described there are perhaps six or more species to which a description will apply—many species of a given genus only differ from one another in minor details. The dietary already given will apply to the above, but in each instance you can hardly supply too much live food—grasshoppers, cockroaches, beetles, spiders, caterpillars, mealworms, etc. A little minced, cooked, or raw meat will do no harm, but I never use it myself, preferring instead to supply plenty of live insects. Damp, raw cold would affect these birds more than frost and during the winter they should be housed indoors.

Parrot Destroying its Perch.

P.H.—It is natural for a Parrot to cut up wood; more, this assists in preventing the beak becoming overgrown. Provide it with one or two stray pieces of wood to cut up. Far from being a vice, it is a decidedly healthy sign (though annoying) that it should use its beak in a natural way. Short of a metal perch, you cannot prevent it cutting its perch, and a metal perch should never be given—it is too cold for the feet. Of course, a mahogany one (hard as you can get it) would offer some resistance, but I do not like the formal round perches. A bundle of pea sticks last a long time, and are far better for the birds; they have the bark on, are of variable thickness, and easily renewed. They need not fit between the wires; simply push a piece through the bars of the cage, and let it protrude three or four inches at either side. The twiggy ends can be put in for the bird to cut up and amuse itself with.

Bishops and Songsters.

H.H.: Canary, white and spray millet, with green food, and a few ants' eggs, will suffice for these birds; but if you want to keep them in finest condition, each bird should have two or three mealworms or other insects daily. At this time of year you cannot give too much flowering (seeding) grass, also lettuce, chickweed, etc. Foreign Seed-eaters are not remarkable for song, though all the Serins are more than passable in this respect. A good male Grey Singing Finch is a very sustained and sweet songster, though only a plain grey bird, but there is a good bit of variableness as to merit of individuals. The Green Singing Finch is a brighter coloured bird, also the Grey-necked Serin and the Alario Finch, and they are all sweet songsters, with the same proviso as to individual merit as given with the Grey Singing Finch. The Bishops, especially when in full colour, make a considerable amount of chattering noise, which by courtesy is called song!

Unheated Greenhouse Aviary.

F. Taylor.—Your birds should do well providing you can keep down the damp. I expect the hens died from the effects of importation; there are always some losses from this cause with new purchases. Your dietary should suffice for the birds you have, but you should also supply green food, such as grass in flower (seeding grass), lettuce, groundsel heads, chickweed, etc. A turf put in occasionally is very wholesome for these birds to pick over, as also are blighty sprays from rose and fruit trees, or any other non-poisonous herbage. Your aviary will only accommodate four breeding pairs, but will accommodate about a score merely as a flight. Get half a dozen assorted nesting receptacles, such as rush, cocoanut shells, and a couple of small box nests. You would find a pair of Zebra Finches do well with your present stock; they are pretty, hardy, and almost certain breeders. Well cover the back of the aviary with twigy branches, supply long grass, hay, and a little moss as nesting material. Zebra Waxbills are also hardy and beautiful, but are rather doubtful breeders, but they certainly are probable breeders.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

Parrots Dying.

Fancier.—There is no doubt your friend's birds have been contaminated by the unsanitary conditions of the voyage; they both undoubtedly died from septicæmia, which is contagious; the cage is not safe to use for another bird till it has been thoroughly sterilised. I should suggest painting the cage with hoat paraffin; after a few hours well swill with boiling water, finally swilling with cold water and leaving in the open to dry. During each operation all crevices should be well swilled. As regards treatment: Boiled maize can be given to a young bird, and also to others which are accustomed to it, but it only keeps fresh one day, and you must see that stale grains are not left about. Confine your diet to the following:—Seed mixture, Canary, millet, wheat, dari, hemp, and sunflower seeds, in about equal parts, well mix, and keep a supply continually in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit, plain biscuit and nuts; keep a piece of clean cuttlefish hangiug in the cage and supply water either in the cage or let it satisfy its thirst two or three times a day. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kinds of animal food. Dry potato (without fat) is harmless, and a little may be given if the bird fancies it.

Saffron Finches and Budgerigars.

M.L.G.—(1) At time of writing I have not a copy of "F.B. for B." to hand; there is not a chapter devoted to this species, but I think you will find it mentioned as one of group which can be treated similarly to those already dealt with. However, I will make it quite clear. The principal thing to keep them fit is plenty of cage room, canary, millet, a little hemp, and sunflower seeds, green food (lettuce, etc.), fruit occasionally, a little of some good soft food mixture, or merely ants' cocoons and dried flies slightly moistened, would meet the case. They also require a little live food occasionally—mealworm, beetle, spider, etc., as obtainable. Choose large and fine-coloured birds for exhibition, with the saffron cap in the male of good area and rich in colour. They should be in a show cage at least seven days before the show takes place—they can easily at the last moment be run from a soiled cage to the one they have to face the judge in. (2) Budgerigars: Providing the sexes are equal, I do not think the bickering you speak of will materially interfere with results, and as soon as the other pairs settle down to nesting most of the bickering will cease. (3) Providing they have plenty of space, it is not necessary to separate the young from their parents; with this species, leaving them together does not interfere with breeding results, as the male looks after the young when the hen commences sitting again. (4) The flight aviary, as a flight only, has accommodation for 40 birds not larger than Budgerigars. Hope you will have a good season.

Brevities.

What Parrakeet? ("Recipitant").—Your birds seem to be Green Conures, though in two instances the descriptions do not quite fit in; but this is only on account of their immaturity, I expect. If you have a copy of your first query by you, you will see it materially differs from the one now sent. I carefully compared yours with the description of the Green Conure, but could not make it fit in; so during a visit to the Zoo I carefully compared your former description with the birds there, and came to the conclusion that they were immature Tovi Parrakeets. However, taking into consideration that your friend has seen the birds, in conjunction with the amended description, I have no doubt they have been correctly named (Green Conures). I have a near species, and find it quite an interesting pet.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Feeding Linnet Mules.

Lintie.—You certainly need not express contrition for "troubling" me. Glad to be of use. As the young Mules get well on to seed, they should be fed more plainly than when they are just leaving "mother." At the same time they want to have a good proportion of seeds rich in frame-building elements. It is not necessary to give soft food of any kind if colour feeding is not being indulged in; a little once or twice a week does no harm, however. A few sunflower seeds daily (cracked only if necessary) are real good for growing Mules; likewise a few groats. They can be thrown on the sand-tray. The stock seed mixture should be: Canary and teazle two parts each, summer rape one part, linseed a half-part, by measure. A little of the other seeds occasionally as "tit-bits" (especially maw). Seeding green food (not coarse leaves), such as shepherd's-purse, chickweed and groundsel tops, is excellent. I use them freely.

Feeding a Young Cuckoo.

J.S.M.—Your account of the young Cuckoo is very interesting, but you have, I am afraid, got hold of a more or less unsatisfactory pet. I know I soon got tired of the nestling Cuckoo I took home with me in my younger days. Its voracious appetite and constant calls for food amused mightily at first, but soon began to be tiring, especially as the bird seemed determined to make no attempt to attend to its own wants. Then it was listless, and lazy, with no interesting traits, and, worst of all, very dirty in its habits, its cage becoming offensive unless constantly attended to. It is curious that your Song Thrush should have taken pity on the poor orphan, and have made himself responsible for feeding it—that must be a comical sight. His kindness of heart does him credit. But he will live to regret it; he will find he has taken on a boarder for life! When the Cuckoo commences to feed itself, it will thrive on a good insectivorous food, made up in the usual way with finely-minced green food. Give all the live food you can, in addition. My own bird had a little minced lean meat now and again, and some chopped-up ripe fruit, too. A fair supply of live food regularly is essential if they are to thrive for any length of time. As regards their food when wild, see the reply given "Tom-tit."

Getting Young on Seed.

Novice.—It ought to be quite an easy matter for you to get the young Canary-reared Goldfinches on to hard seed. They do not require any "getting," in fact, strictly speaking, for like young Mules and young Canaries, they naturally begin to pick up for themselves when at the right age. The main point to observe is not to separate them from their mothers so long as they "call" to be fed (a wired slide may be between them, of course, if desirable). Often the young will be picking up a little on their own account, yet not sufficient to satisfy all bodily demands, in which case they "call" for an occasional "packing" from their mother. When they hop out of the nest, the food should be given in a shallow, good-sized pan placed on the cage floor, and should consist of lightly-cracked Canary, hemp, and summer rape seeds, with some maw seed and a few cracked groats (or very coarse oatmeal), mixed among the egg food. The proportion of seed should not be too high at first; but gradually increase it in quantity. When you see the young taking the seed freely, stop cracking the hemp. Of course, you will gradually reduce the quantity of soft food until you can leave it out altogether. I also give seeding tops of shepherd's purse, and chickweed freely; they are the first things young birds will "nibble" at.

British Bird Queriste should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hardbills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

A Lesser Spotted Woodpecker.

Mentone.—It is not necessary to colour-feed a Lesser Spotted Woodpecker. If given, then the pepper should not be added to the food until the moult is practically finished; it may help the bird, then, to "come up" in colour. If the injury to your bird's wing is one that shows, then it will spoil the bird for exhibition purposes. I hope you will succeed in keeping it alive. I have not found them exceptionally difficult to manage; but, then, I am generally in the position of being able to provide plenty of live food. Woodpeckers are insectivorous birds, and require as a daily food the stock mixture of ants' eggs, powdered biscuit, etc., made as recommended at length to "W. Hobbs" in our issue of last week. A supply of live insect food is, of course, essential; and mealworms must be at hand to assist in the "meating off" process. The bird must at first have a free supply of the latter, and some should be cut into pieces (halves will do) and be well mixed among the soft food. In picking out the said pieces the bird will take up some of the food adhering to them, and in this way gradually get to eating it freely. Lessen by degrees the number of live mealworms offered; some, however, should always be given daily. The two large Woodpeckers need nuts, sunflower and hemp seeds (the former cracked where necessary). In addition to the soft and live foods; and plenty of black beetles should be supplied all three, while it is advisable to scrape a little raw meat (beef or mutton) among their food occasionally. The Lesser I have not found so fond of nuts and seeds. All of them greatly relish ripe, sweet fruit, pecled grapes being especial favourites. A Woodpecker's cage must be lined with bark, for the bird to cling to, and climb about on. It must be remembered, too, that their strong beaks can soon knock a hole through a wood plank, therefore the cage also needs to be lined with tin.

BEGINNERS: READ "CAGE BIRDS" ANNUAL.

Treatment of Young Mules.

Full Up.—I cannot understand your troubles, seeing that you acknowledge to five years' successful breeding with Canaries. I think they must be in some measure due to your treatment—possibly brought about by over-anxiety, and being too "fussy." Mules are very strong and easy to rear, in my opinion; I have bred a rare lot this year, and not lost a single bird that has got out of the nest. A "sweating" hen has been the only bird to bring me misfortune of any kind. And I have found it equally easy in previous years. I tell you and other readers every week that I give the seeding green foods, chickweed, shepherd's-purse, very freely, and with the best of results. Yet you write that you are "afraid of giving them to the young ones," and ask me if I will "kindly advise." What more can I say? It really looks as though you do not put much faith in my statements; that is, if you have read them. Anyway, as regards the feeding of young seed-eaters (whether Mules or Finches), I can only refer you to the replies given "Lintie" and "Novice" this week. Young Mules should not be given "Linnet mixture"; they pick out the niger, etc., and neglect the seeds which would do them more good.

Moulting a Goldfinch.

H. Hibbard.—I dealt very fully with the colour-feeding of Finches last week in the reply given "J. Cowans." The sweet (tasteless) pepper should be well mixed amongst their seed, the latter being cracked, if necessary; or make a mixture daily of colour food, soft food, and cracked seed, and let them eat this. Personally, I do not consider it necessary to colour-feed a Goldfinch. Let the stock food be good, sound teazle seed three parts, Canary and linseed one part each. In a separate dish give a teaspoonful of good old hemp seed one day, and a dessert-spoonful of cracked sunflower seed the next day; with a pinch of maw and niger seeds now and again as a further change. Don't give hemp freely until the moult is drawing to a close. Above all, however, the bird must have a free daily supply of knapweed, thistle heads (especially any with tiny maggots at the centre), milk-thistle, seeding chickweed, groundsel, and shepherd's-purse (not the coarse leaves), any cornflower heads which you can get full of seed—all, or any, of these are liked by the Goldie, and help to get him through his moult in exhibition form. He should have a good-sized cage, with provision for a bath whenever he feels inclined to take it. That he should bathe freely is important. Failing this he must be sprayed on all suitable days; but spraying is at best but a poor substitute for a bath taken of the bird's own free will.

Brevities.

Thrush's Throat Trouble (Thrush).—If the bird is not looking "soft" (that is, with plumage "blown out"), you cannot do better than try a course of Condy's Fluid in the drinking water—a small teaspoonful to a teacupful of water would be a quite sufficient strength. Use only a glass or pot drinking vessel.

Cuckoo in Wild State (Tom-tit).—As regards the food of the Cuckoo when in a wild state, Mr. W. H. Hudson writes that it is "exclusively insectivorous, and consists in large part of hairy caterpillars, which most birds refuse to touch. The indigestible portions of the food it swallows are cast up in small pellets."

Green Foods (Ajax).—No. 1 is sorrel, which I have heard called "sour dock." It is all right to throw into aviaries, but I cannot say that I have used it much with birds in cages. No. 2 is chickweed right enough, but of somewhat coarse growth. The seeding tops are very valuable for use with all birds.

Canary-Greenfinch Mule (J. C. Hart).—Sorry if the information causes you any disappointment, but the Mule you have bred from cock Canary and hen Greenfinch is most certainly not the "first of its kind ever bred." As a matter of fact, the hen Greenfinch is about the easiest of all hen British birds to get to breed in captivity. To mate them with cock Canaries is somewhat unusual, it is true, the reverse way of the sexes being considered the best.

Rearing Green Woodpeckers (J. Hnoke).—The soft food you mention will answer well if mixed with finely-minced hard-boiled egg. Give a fair supply of live food in addition—such as mealworms which have had their heads pinched, or well-scoured gentles killed by steaming. See reply given "Mentone." The Bramblefinch has several local names; you will find them all given in CAGE BIRDS' ANNUAL. The most common is Mountain Finch.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Canary (B. Dumfermline).—A form of bird fever, in which inflammation of the lungs is the cause of death. Break up your breeding pairs and endeavour, by disinfecting, to preserve remainder of your stock, giving them plenty of fresh air and sunshine.

Canary (S. R., Keighley).—Bird fever.

Canary (E. Young).—Bird fever. In such cases a perusal of Dr. Clarke's book on this disease is recommended. It can be obtained from office of CAGE BIRDS.

GENERAL.

Answered by the Editor.

Mealworm Breeding (E. T.).—An article which dealt (among other things) with mealworm breeding appeared in our issue of March 13th last, written by Mr. C. Houlton.

British Birds (Peter Wylie).—The magazine you mention deals only with the wild life of British birds, and is published at 1/- monthly by Messrs. Witherby and Co., 326, High Holborn, London. The July number is "Vol. III., No. 2," so we take it that twenty numbers have been issued to date.

Report (K.A.L.).—Accept our thanks for your kindness.

A Tame Heron (J. Hooke).—Many thanks for the photograph, which we shall hope to publish in the near future.

Matters of Fact (J. G., Hyde Park).—The first number of CAGE BIRDS was dated January 18th, 1902. It has never had any connection whatever with the other journal you mention.

First and Cup (P. H. Harris).—Under the circumstances you relate, we think the Secretary should offer you an explanation of the matter. The reports, of course, might have been published as the result of an error. If the judge really awarded the cup to your bird and the said bird was entitled to compete under the published conditions, then you certainly have your remedy elsewhere.

HARROGATE C.B.S.

Second F.F. show, held July 17th. The entry was only moderate, owing to a number of young birds commencing to moult. The exhibits were up to the standard in quality and style. Yorkshires were the chief feature. Norwich were few. British birds included some very rare ones, and a very fine Nightingale. Mr. S. Dean, Gt. Horton, judged. CL. ETC. YELL. GLOUCESTER C.B.S.

Second young bird show of the season held at headquarters, "The Saracen's Head Hotel," on July 17th, when some nice exhibits were staged. In clear Norwich, Mr. J. Houghton did the hat trick, taking 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prizes, and was at the top in marked yellows. In the marked buffs a novice, Mr. H. Barnes, romped home with a clinking youngster, and took special for best in show, a decision which seemed to please all, and we heartily congratulate him on breeding such a typical specimen, which we think should do well at the autumn shows. Mr. J. Houghton, the hon. sec., had everything in good order. The awards were made by Mr. J. H. Payne.

NELSON AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

First feather show, held July 10th, in Club Room of the Bull Hotel. Mr. W. Mundell (Bradford) judged. The birds were well staged by the hon. sec., Mr. John England, who was backed up by a hard-working committee. Sixty-two birds faced the judge, and some good specimens were benched. Mr. J. Lingard put down a fine team of Nor.; Mr. J. England's ticked yell. Yorks. was much admired, being a real gem. Some good British birds were benched, the winning Goldfinch taking special for best in show.

WALLSEND AND MID-TYNE C.B.A.

Third annual nest feather show, held July 17th, at Station Hotel. There were only 48 entries, but all were good, and Mr. Shepherd, judge for the second year in succession, was highly pleased with the birds. His awards gave great satisfaction. Excitement was great during judging, as it was found that three competitors were tie-ing for the members' cup, having two firsts and a second each. It was decided to put the three teams on the table for Mr. Shepherd to judge in teams. The competitors were: Messrs. Cox, McQuillan, and Montgomery. Mr. Shepherd decided on Mr. McQuillan's three Borders, which were two good greens and a yellow marked, and I think we will hear more about them at the open shows. Mr. Cox's team was a mixed one, a good buff Norwich, a buff Border, and a large Siskin Mule; while Mr. Montgomery had three Yorkshires. The honour of the best bird in show bred by a member, was enjoyed by Mr. Macdonald's yellow marked Nor., first the week before at Newcastle. Before leaving, Mr. Shepherd made a speech, in which he remarked on the grand quality of the exhibits and prophesied great things in store for some of the winners. In the evening a "Smoker" was held, Mr. Ronald in the chair, and Mr. Macdonald as vice-chairman. Mr. Ronald presented the members' cup, and a gold medal to Mr. McQuillan, and hoped Mr. McQuillan would have luck in moulting his birds. After a few songs, Mr. Macdonald made a few choice remarks on the good fellowship that existed in the society, and hoped everyone would do his best. With so many experienced fanciers putting their shoulders to the wheel, no one need be afraid that their birds at the annual show would not have the best care and attention. With a few more songs, a very sociable evening was brought to a close with all joining hands and singing "Auld Lang Syne."

NORTHAMPTON HAND-IN-HAND.

Annual Young Bird Show held at Mr. J. Nason's, Forester's Arms, Wellingborough, recently. Mr. C. Winstone (Kettering) took great pains in judging, and pronounced the Yorkshires (a new class) very good. Excellent arrangements were made by the Committee of Management, consisting of Messrs. A. Burrows (chairman), W. E. Allen (vice-chairman), G. Brown (treasurer), A. G. Brown, W. Munday, W. Tabor, W. Jeyes, and H. Barren, with the capable Secretary (Mr. A. W. Law).

There was also a gift class for the benefit of Mr. C Barwell.

PRAZE.

Annual show, held July 15th, in Recreation Ground, in ideal weather. There was a good entry and attendance. Taking into consideration that the moulting season is close at hand, the exhibits were in good condition, and looked well. Special for best bird in show fell to Mr. Collins, with his six-point Goldy Mule, shown in the pink of condition. The secretary, Mr. Edwards, had everything well in hand. The judge was Mr. T. Rickard (Redruth), this being his first venture, and his awards gave every satisfaction.

YORKS: 1, spl, hc, Oatey, yell. leading, good length, well drawn, nice quality; hc, tick buff, another good bird, fine wings and tail; 2, c, Hosking, yell, good colour and quality, nice length and position; 3, vhc, Ellis, two good buffs, full of quality, nice wings, well drawn. NOR.: 1, spl, 2, Collins, tick yell., lovely shape and quality, good colour; 2, buff tick, typical, short flights and fail; 3, Rowe and Richards, yell., good shape and quality; vhc, hc, buff, very shapely, good wings; hc, wing marked, lovely colour. GOLDFINCH: 1, 2, Rowe and Richards, lovely breast, grand blaze, fine moons and buttons, good colour, both nice birds; 3, Hosking, fine breast colour, good wings; vhc, Allen, grand blaze, excellent wings and breast colour. A.O.V.: 1, spl, 2, Rowe and Richards, cl, body, dark crest, good body, nice feather; 2nd, Scotch, fine head and shoulders, carries tail well under, in excellent condition. 3, Collins, buff cinn., good colour and condition; vhc, c, Benney. 2 Scotch, yellow and green, two nice birds: hc, Oatey, yell. cinn., good colour and size. A.O.V.: 1, spls, 2, hc, Collins, well-known six-point Mule, and Linnet Bully, looking well; hc, Bully, good colour; 3, vhc, Rowe and Richards, dark Goldy Mule, lovely blaze and wings; vhc, yell, Greeny Mule, good colour and condition; c, Dale, well spotted Thrush, lost its tail or would have been higher.

Singing Contests.

DURHAM.

Linnet singing held at Burton Hotel, Gilesgate, July 10th, when 20 birds competed for three prizes. Result: 1, 3, McQuirck; 2, Adams. Judge, Mr. G. Reed (Brandon); timekeeper, Mr. J. Stout. This is the 81st contest at which Mr. Reed has judged, and it will be his last, as he is giving up Linnet judging altogether.—WM. FAIRLESS.

YORK.

Usual weekly contest, held at Crown Inn, North-street, when 20 birds competed. Some excellent singing was heard. Result: 1st Stothard, 2nd Weaver, 3rd, Skelton, 4th Granger, 5th Wilson. Judge, Mr. W. Perry; timekeeper, Mr. Cooper, J. W. SMITH, Hon. Sec.

LEEDS.

Leeds Linnet F.A., usual contest, held at King's Head, Shannon-street, July 17th. 1, 2, Sissons; 3, Stead. Judges, Messrs. Jennings and Naylor. Also on July 18th, when some very good singing was heard. 1, Sissons; 2, 3, Bland. Judges, Messrs. Jennings and Johnson.—WILSON NAYLOR, Hon. Sec.

CASTLEFORD.

Castleford and District Linnet Society held their week-end contest on July 18th at the Rock Inn, Glasshoughton, when 16 birds competed for time singing. Mr. Harry Allen, the "Original Linnet King," judged, and the large room was "packed" to give Mr. Allen a regular Yorkshire reception. Mr. Allen has been known in Castleford for many years, not only as a fancier, but as a comedian of repute, and on several occasions, when we have had benefit concerts, he has always been ready and willing to give a helping hand. 1st prize, Stonelink, whose bird scored 53 in four minutes; 2nd, Iron Hague, 63. When the winner of the 3rd prize (one too many with 49) was announced, there was wild applause and laughter. Mr. Allen said he was highly satisfied with the singing, but hoped they would try their best to copy their friends at Sheffield, as, in his opinion, for time singing the Sheffield men (who were heart and soul in the Fancy) without a doubt could beat the world. Mr. Allen also gave us many points in Linnet singing, and training, especially field training. He further advised us to be sure to purchase the best seed in the market, as no bird could be successfully trained on common seed.—C. HOLMES, Sec.

Broken Legs & their Treatment.

SIR,—I have been a reader of our favourite paper CAGE BIRDS for over two years, and I have never seen the following advice for setting and curing a broken leg in Canaries, etc. First, get the tail feather of a cock (fowl) and cut the thick end of the quill so that it is nearly the length of the bird's leg. Then cut the round end of the quill and slit it down the centre. Put the quill round the affected part, and you will find it set a broken leg quicker than all splints, and it makes a sure cure.

J. HUMPHRIES.

Successful Breeding with One-legged Yorkshires.

SIR,—Being a reader of CAGE BIRDS for the past four years, and a breeder of Canaries for the same period, I must say it is through your valuable paper that I have had every success since I started. Having seen in CAGE BIRDS of July 17 the correspondence of Mr. F. C. Collett on breeding with a Yorkshire Canary having only one leg, I wish to tell you and Mr. Collett that I have in my possession a Yorkshire Yellow cock bird with only one leg. This is the father of eight youngsters. I wish your valuable paper every success.

JOHN WALSH.

A New Society for Radford and District.

SIR,—A very successful meeting was held on July 16th at the Pheasant Inn, Radford, Notts., for the purpose of forming a new Cage Bird Society. The following were elected: President, Mr. T. Shipstone; vice-presidents, Mr. E. Hampston, Mr. G. Lee, Mr. R. Rhodes; committee, J. Birch, J. Breffit, A. Birch, A. Bexon, W. Elsey, G. Hill, G. Lawrance, T. Oliver, G. Sharp; secretary, F. Walters, 14, Haven Street, Radford, Notts. The headquarters are the Pheasant Inn, kept by an old fancier, Mr. T. Oliver, who is giving a marble clock for most points in three shows; also 1s. on each class for Young Bird Show held on July 31st. Meeting nights are every Friday till further notice; subscriptions 3s. per year. New members welcomed.

The Blackbird's White Brother.

SIR,—The following is a copy of an account of a Blackbird's nest which appeared in an Irish contemporary of yours on June 30. "A few weeks ago a Blackbird's nest containing a young brood of three was "robbed" in the neighbourhood of Westcourt. Two of the young birds were of the natural colour, black, but the other has beautiful white plumage, unbroken by the slightest trace of any colour. The assistant clerk of Callan Union secured two of the young brood, the white one, which doubtless is a male, and one of the black ones, which, to all appearance, is a female. Both birds occupy a cage in a silent little room at the entrance to the Workhouse, unconscious of the interest with which they are regarded locally." I have the two birds as stated above. The white Blackbird is a cock, and has not a speck of any colour; it is all white, except the bill, which is a bright yellow. Both were reared by me since they were twelve days old. A representative of the journal quoted examined the birds one day, and fed the birds, as also did a Justice of the Peace!

JOSEPH DWYER.

The L. and P.O.S. and the "Weaker" Society.

SIR,—I note the various replies in your last issue, and as the drill instructors say in the Army, I am still "as you were"—cleverly fenced by the hon. secretary, and the others endeavour to place me hors-de-combat. I do not agree in the first place with our ever-courteous friend, Mr. John B. Waterman, that it will be in the best interests of the Fancy; but I do agree it will be in the best interests of the weaker society, of which he is generally known to be a member. Why? Because everyone knows that the D. and P. C.B.S. unfortunately have been, and I believe are now, financially embarrassed. By no stretch of imagination can they be compared to the L. and P.O.S. as regards status in the Fancy. So again I ask, why this amalgamation? It is most uneven. Here we have the L. and P.O.S., the premier Cage Bird Society, with all its glorious traditions, and its snug banking account, swelled by its membership, condescending to hold a joint show with the D. and P.C.B.S. I am informed, and supposed to swallow, that it was actuated by lofty motives. Allow me to warn them of such-like motives, for, in my opinion, it is paramount to cliquism, and that, not once or twice, but many times, has caused strife and even splits. If it is not so why has the D. and P.C.B.S. been preferred for amalgamation without obtaining the consent of the whole body of the members of the L. and P. O.S.? And why has this society been selected in preference to many another one that could do with a helping hand? Is it not favouritism? If they once start this kind of thing, then I say that any society which has members in the L. and P. O.S. has a claim upon these noble impulses that are at work in sheltering the weakened ones. Our other friend, Mr. S. Stephens, seems to think if he does not reply it will trouble me. I don't. I did not expect Mr. Tomsett to answer my questions, so he is quite right. In fact, I never wanted to hear from him at all. But I did want to hear from our hon. secretary, Mr. Tringham, for doubtless he can, above all others, answer the string of questions I asked last week, without evading them on the ground of subscriptions. I can assure him there will be no difficulty in producing last year's receipt, and I hope this year's in due course. There are other members wanting to know in addition to myself. Now, Mr. Tringham, please answer my last week's questions, and I will forward my subscriptions shortly. I can assure him and L. and P. O.S. members that the same interest I have for them to warn them of these ideas is the same that I had when I received a memento (which I shall always value) in recognition of the practical help and interest I showed for them a year or two back.

MEMBER OF THE L. AND P. O.S.

Successful Mule Breeding with a Young Goldfinch.

SIR,—Seeing that I read CAGE BIRDS every week, I am just dropping you a note to let you know that I have a grey-pate cock Goldfinch, caught October 19th, 1908, from which I have had a sitting of five eggs, with a Norwich Crest hen Canary. This British Finch, though only caged nine months, has bred three Mules, one with a yellow crown, the other two light brown so far. I have got the little Finch with a Sib. bred hen at present, and they have three eggs, some of them fertile. The three Mules are coming on grand. They will be a fortnight old on the 20th July (hatched July 6th). I shall let you know later on about the Sib. hen and her eggs. Please put this in CAGE BIRDS for young Mule breeders and fanciers to see. I hope it will do good for some fancier, and show that Mules can be bred from young Finches.

ALEX. LEWIS.

Further News from New Zealand

SIR,—Many thanks for so kindly sending me the number of CAGE BIRDS containing my letter about my fertile Mule's eggs. I have been wondering whether there were any replies to it from any one. I had more nests from my Mule and hen Canary, but not again any fertile eggs, the little chick in spirits being my only success. I shall try again next year. Thank you also for the Crystal Palace Show catalogue. I was very interested to see there the notice of Mr. W. Kiesel's pure white Canary, as I have myself got one, a hen, hatched this year in Martinborough by a young friend of mine (in fact, I started her in Canary breeding). I think she wrote to you about it before we knew of the one in the Crystal Palace Show, and I bought it from her. I see by a notice in one of the London newspapers that the one shown at the Crystal Palace is spoken of as "unique," as it is the first pure white Canary ever seen—could you tell me if this is so? Mino is pure white (as a Java Sparrow), with black eyes, silvery legs, but unfortunately a grey (not green or yellow) mark on the cheek about the size of half a threepenny piece. I should be much obliged if you could arrange to have CAGE BIRDS sent out to me regularly. I was very much interested in the copy of CAGE BIRDS, and in the Crystal Palace Show catalogue.

(MRS.) M. S. MARTIN.

Wairarapa, New Zealand.

(The above letter was sent to Mr. J. W. Ramsden (the show manager of the Crystal Palace Exhibition), who kindly forwards it to us. It was in our issue of January 16th last that Mrs. Martin's communication appeared, saying that she had been successful in obtaining a young bird from the matter of a Goldfinch Mule to a hen Canary.—EDITOR.)

Cockatiels and Budgerigars as Pets.

SIR,—In "Ornithological Oddments" last week I notice Mr. Finn mentions Cockatiels as pets. I should like to say that if these birds are properly tamed they make charming pets. I have two at present in training, also some young Budgerigars. I have had a fair amount of success in taming both Cockatiels and Budgerigars. A gentleman to whom I sold a tame Cockatiel last year, would not part with it now for £5. My Cockatiels and Budgerigars are bred in a large outdoor garden aviary 35ft. long and 13ft. wide. I find that neither Budgerigars nor Cockatiels interfere with the small Finches in this long place, although the Budgerigars broke two of the Finches' wings in a smaller place (8ft. by 8ft.) last year. I have had five or six nests of Cutthroat Finches, but the young always die at about a fortnight old. Although these birds are, I believe, very easy to rear, I have never been successful. A pair of Green Linnets have a nest and five eggs in the large aviary amongst the Parrakeets. These should be hatched out before this is in print. I think these birds can hold their own in any company.

Linnet Singing at Leeds.

Unvarnished Reports versus Bluff and Bounce.

SIR,—Kindly allow me to answer "A Visitor" to the King's Head, Leeds, on Whit-Monday. I was a visitor myself for five years. But as years went on, and I could see that I was amongst the best of men, and the best of birds, I decided to become a member, and I have now been one for five years; also a member of the Blackburn Club for 25 years. Of all the contests I like the Whit-Monday contest at the King's Head the best, as I look upon it as an English Derby for Linnets. With regard to your question of "paying up" on the day of the contest, how could the committee arrange all the prizes if there were a lot like you wanting to be members at the last minute? You must bear in mind that a club is not kept up by men like you; it is kept up by men who have their heart and soul in the Fancy, and when they have the time they go down to the King's Head and listen to the Linnets that are there. Now, I live 50 miles away, but I go down when I get the chance on a Saturday afternoon, and if I let them know I am coming they will put their match off for an hour to allow me time to arrive. If you want to be a member, you must apply to the Secretary, and come out of your shell, and if you will let me know when you are going down on a Saturday I shall be only too glad to go with you.

W. HY. TOPPING.

SIR,—"A Visitor" in his first letter took certain exceptions to the manner in which our contests are carried out at Leeds. In reference to the £20 and the amount given in prizes, I hope to have satisfied him and all other readers on that point. Secondly, to the manner in which our members conduct themselves, he has admitted that he was courteously received, and that he did not refer to the King's Head. Thirdly, Mr. "Visitor," you say you came to our club house, and was not allowed to enter your bird, it being a club contest. As I have said in a previous letter, all our contests are open to all comers. By the tone of your previous letter, you are no stranger to the rules of the East Leeds Club and its members, and you will be aware that a contest run on the lines of our annual contest could not be carried out successfully without a certain amount of time being given for the fixing up of the same. Hence, the rule reads that all members shall be paid up two clear weeks previous to Whit-Monday. It seems rather strange that "A Visitor" should come on this particular day. In conclusion, I would again ask him to come and bring his birds, as neither our members nor their birds are perfect. Any good advice that "A Visitor" could give us would be gladly received. Fault-finders should be fault-menders.

Success at the First Venture.

The Policy of Non-Interference.

SIR,—I feel I must write and say how thankful I am for the information I obtain from CAGE BIRDS. I am only a novice, yet success has come to me at the first venture. Some folk call it luck, but I don't. I put it down to proper treatment. My birds are my little friends. Shall I say I love them? I only speak the truth. To begin with, I am a great believer in variety as regards foods. My Britishers are never without wild seeds, etc., as well as a stock mixture. They also get plenty of bathing, and have good, roomy cages, which I made myself. These are my Britishers: One cock Bullfinch and one hen, three cock Linnets, one cock Greenfinch, one lesser Redpoll cock. My Canaries are: Two Roller hens and one marked cock Norwich. These also have varieties in foods. I attend to them, too, like a family doctor. My Britishers once a week regularly have a few drops of tincture of rhubarb and gentian in their drinking water, which keeps them and their "tummies" in nice trim. My Canarics have Parrish's Chemical Food and Epsom salts. And for all the attention I give them they show their appreciation in every possible way. Now for my "luck." I paired up a Linnet and Roller hen—my first attempt at breeding. Result, four clear eggs. Why clear? What was the cause? I put on my studying cap and found it out on this wise: The hen was in a cold room, and was cold-room bred. The Linnet I had kept in a warm kitchen, and in transferring him to a cold room he broke into a moult, and was just getting over it when the eggs were laid. I allowed the hen to sit for 15 days, when—for the first time—I interfered, and tested the eggs, only to find them clear. So I took his lordship away for six days, and then introduced him again when both were in fine condition; and on the fifth day (June 2nd) she laid an egg, and each day afterwards came another, until five were laid. Mind you, I never touched them. I have a small peep-hole over the nest, in the top of cage, through which I can see how things progress without being seen. How splendidly she sat! Oh, how grandly did he attend her! and oh! joy of joys, on the morning of June 16, there was a chick. On the 17th there was another, and each day a chick came forth until the five hatched out. My excitement knew no bounds. I could have hugged the pair of parents. What hungry little rascals these chicks are, and what an education to watch things! Neither the hen nor the cock is in the least nervous, and both feed the family. I am told that I have two birds in a thousand, all considered. How proud, too, the father is! He stands erect, as much as to say, "Behold, my household." And the mother looks equally proud. As they look at me so, and he sings lustily, something reminds me of the Scriptures, "Blessed is he that hath his quiver full," etc. As I write all five young ones look in splendid health, and there is no sign of red-mite or any parasites. I have seen in CAGE BIRDS an idea of placing a tin lid underneath nest-pan with flowers of sulphur on it, which I find excellent. Now, upon telling a friend (who has been a breeder for four or five years) of my success, he would not believe it, and almost his first words were "how old are they" (the chicks)? I told him one was hatched out on such and such a day, etc. He said, "I had done wrong, and that I ought to have taken the eggs away as laid, so that they might hatch out all at once, etc." But I wanted to know if the farmers or country policemen or others did so in the case of the wild birds. But, of course, I was talking foolishly. My opinion is this, that some folk do too much of this interfering business; at least common sense seems to say so. Again, I consider it positively cruel to impose upon the parents—as in my case—the task of filling five hungry mouths all at once, considering how it is achieved; and it will be a long time, I think, before I attempt it. I may say that I am only a railway signalman, having a family of five children, myself and wife making seven in all; and my children think that my Muling pair have just had a family of five to be the same. "We are seven!" What a coincidence. The birdie family are all doing well in flight cages. The parents are on again. In conclusion, let me say that I owe all to CAGE BIRDS, and I don't forget to tell people about it either; in fact, I lend it, and I am often asked questions concerning birds, etc., as though I were an authority. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success, and thank you and your staff for such a grand pennyworth.

NORWICH CANARIES

By C. A. HOUSE.

The young fancier is told all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder, and as an exhibitor on the Show Bench. This work, which has been written in a plain, practical manner, contains much of untold value to lovers of the Norwich Canary.

The chapters on "Forming A Stud" and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book many times over.

The Mystery of Cinnamon Blood.

SIR,—As a searcher after truth, and as an expert in Cinnamon breeding, may I respectfully demur with regard to the statement made on page 12 of last week's CAGE BIRDS in column 3, and the paragraph headed "Cinnamon Mysteries," that a pink-eyed bird may be dark plimmaged. This is contrary to Nature, for every pink-eyed bird that has any marking at all, it must be cinnamon colour, although it is possible for a pink-eyed bird to be free from marking when it is either a clear yellow or a clear buff.

The Allotting of the Southern Norwich P.C. Patronage.

SIR,—In last week's letter from Mr. G. F. Woolhouse, regarding the S.N.P. Club's patronage, I notice that the name of Swansea was mentioned as one of the places selected, and that the Dulwich O.S. has not been favoured. I hope the writer is not begrudging the Swansea and District C.B.S. the patronage it has secured, because the town does not provide a single member in the S.N.P.C. I think that is his reason. If the proposition he intends to make at the next annual general meeting is carried, the club will not be able to call itself the S.N.P.C., because it will only embrace London and a few surrounding counties, leaving out the Midlands, West of England and the whole of Wales. Our friend states "that London contains two-thirds of the members of the society, and that the Metropolitan area should have two-thirds of its patronage." Is that the way the society is going to flourish outside the restricted area? Is that going to increase the membership in Wales and the provinces, with only one-third? Wouldn't the society better advertise itself by coming into the provinces and letting the fanciers know that there is such an organisation? By the patronage coming to Swansea, will it not make the Swansea fanciers take a little interest in the competitions for the club's specials? At some future time may they not want to become members? Another point: by the patronage coming here the visitors and members at Swansea attending the show will have the privilege of seeing some of the leading breeders' best birds, and I think for this reason alone the S.N.P.C. is doing a great work for the Fancy. Most of the Swansea fanciers are working men, and therefore not in a position to travel to London to see some of the cream of the Fancy which are exhibited at the leading shows held there. But we hope this year (thanks to the S.N.P.C.) to be able to see them. We have given every encouragement to the Norwich exhibitors to come here and compete. Last year we gave six cups, to be won outright, valued at ten guineas, and yet we did not receive any support from the leading Norwich fanciers. This year (having the S.N.P.C. and other patronage), we are going one better than last year to get the leading exhibitors to send their birds to Swansea. Mr. G. F. Woolhouse remarks: "Admittedly our good friends in these towns often do figure in the list of exhibitors at open shows, and I hope London fanciers will support them whenever possible." We hope they will follow his advice and do so this year. For that portion of the letter I thank Mr. Woolhouse, and trust to see some of his birds competing here. Mr. Woolhouse also writes: "Perhaps the secretary or a member of the committee will enlighten me by stating the object of asking the members to send all these miles." What does Mr. Woolhouse mean by "all these miles?" Surely he doesn't think the distance from London to Swansea a long one for the birds to travel? It is only four hours' and seven minutes' journey by the Great Western Railway! The Swansea fanciers do not think so, for they have sent their birds to the Crystal Palace, Dulwich and Peckham, Cambridge, and Gateshead shows, and even to the far-away north to the Scottish National, without a word of complaint about the "long distances," and then to compete only for the ordinary prizes. I hope, Mr. Woolhouse, you will not move your proposition at the general meeting without seeing what fruits come from the club's visit to Swansea this year. Let the members of different societies see what benefits they will receive by belonging to the S.N.P.C., and I hope that Swansea and West Wales will not be backward in responding to the patronage the club has given us this year.

S. H. GEORGE.

SIR,—In answer to Mr. Woolhouse, I can only say that the club would be pleased to have any member taking an interest in its working arrangements. If the clubs were to have votes for patronage from members it would be just the ideal thing for all, and will make those that have benefited by our specials send a big list of new members each year, and so secure that which would be theirs by right of votes. Of course, even then I am afraid the committee would have to step in and arrange some workable scheme to fix dates, for if two clubs clashed, and both got to the top of the voting, it would hardly be fair to split the patronage. In reference to C.B.U. shows in Kent, may I point out to Mr. Woolhouse that, though we are not governed by the Union, our exhibiting members are, so it would hardly be consistent to patronise any club without Union rules; but any member not belonging to the Union has no restraint placed upon him as regards to our specials. Now, if the writer from Dulwich will secure his friends, he might next year be on the London Committee, for a fancier of his pushing nature, with a little "hustle" can make the S.N.P. Club "hum" yet a bit more. The reason for patronising Swansea and Cheltenham is from a desire to be as broad and liberal as we can afford, so I hope that clubs and fanciers will appreciate our efforts by joining our Specialist Club, saving us (the committee) from getting narrow-minded and selfish, as there is quite enough of that sort of stuff knocking about in outside circles. I trust Mr. Woolhouse will take these remarks, not as from an official, but as from one who looks upon specialist clubs as the only means of getting at the ideal model of whatever variety it is founded for, and though it is a means of getting a good entry, that is not its prime object, though it is the desire of every show manager.

A Visit to the Halifax Zoo.

Some Interesting Inmates.

SIR,—A few days ago I paid a visit to Halifax Zoo and Amusement Park. Being so much taken up with the sights, I thought it might interest your readers to know what we have got in Yorkshire in the shape of a fine instructive park for both old and young. The estate, an ideal spot, stands well up on one of the Halifax hills, bordering the town. Arriving at the L. and Y. Station, I took tram (1d. stage) to within a few yards of the entrance. On entering the temporary gates straight in front is a den of two fine bears, and near this is a pigmy farm (animals and poultry of the small pigmy type). Turning to the right is a fine run amongst the trees, containing six splendid deer and pea fowls. Coming to an aviary, I saw some splendid specimens of British and foreign birds, from Cordon Bleus to Cherry-headed Parrakeets. In this aviary is a Hawfinch which no doubt will make some of the British enthusiasts round Halifax wish they had it in their bird rooms. I also noticed here a cock Goldie and buff hen Canary very friendly. The fine gorgeous colours of the small foreigners came in for a lot of admiration from the visitors. Nobody could pass this aviary without spending a few minutes there, and during my stay I heard some fine remarks concerning the birds, "Sitha at Poll Parrots" being very common. One old gent said to his old lady: "Sitha, lass, thou wouldn't ha thought they would put a Sparrow amongst this fine lot of birds." The Sparrows referred to were Orange Bishops out of colour. Continuing my walk, I came to a pen of Pheasants (gold, silver, etc.); further on were Pigeons, Doves, Quails, Rose-breasted Cockatoos, Raven, Falcon, Hawks, Owls and other birds. At suitable distances between the aviaries were dens of different specimens of animals, viz., lions, bears, wild boar, buffalo, zebra, etc. In the centre is a beautiful pond, with a fountain continually playing, and alive with different species of Water-fowl, viz., Geese, Ducks, Swans, Pelicans, Seagulls, also Seals, etc. Here, too, is a fine mansion, used as a refreshment place for visitors. I noticed some lovely coloured plates, which had been given by CAGE BIRDS, in neat frames on the walls. Looking from the windows the lawn is in front, laid out in finished style, with flower beds, a band-stand and fountain in the centre, surrounded by white buildings containing animals and birds. I should mention here that all the Zoo buildings are of white glazed bricks, which give it a splendid appearance, spotlessly clean. At the side of the mansion is a fine playground, known as "the children's corner." Leading to the children's corner is the monkey house, at one side some small animals, and near them stands a large cage containing a Macaw and Cockatoo, two fine specimens. The inmates of this house provide plenty of fun for the children (and big children also were enjoying it). I heard of the arrangement to make a Zoo in Halifax, and being brought up amongst birds since birth (my father being a well-known breeder, exhibitor and judge of Scotch Fancies across the Border) it has always been my delight to see a collection. I was surprised to see such a show in so short a while at Halifax. I went to London last January and spent a full day in the Zoo there. Of course, I am bound to admit there are more stock at the latter, but not finer specimens. There are some fine birds, which will no doubt look well after the moult. In conclusion, I may say that it is worth anybody's while to spend a day at the Zoo if he is in or near Halifax, and from what I can learn visitors will nearly always be provided with fresh amusements in the Amusement Park.

Prize-money at Dulwich O.S. Annual Show.

SIR,—In reply to Mr. C. Dukes' letter of last week, the reason he received no answer to his communication of June 26th was because he forwarded it to us instead of the secretary. We, however, placed the same before our committee meeting held Tuesday, July 13th (previous to the appearance of his letter), and they decided to forward an amount to the member he mentions. We are unaware of any special won by him. All specials have been sent to the winners. No doubt he has heard from our secretary by this. We think your readers will give the present committee credit for having done well. They started the year with a deficit of £32, chiefly due to their last year's generosity in the way of classification and prizes at their open show. They have almost succeeded in wiping this out; only three small amounts now to pay to open exhibitors, our members kindly foregoing their claims till this was done. As a great number of these have presented their moiety to the society, it will not be long before our books are perfectly clear, especially if members will hurry up with their subscriptions. Affairs look particularly promising for the forthcoming venture in October. The five judges' fees have already been subscribed, and we have heaps of promises of support from last year's exhibitors. Although a few perhaps waited a little while for their dues, they took it in a sporting spirit. So, together with, we trust, a host of new friends, we hope to clear all the obstacle hurdles this year. We feel sure Mr. Dukes and his members will help us with the well-known Lancashire spirit.

The Song of the Linnet North and South.

"Racing" versus "Singing."

SIR,—I have read with great interest the recent letters on the song of the Linnet, and I note that the Northern men claim theirs as having the best quality song, and that they say the London Linnet's notes are useless; while the London men claim that their own Linnet song is correct, and that the Leeds, etc., song is rubbish. I must say I think the Northern birds have much the best song in them, for this reason: Take out, say, six birds as call birds, i.e., five London birds and one good Leeds bird; put the five down in one place and the Leeds bird, say, 20 or 30 yards away, among plenty of wild Linnets. Nearly all the wild birds will draw around the Leeds bird, and entirely ignore the five London birds, unless these five were singing, and the Leeds bird remained silent, which, of course, entirely alters the matter. "London Fancier" asks if these Northern birds have their own song, or whether they are trained by some artificial instrument. Their best birds are caught very young, and trained under a good schoolmaster, not a German Roller Canary, but a good quality singing Linnet. No sooner a Northern man mentions one of his birds doing a "run" or "roll" similar to a Roller Canary, than some London chap at once asserts the Northern birds have been kept in the same room as Roller Canaries, and has been trained under these. It is no such thing, for what Linnet fancier living in the country has not heard occasional cock Linnets (especially in the breeding season), "running" their notes, as they fly, nearly as long as a Roller Canary? And it stands to reason these Linnets flying wild have heard no Canary. Another way to prove the "run" or "roll" in a good quality Linnet is different to a Roller Canary's is this: The Linnet with a "run" will draw the wild Linnets all around him speedily; but put a German Canary, or a dozen, in a field, either covered up or exposed to view, and how many Linnets would drop to them? The answer is—none, or very few. It is as the Leeds men say, if a London man took one of his best birds to Leeds he would get quickly beaten and well laughed at. On the other hand, if a Leeds or Blackburn man took the best bird to sing at London, he would be simply "not in it"; and for this reason: the Northern and London birds are bred for entirely different singing; thus the Northern quality singers want a bird with as many changes of song as possible, while the London birds are really racers not quality singers, i.e., they play on a few good notes and repeat them fast, and for each correct song they get a chalk. So that if he sang "Tollic, tollic, hic, hic, quay, ter wheet" (or any other good song) twenty times in succession, he could get twenty chalks, provided he made no mistakes, just the same as if he had sung a dozen and different songs. I quite agree with Mr. George Rostron that "London Fancier," if he heard a Northern bird doing its song, especially the heavy water blubber, he would say their birds in the south were far behind the Northern birds, and he would hasten to let the "racers" fly and go in for quality singing proper, the same as is indulged in at Leeds, Blackburn, Gateshead-on-Tyne, and at dozens of other towns. Of course, I know even in a place like Leeds there are two styles of singing, viz., quality and time (or quantity) singing, but then in London it is just the same, i.e., racing, one style, and the other style time singing. The former has to sing good songs, while the latter can sing anything so long as he does not stop. Now, why cannot they have three styles in London, Leeds, Blackburn, etc., viz., quality singing, racing and time singing? Why cannot quality song be written out in words, and the birds coming nearest to getting all the words, or notes in correctly, win? It has often surprised me that no man has yet written out the Linnet's song, and published it. I know hundreds who would gladly read it, especially if it contained particulars of all three styles, viz., quality, racing, and time-singing. We can get lectures and books and paper on every other subject under the sun; why not one on the Linnet song and Linnet singing? It is the most popular British bird. I have long noticed that the London men never speak of peeing, chattering, whinnying, blubbering, etc.; and simply because they don't know it, and don't require it in racing. Still, a good many London singing men would go in for quality singing if they once learnt it. It is 50 years in advance of "racing." I trust to hear more of this Linnet singing, as it is a matter intensely interesting to thousands, and especially to me.

LINNET FANCIER.

Birds and their Parental Duties.

SIR,—Birds' eggs are laid in a nest more or less artificial, according as the nestling is more or less capable of gathering its own food at the time of its exclusion from the egg. Of those birds whose young possess this capability in the highest degree, the male is for the most part polygamous, and does not pair; but among those whose young depend for some time on the parents for their sustenance, one male confines his attentions to one female, as long, at least, as the seasons of love, incubation and parental anxiety endure. To the first and second of these seasons we, in great measure, owe that outpouring of melody which renders our groves and gardens so musical in Spring. There is every reason to believe it is necessary there should be native notes peculiar to each species, or the sexes might have some difficulty in discovering each other, for we cannot suppose birds discriminate colours by which they know their species, because some distinct species are so exactly alike that a "mixture" might take place. The males of song birds, and many others, do not in general search for the female; but, on the contrary, their business in the Spring is to perch on some conspicuous spot, breathing out their amorous notes, which by instinct the female knows, and repairs to the spot to choose her mate. I think almost every one will agree that "'Tis love creates their melody," and that the ear is a guide to the hen bird in her choice of a mate; but we cannot entirely exclude the eye when we remember what pains have been taken in most instances to distinguish the sexes by the colour of their feathered garb, and even in many cases to prepare a nuptial dress for the male, which fades when the season of love has passed away. I must not here dwell upon the wonders of bird's nests, their admirable structure as places of comfort and concealment, and the exquisite workmanship of some of them—that of the Goldfinch, for instance. In those snug receptacles the eggs are deposited and hatched. Then the old birds feel all the parent within them, and entirely forget their own safety and wants in protecting and providing for their helpless nestlings. This parental love changes the timid at once to the brave; for birds of prey, cats, dogs, and sometimes man when he approaches the sanctuary, are attacked and followed with angry cries. For some time after quitting the nest this care continues, till the nestling is able to provide for itself. Then the whole scene changes. The young bird still lingers about the old one, and approaches it when it finds a worm or insect, expectant of the morsel. At first the young bird is unheeded and treated coldly; but if it does not take the hint, and perseveres in its solicitations, the parent which but a few days before would have braved a Hawk or a cat in its defence, and would have been content to suffer hunger rather than have seen it without food, gives it a buffet, and thus compels it to rely on its own resources.

WILLIAM R. HARDIE.

Several Letters unavoidably held over.

I write to wish CAGE BIRDS every success. I have been taking it in ever since it first came out, and I have advised all the fanciers I know to take it in too, because I think it is full of information, and at one time and another there have been some really beautiful plates issued with it.—W. SANDERS (Bishop Auckland).

I have taken CAGE BIRDS in for the last two years, and am very proud of it, as I think it is a nice paper to have. I said to a workmate last week, he must not forget to procure "my paper," as for my own part I would rather go without my dinner on a Saturday afternoon than be without it.—J. BIRCHALL (Skelmersdale).

ORNITHOLOGICAL ODDMENTS.

By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S.

Author of "The World's Birds."

Oven Birds Imported.

Recently one of our leading dealers imported and sold to a well-known aviculturist some specimens of the celebrated Oven-bird (Furnarius rufus) of South America, which has been made so familiar to lovers of natural history by the writings of Mr. W. H. Hudson, with whom this species is a favourite. Although it has been possessed by the Zoo, and has also been in private hands, this species is rare in aviculture, and its advent deserves notice. About the size of a Song-Thrush, it has, as I have endeavoured to show in the rough sketch of the bird standing on its nest, much of the form of the Wheatear. Its gait, however, differs from that of the above birds, being a strutting walk, and its colour is exactly like our Nightingale's. As the style of bill it possesses shows, it is an insect-eater, and it seems usually to seek its prey on the ground. Its cry is a repeated scream, very like the call of our Kestrel.

A Desirable Residence.

It is as a nest-builder that the Oven-bird particularly shines. Its nest, placed on a bough or post, is a wonderful domed, round structure of clay, with the entrance-porch partly shut off from the nesting-chamber by a partition wall, so that the hand cannot be got into the nest. It is very durable, and altogether so desirable a possession from the birdy point of view that the Oven-birds' feathered neighbours are fairly dancing with anxiety to possess it as soon as it is finished; indeed, the large Swallow of South America (Progne tapera) sometimes succeeds in ousting the industrious builders from their cosy home. Another species which has a keen desire to occupy this eligible residence is the Argentine Saffron-Finch, but he has to wait till the owners have done with it.

Oven Bird on nest.

Oven-birds always live in pairs, and are regarded with affection by the people of Argentina, on account of their interesting ways. I hope that the gentleman who has succeeded in getting the present specimens can induce them to breed here, as such a species as this is really worth breeding, which is more than can be said for a good many rarities, some of which would never be looked at except for being foreigners.

Queer Fruit-eaters.

Only recently the green Woodpecker has been reported in the "Field" as a pest to strawberry-growers—it is not the sort of bird one would expect to eat fruit, but really so many birds have been recorded as occasionally consumers of this article of diet that it is very difficult to generalise on the subject nowadays. Thus, the Egyptian Vulture (Neophron perenopterus) has been seen to eat dates from the tree and spoilt figs from a heap on the ground; the White Tern (Gygis candida) of the Pacific Islands will feed on the large melon-like fruit of the Papaya tree (Carica papaya) hovering before it and feeding on the wing; the American Belted Kingfisher (Ceryle alcyon) has been observed to fill the aching void with berries when thick water prevented him from catching fish; and the New Zealand Kingfisher (Halcyon vagans) which is very like the Sacred Kingfisher of Australia recently described in this paper, has been known to feed its young partly on bits pecked out of unripe peaches! Shelley, who believed in vegetarianism, talks of the "azure halcyons" feeding on berries as part of his idea of the millenium; but I doubt if fruit-growers would see anything millenial, if I may coin the expression, in Kingfishers taking to peaches!

A Hint to Aviculturists.

The idea of fruit appealing to such a variety of bird palates, however, is one that should be seriously considered by aviculturists; it would seem one could hardly go wrong in giving fruit to any bird that would eat it—it can't very well do any harm if ripe and sound, and may do good. Even if a bird is not known to eat fruit or green food in a wild state, I believe it would be advisable to cultivate a taste for this edible in captive specimens. Insect-eaters, for instance, are constantly swallowing quantities of minced green-stuff in the insides of the caterpillars they devour; and who is to say that they don't digest any of this? Even if it is not digestible, it serves to dilute the nutritive matter, and hence an admixture of minced fruit or green food might make more wholesome a mixture, which would otherwise be too rich, in the case of a bird which digests or passes everything, or form materials for "castings" in the case of species which reject indigestible matter in this form. During years of acquaintance with the beautiful Indian Roller in a wild state, I never saw it eat fruit or leaves; yet in the London Zoo I have observed it devouring huge mouthfuls of lettuce, and if I kept one now I should certainly supply it with green food, mixing this with its meat if it refused to eat the stuff alone.

Feeding Young Softbills.

I know well that the main difficulty in breeding soft-billed birds is to get the parents to feed them on something else besides live food, but, as I remarked before, they have been reared successfully without unlimited live-bait. Just now there is a nest-box in the western aviary at the Zoo a young House-Mynah, which had been hatched about a fortnight before the keepers knew it was there, and so the parents had got to rear it without any live insects; and when this species bred at the Zoo some time ago the old ones fed the young partly on bits of green ivy-leaves, of all things in the world! Also, I have seen wild English Starlings carrying bits of unripe cherries to their nest for the young, so it is evident that non-living food is sometimes used.

With regard to Blue Robins, a contributor to that valuable collection of information, edited by the late Dr. Greene, and entitled "Notes on Cage Birds" (second series, p. 119), speaks of rearing these birds chiefly on meat and egg, though it is elsewhere said that they often fail to rear young. Very likely if egg is omitted from the mixture supplied, the old birds may not relish it sufficiently to feed the young well on it, and this point should be borne in mind.

It is thus evident that the experiment of rearing Soft-bills without an unlimited supply of insect food is at least worth trying. Success is to the aviculturist of an experimental turn of mind; the kind of expert who is always telling us that things are impossible, always reminds me of the platelayer who had settled as a rancher on the Argentine pampas, and when the neighbouring colonists in that flat but fertile land appealed to him as an expert in railway construction, as to the possibility of making a line, replied, "Can't be done; where's the hills to drive your tunnels through?"

COLOUR-FEEDING MADE EASY BY

Fox's

"Egg, Biscuit and Colour Food,"

A combination of our renowned "Egg & Biscuit" with the finest red tasteless pepper it is possible to obtain.

Advantages :—

READY FOR IMMEDIATE USE.
No mixing of the pepper with oil, or sugar, or egg and biscuit. Consequently no worry for the fancier. All he has to do is to mix our "Egg, Biscuit, and Colour Food" with a few drops of water, and give it to the birds. THE FOOD DOES THE REST. Canaries (and other kinds of birds) will come out with that lovely rich, bright, orange-red colour, so essential to success.

A PERFECT FOOD.
Our "Egg, Biscuit, and Colour Food" is a perfect food. It contains all the nutrient properties of home-made egg food, with the advantage of having them in an easily assimilable form. Birds may have this food without affecting their livers, or causing them to go "soft."

IT IS CHEAP.
The complaint of the average fancier is: "Colour feeding is very expensive." Our "Egg, Biscuit and Colour Food" MAKES COLOUR-FEEDING CHEAP. A one-pound tin costs but one shilling, and there is no waste, remember, and no fear of its turning sour and so endangering the lives of the birds.

Ask your corn or seed merchant for a tin of

Fox's "Egg, Biscuit & Colour Food."

Can be obtained from all leading traders in the United Kingdom at 6d. and 1/- per tin; post paid 9d. and 1/4. There is a saving in the larger size.

A Simple Home-made Hinge.

Sent by Mr. John Beddows, 134, Short Row, Pond Road, Dudley Road, Wolverhampton.

When making bird aviaries one is often in want of a suitable and strong hinge. This can be easily made at home with very little cost by getting two pieces of strong tin, shape shown,

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

*The Instinct of Birds.

It is recorded that a certain traveller, hearing some cries from a tree, climbed it and found a serpent slowly winding itself up towards a nest of unfledged birds. The male parent bird was watching. Suddenly it flew away and returned with a certain leaf, which it instantly placed over the nest. As soon as the serpent reached the nest it started back, descended, and was soon lost in the undergrowth. The traveller learned that the leaf used was deadly poison to the serpent, but how the bird came to know it remained a mystery. —Sent by Lewis Wells (age 12), 118, Queen's Road, East Grinstead.

*Nesting in an Old Kettle.

My father once found a Blackbird's nest in an iron kettle, which had no bottom to it, and which lay on its side, the spout being directly over the eggs. An old, strong shoe leaned against the kettle which was fixed in a bush.—Sent by Sydney Bennett (age 9), 115, Stambermill, Stourbridge.

*Nest of the Long-tailed Tit.

'Twas in the early spring; the branches were all bare,
There was no sound of Cuckoo yet,
No daffodil, nor violet;
But Long-tailed Mag began her mansion to prepare.

Safe in a quickset hedge, where yet no leaves were seen,
She brought her moss, and wool and hair,
And wove them all with tender care;
And spiders'-webs, and stuck them o'er with lichens green.

And thus at last she made a dainty woven nest
With rounded roof, near the top,
A tiny hole through which to pop;
A feather-bed within; on which her twelve eggs rest.

HARROGATE C.B.S. held a Members' First Feather Show on Saturday last, but in consequence of the rather poor season experienced by the members, the entries did not come up so very well, only about 40 or 50 birds facing the judge, Mr. S. Dean (from Bradford). Some nice Yorkshires were on view, many of them being quite in the moult. The Yellows in particular were a fine class, containing a few birds of great merit.

LEEDS Society held a very nice show a fortnight ago, close on 200 birds being staged for Mr. Matt. Broadley, of Windhill, to adjudicate upon, which found him a warm job. The classes comprised Yorkshire, Norwich, British, etc., the society catering for all varieties. The competition at these shows is keen, some valuable trophies being up for points specials throughout the season.

THE C.M.Y.C.C. hold a meeting to-day, Saturday, to allocate the patronage for the winter shows, and no less than 18 societies have applied for it, so that a few must be disappointed. The number of applications is rather a surprise; it was thought by some that the inclusion of two classes extra for novices would stop societies from applying. But this is not so; in fact it proves the great faith societies have in novice classes. This will be the case more particularly after last week's enlightenment in regard to the number of novices in the Fancy.

BRITISH Bird and Mule Club (Yorkshire County) will hold a meeting to consider applications for patronage on August 26th, and therefore all societies who wish to obtain such must acquaint the secretary before that date. Qualification: 5 classes for British, Mules, and Hybrids. Will those interested please note and bring the matter before their respective societies?

"STRAIGHT-'UN."

The Colour-Feeding of Yorkshire Canaries.

Lecture by Mr. C. DUKES before the Stockton Heath and District O.S.

In opening this discussion on colour-feeding, I hope the "old hands" will let me down lightly if they do not see exactly eye to eye with me. The first birds to drop into the moult are the young ones from the first round. When these have reached the age of nine weeks, I look out for the first signs, and directly I see them slacken feather I remove them to the flight. I may here say that some fanciers prefer moulting the birds in pairs in single breeding cages, but I do not think the birds come out so strong as those that have been moulted in the flight.

We now come to the pepper and how to use it. I mix with 8lbs. of Cold or Tasteless Pepper 2lbs. of Hot Natal (Pepper) and 1lb. of the best linseed meal. I start with two teaspoonfuls of this to one egg, and a thick slice of bread, and I gradually increase the quantity till I get them on full strength—five teaspoonfuls to each lot of egg and bread. I always put the feed in at night, as I find they eat it up much quicker than if it is given in the morning. As soon as I see the colour showing on the breast, I draw the youngsters' tails, and find that by the time their tails are full grown again the birds are getting finished off.

Most of the old birds drop into the moult at about the end of July or as soon as they have finished breeding, and no time should be lost in getting them on to colour-food, or else you will run a big risk of the birds coming out patchy in colour.

I do not sheet the cages down as I think it makes them too stuffy, but I darken the window instead. If you omit to do this the sun bleaches them. If I find any of the birds have a difficulty in shedding their feathers, I give them saffron in their drinking water, prepared as follows: I get 3d. of hay of saffron and boil it in a quart of water for five minutes. I give a teaspoonful of this in the drinking water every other day. If this does not start them off I give them cochineal tea about the colour of wine every third day, and have never known this to fail.

When the birds start showing the colour on the head, the colour-food should not be given quite so strong, or they will come out too hot in colour about the head. About this time I give them sulphate of iron in the drinking water. The iron not only acts as a tonic but helps to fix the colour. Birds should be kept as clean as possible during the moult, then they do not need washing for the first show or two. This should not be overlooked, as every time a bird is washed it comes out paler in colour, which tells against it towards the end of the show season. As soon as the birds have got all their new feathers, I give them a slice of boiled carrot every other day and a spoonful of mixed seed to harden them off. On warm and bright days I let the birds have free use of the bath, as this assists the growth of the feather and helps to tighten them up. The secret of obtaining a good colour lies not in the feeding but in the breeding, as no amount of pepper will make a poor-coloured bird a good colour.

I asked a friend of mine recently who keeps Linnets if he took in a Fancy paper, and was told that he did not. So I handed him my copy of good old Cage Birds. I think he is now a regular reader.—Wm. Hornby (Beeston, Leeds).

THE INSURANCE SCHEME OF THE LONDON FEDERATION OF C.B.S.

THE PRESENT POSITION CONSIDERED.

Some Knotty Points Concerning the Definitions of Novices and Amateurs.

There was a good attendance of delegates at the meeting of the Council of the London Federation of Cage Bird Societies, held on July 15th, at headquarters, "The Feathers," Gt. Chapel Street, W. The chairman, Mr. H. E. Tringham, presided, and those present included Messrs. H. W. Cook, F. W. Thorpe, A. C. Burn, J. Dewhurst, J. C. Birch, W. Penton, R. P. Harper, R. L. Crisp, J. Wyatt, H. Churchard, J. Turner, T. Miller, W. H. Mugford, H. W. Tomsett, A. Cunningham, W. Clark, E. Meades, J. Carson, F. P. Found, W. J. Honeysett, E. S. Lugg, and P. Adamthwaite (hon. secretary).

After the minutes had been read and adopted, a proposition was moved by Mr. A. C. Burn, "that the Press be excluded from the meeting, and anything it be desired to publish be sent them by the secretary." At this point we retired, but were informed at the expiration of some 15 minutes that the proposition had not been carried.

THE CHAIRMAN announced that no doubt the delegates would be aware that the meeting was called to consider the present position of the scheme the Federation had adopted to cover the insurance of birds.

THE SECRETARY (Mr. Adamthwaite) reported that he had been in communication with the Inland Revenue officials of Somerset House, and that they had referred the question as to the stamp duty on their insurance coupons to the Crown solicitor, but that up to the present he was without a reply from that official, though three weeks had elapsed since the matter was put before him. He (the secretary) said that a friend who had an inside acquaintance with insurance business had pointed out several things in the scheme which he considered unworkable, and had specially mentioned the matter of stamp duty. Then this point, amongst others, was brought out in the Fancy Press (CAGE BIRDS). He went to Somerset House to make inquiries, and related a humorous story of his experiences there in arriving at the right official to hear his story; then all he got was the advice to "write and state his case." He learned that the best thing would be for the Federation to be registered as a friendly society; then it would be quite safe. As at present constituted, however, he was given to understand that the society was not one which would be entertained for registration under the Friendly Societies Act, which stipulated for certain rules and certain procedure. He had learned, too, that no insurance scheme could legally be run by a managing body comprising more than 20 persons. Under the circumstances he had thought it best not to issue any books of coupons until he had obtained the opinion of that meeting.

THE CHAIRMAN said that if they were liable for 1d. stamp duty on each coupon, that knocked the bottom out of their scheme. He though it iniquitous they should be charged a penny for each pound, whereas a "floating policy" for £20,000 was only liable for a penny stamp—he had such a one (a marine policy) in his pocket.

MR. CRISP said he thought that 1d. would cover a whole book of coupons, if they were liable at all; he considered the same in the nature of a floating policy. He did not agree with stopping the sale of the books of coupons, as he saw no reason to anticipate "punishment." He was in favour of going ahead and chancing what happened. If they were fined, well, they could find the money to pay. He could not believe that anyone would so interfere with a scheme which was of a philanthropic character, designed to help brother fanciers in distress.

MR. THORPE said that the shortest cut would be to register the society, if that were possible. In a powerful speech he, too, laid stress on the fact that the Federation was a "brotherhood," banded together to assist friends.— MR. A. C. BURN and MR. CUNNINGHAM also spoke, and MR. HONEYSETT moved that the Council take steps to secure a legal adviser to help them work out the details. He thought it time they did this.—After considerable discussion, this motion found no seconder, and so fell through.

The question of the secretary's action then arose, and MR. BURN moved a vote of confidence, endorsing the procedure adopted by the secretary. This was carried enthusiastically, 20 voting in favour and 1 against.

The discussion then reverted to the question of registration, the SECRETARY speaking in its favour, saying it would be greatly to their advantage, and give them a tremendous lot of power; further, they would be protected by law, and exempt from all fees.

MR. LUGG said that in his opinion the society was not one which would be accepted for registration. In any case they would have to show financial stability, have registered offices, and were liable to be called upon to have the books audited twice a year.

Eventually MR. BURN said he should move that they adjourn the whole question until the next meeting; that they instruct a committee of three (the chairman, vice-chairman and secretary) to wait upon the registrar and get his views as to registration; if necessary to formulate another scheme which would make it possible for them to secure registration. There must be some way to achieve the latter end, he said, for a body of fanciers such as they were, banded together for mutual help.—MR. MILLER seconded, and the meeting generally endorsed the proposition, which was unanimously carried.

A Man of Parts.

Then arose some knotty points concerning the definition of a novice and an amateur at the various shows held by federated societies. MR. FOUND wrote asking whether the Federation rules governed both members' and open shows. In the Battersea Society, of which he was a member, he was a novice, according to their rules; in the Wimbledon Society, of which he was also a member, he was a champion; yet according to the Federation rules he was an amateur!

This created considerable amusement, and a heated argument followed. THE CHAIRMAN said that obviously Mr. Found could not be three things at once, and he pointed out that the Federation rules superseded all others, and that they had been accepted by all federated societies.

MR. CRISP respectfully begged to differ. He pointed out that the rules distinctly said that their definition did not apply to pair and young bird shows, but to annual shows only. Therefore a member was bound by the rules of his society at pair and young bird shows. If he was an amateur according to the Federation rules, he must show as such at the annual show, but was entitled to go back to the novice section at the other shows mentioned if he was a novice according to the rules of the particular society holding them.

MR. CARSON said the Wimbledon rules were purposely made somewhat drastic. When the society started, they had no "champions," so they made the rules drastic with a view to getting some quickly! (This explanation drew hearty laughter.)

MR. FOUND said that according to Mr. Crisp he could show at the Wimbledon young bird show as a champion, and go back to the amateur section at the annual show.—MR. CRISP: Yes; we have no jurisdiction over young bird shows.—THE CHAIRMAN said he differed from that view. It was never intended that a man should go back from a high class into a lower.

THE SECRETARY read extracts from the minute-book re resolutions previously passed, which said that any member winning in champion classes should not return to lower ones, and that all shows were intended to be covered. —MR. CRISP said that evidently they had passed resolutions which were contrary to what they laid down in big type on their show rules, which distinctly said that the latter did not apply to young bird and pair shows.—THE CHAIRMAN, in conclusion, said that Mr. Found must show in the amateur classes.

Then arose the point as to how societies were affected which did not provide amateur classes, but sections for novices and champions only?—MR. CRISP pointed out that it was obviously to the advantage of societies to provide amateur classes, else they would lose members, for it was not imperative that they should go up into the champions. They could either please themselves whether they showed at all, or leave and join another society which catered for amateur members.

Something Like a Dilemma.

MR. COOK next claimed the ear of the meeting, and said that he had won three 1sts at Poplar, which by the rules of the society made him an amateur, yet as the Federation rules required the three first prizes to be won at three separate shows (pair and young bird not to count), he was still a novice according to Federation rules. He considered it unfair that he should be compelled to go back.

MR. DEWHURST pointed out that there was no compulsion at all. If he thought it "unfair" he could certainly show in the amateur section. There was nothing in the rules, in fact, which prevented him showing as a champion if he thought well to do so.—THE CHAIRMAN said that the Poplar Society had no rules; they were governed by the Federation rules. He could, under the latter, exhibit as a novice at the annual show. But if he thought it unfair to do so, then he was quite at liberty to go up into the amateur section.

MR. COOK here elicited a burst of uproarious laughter by naively admitting that he didn't want to go forward, but at the same time he objected to being "compelled" to go back!—He was humorously twitted by MR. CRISP who, to the accompaniment of more laughter, said that he could heartily sympathise with Mr. Cook; he was obviously in a very awkward position—he didn't want to go back, he didn't want to go forward, and he didn't want to stand still. He himself didn't see what they could do for him!

The position of exhibitors of British and foreign birds was then dealt with. MR. THORPE said that though he had won 27 first prizes with one bird in British classes, he knew nothing about Canaries, and very seldom looked over that section at a show. Obviously, it would be unfair to make him go up in a Canary section because of his wins in the British. Eventually it was decided: "that wins in British and foreign classes shall not count as affecting the exhibitor's status in the Canary section." Further, it was decided that in the event of a society giving novice British bird classes, three wins (1st prizes) in the same should make the exhibitor a champion.

The thanks of the meeting to the Chairman brought a full evening's work to a close.

THE SCOTTISH DISQUALIFICATION CASE.

THE MYSTERY STILL A MYSTERY.

We have heard no explanation of any of the circumstances surrounding the disqualification of Mr. McQuiston's Bullfinch at Bathgate Show, and of the statements contained in the letters purporting to have been written by Mr. W. Gemmell, in which was acknowledged the authorship of the staining, and which led the National British Bird and Mule Club to exonerate Mr. McQuiston of the charge.

It will be remembered that in the letters of both Mr. McQuiston and Mr. Gemmell it was stated that the Bullfinch in question was exhibited at the Ayr show of last year at which Mr. McQuiston officiated as a judge, winning second prize, whereas the catalogue of the said show does not give Mr. Gemmell at all as an exhibitor of cage birds; his name appears in the pigeon section.

No one has come forward to say that Mr. Gemmell possessed to their knowledge a Bullfinch capable of winning in good competition —to secure first at a show of the size of Bathgate; for we have the judge's statement that it would have been first there had its colour stood the test.

Mr. McQuiston has not produced the affidavit which he expressed his intention of compelling Mr. Gemmell to swear—at least, he has not produced it publicly.

Therefore, it can only be concluded that the intention he expressed in his letter printed last week of not "thrashing out" the matter in the Press, still stands good; that he is content to rest upon the resolution exonerating him which was passed by the N.B.B. and M.C. upon the letters then before its committee—letters which contain one statement of importance of which the records of the Fancy appear to afford no confirmation. In any case, Mr. McQuiston, of course, is entitled to decide upon how best to act in his own interests.

Two Letters.

We have received two letters bearing upon the case. The first is from a writer who adopts a nom-de-plume, and states that, "it is common knowledge here (Glasgow) that certain fanciers from Edinburgh did their utmost to get the Crystal Palace Show management to refuse Mr. McQuiston's entries at the Jubilee Show, because of the Bathgate disqualification, and notwithstanding the fact that he had not then been tried by the club (the Scottish British Bird and M.C.)."

The second letter comes from Mr. R. Farmer, who up to the season 1906-7 was the secretary and treasurer of the Scottish B.B. and M.C. We give this in full:—

SIR,—I have been interested in the report of the McQuiston disqualification case, and note in your last issue a few lines which, to me, seem a bit misleading. They are in the third column, lines 19 to 27. I think if you compare the rules of the S.B.B. and B.C. (revised), which I enclose, you will not find in them anything debarring an exhibitor of the club from showing a bird which he may have bought a day or two before any show. There used to be a rule that members must have a bird in their possession for a month, but it was deleted; and this now allows a member to purchase big winners for the trophy, but he must nominate his birds for the competition. As to jealousy existing, I think you will find it no matter wherever one goes; it is a part of human nature. I am inclined to think the S.B.B. and M.C. are rather hasty in expelling members at their annual meetings (not a committee meeting, as stated). A sub-committee elected at the first meeting might be a means of finding out whether the party stained the bird or not; and until they prove that, he is an innocent man, in my opinion.

Wild Bird Life.

Young Bird Life.

Although the high roads and footpaths are replete with bird life, it is in the out of the way corners one finds the most interesting species. In spite of the bad conditions, wild birds are just now plentiful everywhere. If you should get caught in the rain there is plenty to interest even when you are standing for shelter under the thickest part of the hedgerow. The rain may fall, but it does not prevent the birds from moving from place to place in search of food. The Thrushes and Blackbirds must be surfeited with a diet of worms and slugs, but the conditions which suit the propagation of these cannot be quite so favourable for winged insects, and possibly the agile Flycatchers, Swallows and Martins do not fare quite so well as the larger ground feeders. While standing for a short time under the hedge one marvels at the numbers of young Thrushes and Blackbirds reared this season; in couples and small lots they seem to be continually leaving the shelter of the hedgerow, and dropping into the growing crop in the fields, and if one walks along, many of them go before, fluttering and scrambling among the thick leaves. The young Thrushes give one the impression of being isolated specimens, whereas the Blackbirds form groups or family parties. What will eventually be the fate of these hundreds of young lives it is difficult to conjecture. Not a tithe of them will be required to keep up the race. Like the grass seeds by the wayside few of them will ever arrive at maturity. Nature is prodigal, and allows a big margin for waste. Flocks of young Finches already roam the fields, and yet the old birds are still busy adding other broods to the community; but what chance can the August-hatched birds have of seeing the following spring? The trying period of the moult, trying under the most favourable conditions, must be fatal to many during the sudden changes of late autumn and early winter.

A Feathered Cat.

It is said that sixty mice have been taken from the crop of a single Buzzard.

High Priced Eggs.

Plovers' eggs have been known to fetch extraordinary prices, for they are considered to be great delicacies. Some people do not consider them so. The eggs are strong in flavour; the white is transparent, but is inclined to be tough.

Disliked Trippers.

A Preston tourist, named Geo. Foley, has had a curious experience whilst rambling in the Lake district. After ascending Ill Bell, a stiffish mountain climb, six miles from Windermere, he was suddenly attacked by a large Hawk, which he repeatedly drove off with his stick. The bird, however, persistently returned to the attack, and it was not until Mr. Foley had reached the Kentmere side of the mountain that the bird finally flew away.

Tails of Sedge Birds.

A peculiarity of sedge haunting Warblers is the rounded tail. We find it in a more or less degree in the Reed and Sedge Warblers, also in the Grasshopper Warbler. Clinging as they do to the reeds and sedges, it may be that in some way this rounded tail is an advantage; but although we are unable to determine its use, we can confidently say nature would not have provided these charming warblers with rounded tails, so different to the square tails of the rest of the Sylviadae unless they were required. This peculiarity is a ready means of identification.

Wild Bird Cries.

At Midsummer bird cries may be heard at any time of the day or night. The screaming of the Swifts still hawking after sundown is followed by the churring of the Nightjar, the boots of the Owl, and the song of the Nightingale and Reed bird. The Skylark, Woodlark, or a sleepy Thrush will sing long before daylight, and at the first streak of light in the east many of the feathered choir join in the morning chorus. A night spent in the open at midsummer under favourable conditions is certainly a pleasing experience.

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers in all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT. Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 12 words, 4d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

LONGTON, LEEK & HANLEY.

Meeting held at Albion Hotel, Hanley, on July 15th. Present: Messrs. Hall, Clewes and Fowler from Leek, Messrs. Robinson and Peake from Hanley, and Messrs. E. Tams, Birks and Davis from Longton. It was decided to hold three Open-to-all-England shows, and that each society guarantee 20 entries for each show. Further decided, that each society give £1 towards a special prize fund for members of the three societies. All three societies are to have the same classification; 33 open classes at each show and eight novice classes.—Enoch Tams, Sec. for Federated Societies.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Usual fortnightly meeting held July 24th, Mr. J. Farrar presiding. The preliminary details in connection with our forthcoming annual show (November 19th and 20th) were gone into, and several items were decided upon. The secretary informed the members he had received a visit from Mr. S. W. Birchley, the author of "British Birds," who is arranging a series of lectures. After hearing the terms of these lectures the members instructed the secretary to write for full particulars of same, and to invite Mr. Birchley to attend our next meeting if possible. The chairman then presented the prizes to the winners of the points specials at the young bird shows in the following order: 1st prize, C. Waters; 2nd, A. Walker; 3rd, J. M. Walker; 4th, J. Jeffreys; 5th, H. Taylor. We made another new member—Mr. J. Machin, of Ryhope, who was accorded a hearty welcome to our ranks. Although our young bird shows are over for the season, all fanciers are still invited to attend our meetings.—W. Reid, Hon. Sec

SOUTH MANCHESTER C.B.S.

At a meeting held at headquarters, on July 12th, the members were given a splendid opportunity of studying the different ways of washing birds for exhibition, and the proper way to stage them; the event being a washing match between our worthy President, Mr. Washbourne, and Mr. Parker (of the Manchester and Northern Counties O.S.). A very handsome flower vase was given for the best-washed bird. The two gentlemen had to wash two birds each After the wash the birds were judged by Mr. Coulson, who found on examining the birds that he had to tackle a stiff job, for each bird was washed by an expert, and took some judging; but he was equal to the occasion, and after a very close examination he awarded the prize to Mr. Parker on points. The judge, in his remarks, stated that the birds were washed to perfection, and that there was little to choose between them. No one was more surprised than the winner himself, that the prize had fallen to him, as he had met in Mr. Washbourne an expert in the art of washing, and he, Mr. Parker, felt proud he had beaten such an able opponent.—Jno. C. Spilsbury, Hon. Sec.

HAMILTON (Cadzow Oaks) O.S.

Meeting held in the Cloak Room, Town Hall, July 24th, Mr. D. Johnston (Vice-President) in the chair. The date of closing membership was extended to next meeting in August. The following new members were proposed and accepted:—Messrs. Reid (Glasgow), Miller (New Stevenston), Dun'op (Uddingston), Neilson and Forrest (Hamilton), C. Douglas (Tarbert), and McIntyre (North Johnston Station). The ramble to Calderwood next came before the meeting. After a deal of discussion it was finally decided to leave Hamilton Central Station by the 1.50 p.m. train for High Blantyre, on July 31st. Will Hamilton members kindly catch this train? We assemble at High Blantyre Station at 2 p.m., on arrival of the train from Hamilton. Any fancier desirous of joining in the ramble will be heartily welcomed. Mr. T. Morrison (Burnbank) has kindly consented to act as guide, and as he is well acquainted with Calderwood Estate, we expect to have a very enjoyable day. Teas can be obtained at the Pavilion on the Estate. It was moved that the show rules (at present under revision by the working committee) classification, entry fees, prize money, subscription sheets, etc., in connection with our annual show on December 25th, 1909, be brought up for revision at our September meeting.—A. Cant, Hon. Sec.

NATIONAL GREEN-MARKED Y.C.C

Committee meeting, held on July 24th, at Market Tavern, Bradford, when a good attendance was recorded, Mr. W. H. Shackleton (President) in the chair. The following gentlemen were unanimously elected members: Messrs. T. W. Wilson (Halifax), Shaw Bros. (Sandy Lane), H. Simonett (Gt. Horton), S. S. Rigg (Mytholmroyd), T. Slater (Keighley), and J. Thomas (Ambler Thorn). Decided: "That the allocation of the club's patronage be deferred until next meeting, August 21st, on account of judges not complying with Rule 16, and that our secretary write societies concerned, and try to arrange matters." "That this club grant specials of £1 1s. and 10s. 6d. to be competed for by novice members of the club in the Green Marked Yorks. classes (novice) at Yorks. Union Shows during the coming season." "That the club make the same offer for novices for competition at outside Yorks. Union shows, providing we obtain at least 12 outside novice members of the club." "That providing an outside novice competition can be arranged, the club is prepared to grant its patronage for this competition alone to such societies as provide green-marked classes on application." This club has enrolled 83 members up to date of meeting, and since then three other applications have been made. Almost all of these are exhibiting fanciers, and not honorary members, so that the competition is likely to be keen, and not a "walk-over" for any exhibitor. The club is quite up-to-date in every respect, as fanciers will see. We are catering for the greatest novices. We shall be pleased to enrol any fancier, novice or otherwise. We set out to obtain a membership of at least three figures before the show season, and we have every prospect of exceeding it. Now, novices, rally round us, and even better offers may be made; join early as I wish to get out the bandbook as early as possible.—F. Armstrong, Hon. Sec. and Treas., 78, Pear-street, Halifax.

NORTH LONDON C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting held at beadquarters on July 21st, Br. Sweetman in the chair. A good muster of members was present. After the usual business was gone through, the secretary, as one of the delegates, explained to the members the result of last meeting of the London Federation, and the position of insurance scheme, assuring them that the Council were confident of surmounting all the difficulties. Prize money and specials for recent Young Stock Show were distributed. Next item on the agenda was a lecture on British Birds, but the chairman explained that we unfortunately had been disappointed in our lecturer; the secretary had also approached several other well-known experts, but without success. But to avoid a final disappointment, Mr. S. Williams had kindly offered to open a discussion on British Birds, the notice being too short to allow a paper to be prepared. The Chairman mentioned that Mr. Williams was a fellow of the Zoological Society, and also a well-known exhibitor of both British and Foreign Birds, and no doubt his remarks would prove interesting. This certainly was the case, and Mr. Williams was soon kept busy answering the many queries put to him. The principal item discussed was the question as to whether it was necessary to colour-feed British Birds. This subject was discussed at great length, Mr. Williams maintaining that it was quite unnecessary, as he had always been able to get good colour into his birds without it, and had been able to win with them in good company; whereas several members said they had proved from experience that great benefits were derived by colour feeding such birds as the Siskin, Yellowhammer, Blackbird, and also the Goldfinch, but with the last-named it was not given until the birds were three parts through the moult, for if given earlier, it would most likely spoil the ring marking, and it was only intended to make the blaze denser in colour. All seemed agreed that it was essential to colour-feed Bullfinches, but only with the natural berries, such as privet and blackberries—the latter either in a green, red, or ripe state. Mr. Williams stated that the stain derived by soaking a few black sunflower seeds in the drinkers was a good colouring agent for Britishers. In the course of the discussion, one of our members stated that he had a pair of Chaffinches which had built, laid, and hatched three youngsters; they were allowed to fly loose in a room with other Britishers and Canaries, but at three days' old the cock killed the youngsters. He had also succeeded in rearing 20 young Canaries in the same room, all the birds being allowed to fly loose in the room. Mr. Williams also said a few words as to the keeping of Foreign birds with the object of increasing the number of our exhibitors in these species which at present are very few. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Williams, which concluded a most interesting and enjoyable meeting.—R. P. Harper, Hon. Sec.

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

Second annual F.F. Show, held at Swan and Peacock Hotel, on July 22nd. Through the energy of the secretary, Mr. J. Gibbons, with that of that veteran, Mr. F. J. Weaver, and a genuine lot of fanciers, 50 of the most creditable youngsters were staged, and the merit was of such a high standard that the judges, Messrs. E. Crundell and R. Willoughby, had a difficult task to place the winners. The team of Norwich shown by Mr. F. Garfield, were a grand lot; so were the Yorkshires of Mr. I. Jones, and the British shown by Mr. Rowley. A meeting of members followed the show, Mr. F. J. Weaver presided, and another four new members were elected.

NOR. CL.: 1, 2, 3, Garfield, 1st yell., fine typical bird, splendid quality and colour, 2nd buff, first-rate bird, good all-round, 3rd something similar; vhc, Weaver; hc, Willoughby. LLANDUDNO.

The Vale of Conway and Dis. F.A. held an open show July 21st in rather unfavourable weather. The cage birds mustered fairly well for this time of the year, the total entries being about 150, although six classes were cancelled. The gate was "thin," the attendance of the visitors, however, being better later in the day. The association has for its president Lord Mostyn, and the chairman of the general committee is Colonel Sandbach, while Mr. A. T. Johnson is an excellent, courteous sec. The show was held under C.B.U. rules. Mr. A. G. Davis (Manchester) judged. Norwich were well represented, being the best for quality and numbers, Mr. Sheldon winning both cups with his well-known birds in extra good form. Yorkshires lost ground in entries; still, a few good birds were shown. The Mule and Goldfinch classes were excellent in quality. Messrs. Tams and Son exhibited a nice clear Mule. Also there was a good Goldfinch of Mr. Harris's, all the way from London.

GWENNAP.

Annual show of the Horticultural and Cage Bird Society was held at Trevince, kindly lent by E. B. Beauchamp, Esq., on July 22nd, in rather disappointing weather; but the cage birds were well looked after by a good number of fanciers. The Norwich classes came up well, and were in grand form, also the group class for birds bred 1909, the winners being a splendid lot of Norwich, well shown. The small British class was good, the winner being a fine Yellow Bunting. Mr. Medlyn (Falmouth) judged.

Canary Breeding for Beginners - - Post Free. 7d.

By Claude St. John.

A practical, up-to date guide to the cult of Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby. It contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour feeding, training for show, and all the details and difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

WESTERN COUNTIES O.S.

Third Nest Feather Show held at the Boro' Restaurant on July 21st. Over 100 birds were staged, and the attendance of members and friends was largely in excess of any previous show. In presenting the cups to the winners in each section, the chairman (Mr. C. Dart) said he was pleased to see how popular the nest feather shows had become. He remembered the time (before the cup competitions were started) when only one show was held, and the exhibits rarely reached more than 30. He was especially gratified, as this was the W.C.O.S.'s jubilee year, and hoped that members would endeavour to make the open show an unqualified success. He also reminded us that the society was guaranteeing full prize money with no amalgamation and no cancellation. The winners of cups were as follows, viz.: Yorkshire, Mr. L. S. B. Clark; Norwich, Mr. C. Garland; Crest, Mr. J. Ryder; A.O.V. Canary, Mr. J. Ryder; Mules, M. R. H. Rowe; British and Foreign, Mr. W. A. Dyer. CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Annual Nest Feather Show held at Crown Hotel, July 17th. Only 55 birds were staged, many of the members' birds from the earlier rounds were in moult, while the later-hatched birds were not old enough to show. At any rate, this was the reason given by several of the more prominent members, particularly in the Yorkshire section. The Norwich staged by Messrs. Eckersley, Broadhurst, and Collier were very typical, Mr. Eckersley securing special for best Norwich with a cap-marked buff, which, in the opinion of an N.P.C. judge, who initiated the show is one of the best young Norwich exhibited in the Midlands this year. Its proud owner hopes it will prove a worthy successor to the noted "Eclipse." Mr. Collier secured the special for best Yorkshire with a beautiful clear buff, while the special for novice Yorkshire went to Mr. Hughes, who is to be congratulated upon his success, as this was his first attempt on the show bench. A class was provided for Border Fancies; Mr. Edwards put down a team of eight, but had no competition. Mr. W. C. Wells (a member) judged, and his awards were very favourably received.

MACCLESFIELD AND DIS. C.B.S.

First Feather Show, held in Chestergate Assembly Rooms, on July 10th, and was opened by the Mayoress, Mrs. T. H. Hambleton, who was (as is the custom of the society) presented with a bird and cage. The Rev. E. A. Hohby occupied the chair, and spoke very highly of the cage bird Fancy. Mr. J. Garner (Hazel Grove) judged, and gave general satisfaction. The exhibits numbered 87, a decrease on last year's total.

MEDWAY C.B.S.

Young Stock Show held in connection with the Rochester F.S., July 21st. This was their second young stock show this year, although only a young society. Some really good Norwich and Britishers were shown. There was a large amount of interest shown among all present, Mr. Acland, their hard-working secretary, being well supported by an active committee. Mr. E. Meades placed the cards, which gave general satisfaction.

CLAPHAM C.B.A.

Young Bird Show, held July 15th, at the Landor Hall, Landor-road, where no less than 111 exhibits were comfortably and well staged. Mr. A. C. Askew, the indefatigable hon. secretary, deserves every credit for the painstaking manner in which he managed the exhibition. Mr. J. Dobson judged the Canaries, and Mr. A. Silver the British, Hybrid and Foreign birds.

STOCKTON HEATH & DIS. O.S.

First Nest Feather Show held in the Hall Cafe, July 17th. Notwithstanding the severe losses the members have had during the season, doubtless through the many changes in the weather and the society being in its first year, the entries were very favourable and encouraging, both to the exhibitors and officers. The classes were very well filled, especially the Yorkshire and British classes, there being altogether between 50 and 60 birds staged. The judging was in the hands of Mr. W. R. Knowles (Earlestown) and Mr. J. D. Leigh (Warrington), who gave entire satisfaction.

SOUTHAMPTON O.S.

This society, which was only inaugurated in January this year, is making capital progress. There are over 20 members, thorough keen fanciers, and it is evident they intend to make the Fancy "look up" again, and be what it was 30 years ago in this district. The society has held two table shows already, and had a long ramble in the New Forest; other rambles have also been arranged. The third show was held on July 21st, this time on the secretary's (Mr. Parmiter's) lawn. This gentleman had a capital lot of staging fixed to one of the side walls, and here the little feathered friends basked in the sunshine and sang to their heart's content. Mrs. Parmiter, too, was in evidence, and looked after the creature comforts of the visitors, tea and light refreshments being provided. Among the company we noticed Mr. J. Newman (Chairman), Messrs. Fellowes, Hamblyn, Parkes, Pride, Guy, Holloway, Harvey, S. White, etc., and a good many ladies. Most of the classes were for young birds of this year. Specials by Mr. Chand for the two best British exhibits were won by Mr. Fellowes with two really good specimens, Goldfinch and Bullfinch; ditto for two best Foreign exhibits, presented by Mr. Fellowes, Messrs. Flintoff (Weaver), and Mr. Parmiter (Whydah). Special for best Canary, Mr. Parkes, with a good straight Yellow Yorkshire. Mr. and Mrs. Parmiter deserve hearty congratulations and thanks for the splendid arrangements they made for the feathered favourites and for the comfort of the visitors. Mr. G. T. Webb judged.

PLAINHEAD NOR.: 1, 2, 3, Fellowes, three good specimens, 1st good cobby yell., another three weeks will show great improvement; 2nd, buff, rough in tail. CREST OR C.B.: 1, Mouncher. YORKS. CL.: 1, Parkes, yell., promising yell., commenced moulting, consequently show slight hollowness in neck; 2, Fellowes, baby buff, will undoubtedly improve; 3, Parkes, really good bird with the exception that at times carries wings badly. VARIEG.: 1, 2, Parkes, 1st buff, good Yorks., nice feather, neat; 2nd, cinn. mkd., long straight bird. MULES: 1, 3, Hamlyn, two baby varieg. Goldfinch-Can. COLOUR-FEEDING MADE EASY BY

Fox's "Egg, Biscuit and Colour Food,"

A combination of our renowned "Egg & Biscuit" with the finest red tasteless pepper it is possible to obtain.

READY FOR IMMEDIATE USE.
No mixing of the pepper with oil, or sugar, or egg and biscuit. Consequently no worry for the fancier. All he has to do is to mix our "Egg, Biscuit, and Colour Food" with a few drops of water, and give it to the birds. THE FOOD DOES THE REST. Canaries (and other kinds of birds) will come out with that lovely rich, bright, orange-red colour, so essential to success.

A PERFECT FOOD.
Our "Egg, Biscuit, and Colour Food" is a perfect food. It contains all the nutrient properties of home-made egg food, with the advantage of having them in an easily assimilable form. Birds may have this food without affecting their livers, or causing them to go "soft."

IT IS CHEAP.
The complaint of the average fancier is: "Colour feeding is very expensive." Our "Egg, Biscuit and Colour Food" MAKES COLOUR-FEEDING CHEAP. A one-pound tin costs but one shilling, and there is no waste, remember, and no fear of its turning sour and so endangering the lives of the birds.

Ask your corn or seed merchant for a tin of

Fox's "Egg, Biscuit & Colour Food."

Can be obtained from all leading traders in the United Kingdom at 6d. and 1/- per tin; post paid 9d. and 1/4. There is a saving in the larger size.

SOUTH SHIELDS AND DIS. C.B.S.

Annual F.F. Show held in North Eastern Hotel, July 24th. Entries did not come up to expectations, possibly on account of the poor breeding season, and the prize money being paid on the sliding scale, which we think a failure as far as entries are concerned; four of the 21 classes had to be cancelled, and many others received poor support. Norwich were the feature of the show, with 28 in two classes. Yorkshires and Linnets were very fair. Mr. Jos. Richardson won special for best Canary in show, while Mr. Wm. Thompson won those for most entries, best British, and most points, only beating Mr. Duke by one point for the latter. Other specials were won by Messrs. Carrick, Baker, Woodhouse, and Barrass. Mr. Walker Smith judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Nest Feather Show, held July 24th, in the Trade Union Hall, 4, Renshaw-street, Liverpool. A good turn up of self yellow and self buff Yorkshire greens appeared, and some very promising youngsters were shown. The foul yellows and buffs were not numerous, owing to many being deep in moult. Norwich greens were nice, though several of the cracks did not show theirs. We hear some clinking youngsters have been bred by some of them. Yorkshires were very fine in style and quality, and a few of these should be heard of again. Norwich and Borders were few, and some of the classes were grouped. Britishers were put into one class, and here we saw a very fine Linnet winning. Over 80 birds were shown, and compared well with last year's. There was a good turn-up of fanciers, and amongst visitors from other parts we noticed Messrs. Wagstaffe and Cherry (Barrow-in-Furness), R. Little (St. Helens), Brunskill (Middlesboro), Pickup and W. Simpson (Yorkshire). A very good list of specials was given, and the champion specials were won by Messrs. Hadwin, Hawkes, Walker, W. Simpson, S. Andrews, and J. W. Brundell; novices' specials were won by Messrs. J. Lloyd, G. Western, J. Richardson, J. Dickinson, D. McDougall, and P. Bell. Mr. Hadwin, the secretary, had matters in hand in his usual style. Mr. Chas. Houlton judged, and his awards were very well received.

YORKS. GREEN SELF YELL. (12), very pretty lot, most of them above average merit: 1, J. Lloyd, novice, fine shape and style, good size, rare dark points, deep level flow of colour right through, neat stand, good wing carriage; 2, J. P. White, shade smaller and finer, similar colour and other qualities to 1st; 3, Western, very pretty colour and type, good yellow; vhc, Simpson; hc, Brundell; c, J. Dickinson. SELF BUFF (12), a very strong, level class: 1, Western, rare size, type and colour markings, well up, in fine condition; 2, McDougall, very fine quality, good, sound colour and type, neat carriage, solid feather and condition; 3, Hawks, fine, deep colour, good feather; vhc, Dickinson; hc, Simpson; c, Richardson. FOUL YELL.: 1, Hawkes, clinking colour, sound all through, rare type and feather, should moult into a sound, good bird; 2, Yates, nice hird. BUFF: 1, Brundell, good quality and type, nice, soft tone of colour, A1 carriage and condition; 2, McDougall, another fine bird; 3, Hawkes, nice type. YELL. (green to predominate): 1, J. Lloyd, foul wing, tail and sides, A1 shape, colour, quality and condition; 2, Hawkes, very heavily fouled, larger, good colour; 3, Dickinson, nicely drawn, fine colour. BUFF: 1, Hadwin, foul wing, tail and sides, nice feather and condition; 2, Simpson, very deep colour, might be a yell., but got benefit of any doubt of it; 3, Hawkes; vhc, Brundell. NOR. GREEN SELF YELL.: 1, Walker, large good type, A1 colour, nice quality, dark points, in solid condition; 2, Hadwin, rare good colour and shape, nice, smooth feather and condition. BUFF: 1, Walker, big, broad-set bird, fine head and chest, good sound colour; 2, Hadwin, beautiful silky feather, fine colour, shape and markings, gem for neatness, etc. FOUL YELL, ETC.: 1, Andrews, very strong colour, heavily fouled, a yellow, nice type, lovely quality and condition; 2, Walker, foul tail, buff, fine shape, nice colour and feather; 3, R. Jenkins, foul wing and tail, yell., good shape, nice condition. BUFF (green to predominate): 1, Walker, big bird; 2, Jenkins, smaller, fine in type, etc. CL. YELL. YORKS.: 1, vhc, Hadwin, big raking bird, good carriage grand style and stand; 2, Hawkes, very neat in shape, lost some tail feathers, good stand; 3, Bell, fine shape and style, but was crossing wings somewhat. BUFF: 1, Duncan, fine in quality, breed and position, good feather, and tight condition, well up on leg; 2, Hadwin, good type, nice quality; 3, (we missed name), was a bit soft in condition. TKD. YELL.: 1, Bell, eye and wing mkd., good length, rare style and position, finely drawn, A1 quality; 2, Fox, tkd. left wing, nice bird. BUFF: 1, Bell, tkd. neck, well up on legs, grand style, well finished; 2, Fox, tkd. neck and right wing, good quality when tight. CINN TICK. Country Rambles

York Cage Bird Society.

Annual outing took place on July 25th, the place selected being Castle Howard. The party numbered about 20, and left York at 9.57, arriving at Castle Howard at 10.25. With Mr. Young as guide, they proceeded to Welburn by way of Castle Howard School, where lunch was partaken of. After lunch the journey was resumed through the beautiful park to the Castle, Welburn being reached about 4.30, where an excellent tea was provided by Mr. Thompson, of the Temperance Hotel. After tea the party wended their way to Barton Hill via Whitwell, which was a pleasant walk, and numerous birds were seen; every one would have liked a sample of them had it been convenient for them to have had it. After having had a most enjoyable day, we arrived at York about 9.20.—A. Waud, hon. secretary.

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

*A Kindly Sparrow.

One cold morning while feeding the birds I saw one of many Sparrows come and pick up a piece of bread and fly off with it to a Robin perched on a tree near by. The poor little Robin had broken its leg and could not get its food itself.—Sent by Mabel Dunn (age 14), 17, Stanley Street, Darlington.

*A Cuckoo Story.

"Ah!" said the voluble passenger on a tramcar, "I remember the time when all about here was verdant green and the Cuckoo used to build her nest." "Indeed," answered a fellow passenger, "but it must have been a singular Cuckoo, that." "Why so," returned the other, "do you doubt it?" "No," was the reply, "but it's the first Cuckoo I ever heard of that built its nest nest anywhere."—Sent by Lilian Watson (age 12), 56, Willow Street, Bradford.

A Parrot Gives Orders.

A doctor who lives in our town had a Parrot which was kept in a room through which people had to pass on their way to the surgery. The bird had become so used to hearing the servants tell the boys to wipe their boots and take their caps off, that on one occasion when a farm lad came it called out, "Clean your boots, and take your cap off, please."—Sent by F. B. White (age 14), 35, Clarence Street, Haverton Hill, Middlesbrough.

Class 14 (Buff Cinnamons) of Houghton-le-Spring First Feather Show should read first Robinson, and not Fenwick, writes Mr. Robinson (Houghton-le-Spring).

Will secretaries please note my change of address to 15, Myrtle Avenue, Wiverton Road, Sherwood Rise, Nottingham, writes Mr. Harry Davis.

The Oxford Fanciers' Society's great annual show is to be held, we hear, on October 7th, in the Corn Exchange. There will be 28 classes for cage birds.

I am pleased to report that I have had a very heavy bird-breeding season, writes Mr. E. Steed (Lee, S.E.). I have bred 91 youngsters, all Norwich, from 18 pairs.

Owing to his leaving the district, Mr. D. Marsden has been compelled to resign our secretaryship, writes Mr. H. Martin, of 11, Marlboro' Road, Shipley, who has been elected as his successor.

We have decided to hold our back end show on November 13th, writes Mr. A. H. Meadowcroft, hon. secretary of the Heywood and District O.S., and we have engaged Mr. Robt. Barrass, of Rochdale, to judge.

Kindly note change of my address, writes Mr. W. Downing, to "The Hollies," 25, Polygon Avenue, Stockport Road, Chorlton-on-Medlock, Manchester, where I shall be pleased to see or hear from both old and new friends.

The Southall and District C.B.S. have issued a card of rules, a copy of which every member and intending member of this new society should see he possesses. The secretary is Mr. T. G. Jeffery, 10, Western Road, Southall, Middlesex.

Mr. A. P. Blathwayth writes from The Grange, Northwood, Middlesex, to "The Times," that a flock of about 50 Crossbills has taken possession of the larch trees in his grounds, beneath which are strewn large quantities of cones nibbled off just below their base.

I wish to thank all who answered by advertisement re Bullfinch and Yellow Bunting in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. G. Rosser (Brixham). All letters with stamps I answered. We returned all orders. Birds were claimed on the Saturday morning first post.

The members of the Civil Service F.A., the Ealing, Hanwell F.S., the East Ham F.S., the Islington F.A., and the South Metropolitan F.A., will receive a copy of the rules of the Grand United Metropolitan Show from their secretaries in the course of a few days, writes Mr. A. Watson, the hon. secretary.

Unprecedented success of Ramsden's Pure Peppers. The finest and most economical peppers on the market. Being used this season by hundreds of leading exhibitors with the greatest success. When you ask for Ramsden's Peppers, see you get them. They are guaranteed absolutely pure and the finest in colour possible to procure.—(ADVT.)

It was an agreeable surprise to me on receiving CAGE BIRDS, to find such a life-like illustration of my Black-headed Bunting on the front page of your valuable paper. It is perfect, and my thanks are due to your artist, Mr. Norman. I may say I have at present flying in my outside aviary seven different varieties of Buntings, and the Black-headed is the most sober of the lot.—GEORGE G. HENDERSON (Glasgow).

In my report of Dulwich O.S. Young Bird Show, I much regret Mr. P. G. Sprules was not mentioned as a winner, writes Mr. S. J. Kent, the hon. secretary. This enthusiastic fancier came second to the winner in marked Norwich, with a grand specimen, and also secured several other prizes. Mr. J. Foster (Thornton Heath) has been elected to the committee to fill the vacancy caused by the removal of Mr. Parker to Margate.

Will the readers of your excellent paper, CAGE BIRDS, kindly note that I have been elected secretary of the Leicester and Leicestershire Hand-in-Hand C.B.S., in the place of Mr. C. Draper resigned, writes Mr. J. E. Wood. All communications should therefore be addressed to me, 79, Paget Road, The Fosse, Leicester. Members please note that the meetings in August will be held on the second and fourth Tuesdays. We extend a hearty invitation to all fanciers to attend our meetings at the White Swan, Market Place.

"CAGE BIRDS," 154, Fleet St., London, E.C.

Our First Feather Show will be held on August 7th, writes Mr. H. Martin, hon. secretary of the Shipley O.S.

Mr. A. Wakefield asks us to notify his change of address to 20, Licorpond Street, Boston, Lincs.

Will secretaries please note that my address for the future will be 66, Napier Road, instead of 74, Napier Road, writes Mr. J. Gibbons, hon. secretary of the Wolverhampton C.B.S.

The quarterly statement of accounts of the City and Suburban A.C.B., as submitted by the secretary, shows a cash balance of £36 3s. 3d., as against £26 3s. 10d. at the corresponding period of 1908.

We learn that the "Bristol Echo" has presented several "pieces of plate" for competition at some of the local livestock shows, the annual event of the Bristol Cage Bird Society being amongst these. It is offered for the best cage-bird, and the conditions read: "Exhibits must be bred in 1909 by the exhibitor, and must not be catalogued at a price over £3."

The annual members' show of the Carmarthenshire C.B.S., writes Mr. Fred King the hon. secretary, is to be held at the Plough Hotel, August 5th, when 21 classes will be provided. Will all members make what entries they can so that we may have a decent show? If any member has been over-looked in the sending out of schedules will he please apply to me at once?

HOLIDAY NOTICE.

Owing to the August Bank-Holiday, the offices of CAGE BIRDS will be closed from Saturday to Monday next inclusive.

Will Advertisers and Correspondents generally kindly note that all matter intended for next week's issue should be posted early, to reach us on Tuesday, August 3rd, certain.

I have read with interest the various notes in CAGE BIRDS relating to the success of various fanciers, and I could not help sending you the following report of my own success this season. This is my first year in the Canary Fancy. I started with two hens and one cock bird. From the first round I had nine young birds, and from the second round I have seven young birds—all doing well. Sixteen young ones in all from the two hens I think seems, from what I have read, to be a record. Am now just finishing my third round, and if my success continues, I shall certainly have a room-ful. All I know I have learned simply through reading our popular paper, CAGE BIRDS.—C. PLEASANCE (Castleton).

At the meeting of Larkhall C.B.A., held on July 17th, the following resolution was unanimously agreed to: That we, the members of the Larkhall C.B.A., desire to thank the Editor of CAGE BIRDS for the very able manner in which he is investigating the Bathgate disqualification case, and they hope he will not let the matter rest until the guilt is brought home to the right party. We appreciate the thorough manner in which the evidence is being obtained for both sides; and the publicity given to same shows that there is no desire to screen any party, but to make a stand in the cause of all honest exhibitors, which should have the approval and support of all right-minded fanciers. The secretary be instructed to forward a copy of this resolution to the Editor, and to wish CAGE BIRDS every success.—JAS. POLLOCK, secretary, Larkhall C.B.A.

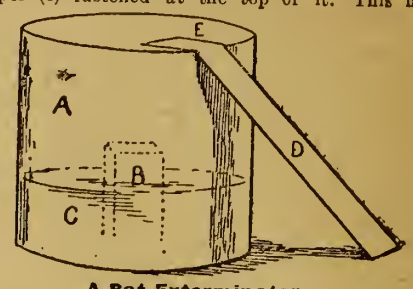
The Cuckoo in Southern Europe.

In Southern Europe the Orphean Warbler is the victim mostly selected by the Cuckoo as a future foster parent for its young. The single egg deposited by the larger bird is almost an exact copy of that of the Warbler. So similar is this that many well-known ornithologists have doubted if in every case the egg is that of the Cuckoo, but a larger type of the Warbler's.

White Birds.

For some years past a white Blackbird has been observed in Jesmond Dene, Newcastle (says the "Newcastle Chronicle"), but its appearance from year to year has been so persistent that one is inclined to think that more than one of the same kind bas been hatched in the neighbourhood. The Dene is a paradise for birds, and they are less likely to meet an untimely fate there than even in the open country, because shooting and bird-nesting are strictly forbidden. There is usually an abundance of berries for them to feed upon at certain periods of the year, and some of them become so tame that they hop about on the footpaths in the presence of visitors.

The Engine Driver's Sparrow.



Can any of our wild birds' friends beat this? asks a correspondent in a Staffordshire paper. When the engines arrive at Froghall at 6.45 a.m. to shunt, and place the waggons for loading the limestone, a Sparrow comes every morning to be fed. It alights on the beading of the water tank, and dees a "mareh" until it arrives on the tank board for its breakfast. It will ride about on the engine when it is moving. It never alights on the hot injector or feed pipes. If the fireman takes no notice, it will go on the rack of the coal bunker, walk round, and come to the top of the food basket, and look in, as much as to say, "Now then, let me be having some." It will make about seven journeys to its nest, and the men do not see it again until about 11.30 a.m. Then the same performance goes on again. The men that feed the Sparrow are Stoke and Fenton men, and there is a link of six engines that do this work at Froghall, which means twelve different men, and they all in their turn take pieces of bread for this local Sparrow.

No. 330.
A Rat Exterminator.
Sent by W. W. Challis, 7, Downing Place, Cambridge.

The enclosed illustration shows a tub (a) in which a brick (b) has been placed on end; and water (c) which comes within an inch of the top of brick. The sketch also shows a piece of wood (d), and a piece of stiff brown paper (e) fastened at the top of it. This is placed against the tub so as to allow the rat to get to the paper on which is placed some seed. What happens is this: the rat finds his way up the board to the seed, which is placed on the paper, and he then falls into the water in the tub. He climbs to the top of brick and calls for help. The others hear him, and go to the rescue, and likewise fall in. Then a struggle commences, and eventually they are all drowned.—W. W. CHALLIS.

No. 331.
A Noiseless Door.
Sent by Mr. C. F. Killick, 4, Cadogan Place, Linthorpe, Middlesbro'.

Enclosed is a sketch of a noiseless door that opens outwards. Get a short length of punch bar (a) with a small three-cornered file, and file the former as illustrated, and solder it to wires

A Noiseless Cage Door.

(b and c) in door. The part that is filed catches on to wire (c) and thus holds it secure. If wire (d) is left loose and passed through cage top and door into the bottom, it acts as a hinge for door, and also holds front in position. Doors made like this are very secure, a firmer catch being obtained, and is also neater in appearance. I use these doors myself, and find them a success. I wish CAGE BIRDS every prosperity.—C. F. KILLICK.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following Conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Weak Hind Toe.

"Bingo."—No, you must not follow that advice, as it would only make your bird's toe worse. Get two small saucers; fill one with fairly hot water, and the other with cold water. If a little common salt is dissolved in the cold water, or even a chip of ice, it will be all the better. Now catch the bird, and, having the saucers side by side, immerse the foot in the hot water; hold it in for a minute or so, and then remove it and put it in the cold water for about the same length of time. Repeat these changes three or four times in succession, but be careful to finish up finally in the cold water. Dry the foot and brush it over with a feather moistened with Friar's Balsam before returning bird to cage. Repeat the treatment, if necessary, three or four times at intervals of about four days. See it has well-fitting and rather thin perches in its cage.

Young Birds Ailing.

A.P.D.—It is quite probable the young may be just about dropping into moult, but you give little data to found an opinion on. If the birds have not yet commenced to drop any feathers feed on a staple of plain Canary. Give a little summer rape separately each day; say, about a teaspoonful between every three birds. Twice a week give a few grains of hemp, and every second day for a fortnight half a teaspoonful of egg-food per bird strewn with a pinch of maw seed, and vary this about three times in the fortnight by substituting for it an equivalent amount of bread scalded with milk, squeezed nearly dry, and sprinkled with a little soft sugar and maw. On each alternate day between giving soft food give a little freshly-gathered chickweed, groundsel heads, or plantain stalks. Supply clean, gritty sand regularly, and keep cages clean, free from draughts, but see they have plenty of fresh pure air, and that they are perfectly free from red mites. Let them bathe freely when disposed. Add twenty drops whiskey and as much Epsom salts, for two or three days, as will cover a sixpence, to the drinking water.

Bare of Feathers.

"Darkie."—I suspect the bird is an old one; in that case there will probably be very little improvement. Your feeding is not very good, so your best plan is to adopt a rational and wholesome method of feeding; exercise boundless patience; and trust to nature to remedy the defective plumage when the bird moults. As that event should soon be taking place, you may not have very long to wait; but, early or late, you must not expect any material improvement before. Feed on a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape as a staple, and twice a week give a little maw seed separately, on two other days a small piece of bread soaked in scalded milk, pressed nearly dry and slightly sprinkled with soft sugar. This may be occasionally varied by giving a small teaspoonful of egg-food or crushed sponge cake instead. Also dust it over slightly each time from now until the moult has taken place with a mixture of two parts of flowers of sulphur to one part chlorate of potash. Give a little seedy groundsel, chickweed, or shepherd's-purse daily. Keep cage very clean, well supplied with gritty sand, perfectly free from insect pests, out of reach of draughts, and in a pure fresh atmosphere. In the drinking water give six drops of dandelion juice, and four of aromatic sulphuric acid twice each week for the next month. Encourage it to bathe freely. You may occasionally slightly smear the bare places with sulphur ointment, though this is not essential.

Unnatural Feather.

Headingly, Leeds.—Without seeing the bird I could not say definitely what had caused the unnatural growth of feathers of which you sent an example. I feel inclined to think the bird had injured the quills in some way whilst in the "blood" stage, if I may so express it, and caused two or more quills to coalesce, but as you say there seemed a lot of matter at the root it is also likely that a small abscess had formed. Had you very gently pressed out the matter, bathed the place in a warm solution of permanganate of potash, and just touched it with a little carbolised vaseline, it would probably have gone on all right. As more quills have doubtless started growth by this time I would advise you to leave them alone beyond touching the base of the quills with a slight smearing of castor oil if there appears any soreness there. When the feathers has reached its full growth it will dry up and drop out—that is, if it should be another of this kind. Give the bird a few grains of Epsom salts for a day or two.

More Rough than Ruffle.

"Ruffle."—I cannot quite understand what the small knots of feathers you say came down the bird's back last moulting time are like—that is, whether they are abnormal feathers, or simply isolated small patches of natural ones surrounded by naked places. Neither do you say how the bird is kept and fed, nor whether they are young or old, which are all important points. I can, therefore, only give you general directions, which you may carry out for, say, a month, and then write saying what effect the treatment has had, giving above particulars at same time. First examine cage carefully to see if it is infested with red mites, and, if so, these must be thoroughly eradicated. Keep cage free from draughts and in a pure fresh atmosphere, being careful to see it does not hang over a burning lamp or gas jet in the evening. Feed and treat as advised to "Darkie"; give a little clean, gritty sand in the cage regularly; encourage it to bathe freely, and occasionally add a few crystals of permanganate of potash to the bathing water. When it begins to moult keep it in a nice warm place to encourage a rapid moult and free feather growth.

Two Ailing Young.

Mabelle.—(1) I fear this bird has "booked its passage" for another sphere. It is evidently the weakling of the brood, and has probably been somewhat starved by its stronger brothers and sisters. Still, one should not lose hope. Cage the bird by itself for a time until it has gained strength. Keep it out of reach of draughts, but in a well ventilated place. Keep cage clean, free from any trace of insect pests, and strewn with clean, gritty sand. Feed on a mixture of three parts Canary to one of summer rape as a staple, three times a week give a few grains of hemp, and every second day for a fortnight give a small piece of bread soaked in milk, pressed nearly dry, three or four drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped on it, and lightly sprinkled with soft sugar. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for two consecutive days, and every second day afterwards for the rest of the week, and on the alternate days in the latter stage give four drops of aromatic sulphuric acid. Your surmise about the cause of the illness is probably wrong; if it were not, why are not the other four similarly affected? (2) Dissolve a small teaspoonful of boracic acid in two tablespoonfuls of hot water. When it is quite cold put one or two drops of the solution in this bird's eyes each day until the inflamed appearance has left the eyelids; or you might bathe the eyes in a weaker solution each day. If this does not soon cure them, get a chemist to mix you five grains of sulphate of zinc, and ten drops of laudanum in an ounce of rose water, and drop one drop in each eye daily until well.

Four in One.

"Cockie."—(1) Your flight cage is rather overcrowded. Fourteen birds would be the proper limit of its capacity. It is not unlikely the bare heads are due to one or more of the birds plucking the others, which is a not uncommon result of overcrowding. Watch carefully, and if you find this surmise is correct at once remove culprits to a cage by themselves, or, better still, cage each separately. If you are convinced there are no feather pluckers among them remove those that are bald, and treat alone as advised to "Darkie." Instead of the mixed seed give a little rape daily, omit the hemp, give a little maw three or four times a week, and drop this and substitute a little linseed at the close of the moult. Touch the ends of perches with a brush dipped in fir tree oil, essence of quassia, or a strong solution of camphor in methylated spirit. Powder is useless for the purpose. (2) Am afraid you are under a wrong impression respecting colour foods. As a matter of fact the sample you enclosed is practically nothing but hot natal, with some medium added to make up bulk. It is not a good sample, as it is deficient in colour. If you have any doubt of its nature, taste a bit yourself. If you have used a ¼-lb. of this sample for one chick of such tender age my sympathies are all with the chick. Wait now until it is about starting to moult, and if you wish to colour feed it then get some pure sweet tasteless red pepper, and use as directed in our columns. (3) Have never offered leaves of plantain to birds, so cannot tell what the effect might be. I do not advise you to do so unless for experiment. (4) It will not be necessary to light your bird-room at night when you move to the new place, and providing the weather has not become cold it should not be at all necessary to warm it. Certainly the young reared this year will be quite fit to breed with next year, but you should endeavour to mate them, if possible, with birds over a year old.

Breeding for Profit.

A Widow.—This is such a ticklish question that I cannot do better than remind you of the old adage that many a slip is apt to occur between the cup and the lip. There is no doubt whatever that, given ordinary luck, careful attention to the birds, and proper and judicious management, it is possible to make a substantial profit out of Canary breeding as a hobby, but one must be prepared to meet with many unexpected events, any one of which may crop up in the course of a season, and not only obliterate any hope of profit, but put an adverse balance on the side of the accounts for that year. Still I have known quite inexperienced breeders take up the hobby and make it a very profitable one, so there can be no harm in your trying it on a small scale, and you may safely take your results this year as the maximum which you will be likely to average with a few more pairs of stock birds. As a beginning I would strongly advise you to go in for ordinary singing birds, either Rollers, or a cross with Roller hens and Yorkshire or Norwich cocks. For these birds you should find a ready sale in your own locality, for the cocks, as soon as they are well in song, and after selecting your own stock hens for the following season, I should advise disposing of the surplus as early as possible after you are quite satisfied as to their sex. Select a nice cosy place where the temperature is fairly regular and well ventilated, but quite free from draughts, and if you have space to accommodate six breeding cages and two or three large flight cages you might start with six hens and three cocks, mating each cock alternately with two hens. You would then stand a good chance of avoiding loss, even if one or two of the hens failed to do anything. Get strong, healthy birds, not older than 1908 bred, and as far as possible mate 1908 cock with 1909 hens or vice versa. Study our columns, and if you can get one or two of the handbooks published at this office, do so.

Two Deaths.

W.H.—Only a post-mortem could discover with certainty the cause of the deaths. I should be inclined to suspect a shock of some kind, which, coming when the birds were evidently run down, proved fatal. I should scarcely suspect septic fever, but rather that your feeding was indirectly responsible by bringing the birds into a very weak condition. Try if the following treatment will not soon make an improvement. Feed on a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape as a staple, twice a week give separately a few grains of hemp, and on two other days a pinch of maw. Every second day for a fortnight give a small piece of bread scalded with milk, pressed nearly dry, with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped on it and lightly sprinkled with soft sugar. Give no green food for a week, but after that give a little every second day. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whiskey, six of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for two days. After that omit the salts and rhubarb and substitute six drops of tincture of gentian, and give this every second day for a week, and on the alternate days twenty drops of chemical food. Keep the cages quite clean, free from red mites, out of reach of draughts, and well supplied with clean, gritty sand.

Deaths and Post Mortems.

C. Walker.—As you have already sent a body for post-mortem, I will defer giving definite advice until next week, when I may see the examiner's opinion. Meantime, I will only say I am strongly inclined to think you will find your feeding, or rather the foods, responsible for your losses. Of the samples of seed only one—the Canary—is at all fit for use. No. 1 hemp contains a very large proportion of unripened grain, another rather large proportion of damaged grains, and the remainder, probably not fifty per cent. of the bulk, is a fair quality of seed. No. 2, rape, seems to be a mixture of rape like seeds, and although I failed to detect any living mites in the sample I am convinced the bulk is badly infested with mites or weevils, whichever they are, and is an old, badly-kept sample. I did not venture to test the flavour. No. 3, Canary, although a trifle small and thin, is a very fair sample, and of nice quality. I note you say you are sending a bird for post-mortem on Monday, which died the previous Saturday. This means that the bird has probably been dead about four days before the examiner sees it. You, and other readers, too, should remember that at all seasons, but more particularly now, it is most important to get a body into the examiner's hands as quickly as possible after death takes place. It is not only a question of minimising the unpleasantness of the task, but it is not easy to give a perfectly satisfactory opinion after so many days have elapsed.

Moulting and Moving.

G. Dear.—The best way to ensure a quick moult is to keep the birds in a fairly high temperature, say, 65 to 70 degrees, but not allowing it to become very dry; avoid any suspicion of draughts, allowing the birds to bathe freely, and feed liberally with plain Canary as a staple diet. In addition to the usual extras frequently detailed here, give a fair supply of maw seed every second day and egg food on the alternate days. If you are colour feeding, soft food of some kind will, of course, be given daily, and in that case you can mix a pinch of maw seed with it. Cover the cage over with a light cloth, and see that red mite do not become troublesome. From this you will see that your second idea of removing them to an outside shed is scarcely compatible with a quick moult, unless it is so arranged that you could heat it and maintain an equable temperature night and day throughout the moult. Otherwise I would not advise you to move any birds that have started moulting until they have become quite fine in feather again, or you will probably find the change check the moult and make its progress considerably slower. By "air-tight" I suppose you mean this shed is draught-proof, and in that case you might certainly find it an advantage to winter your stock birds there, but I should advise you either to put the birds out before the moult commences or to postpone the change until it is quite finished, and not attempt any such transference whilst the moult is in progress. Your query re pigeons is out of our scope.

Colour and Colour Feeding.

Y. or B.—(1) You should have little difficulty in distinguishing yellow from buff; buff is simply a kind of mealy or frosted yellow, giving the bird an appearance of a yellow bird dusted over with a white powder or boar frost. In buffs the body of the feather has much the same yellow tint as in the yellows, but the extreme tips of the feathers are white, which gives them the frosted appearance mentioned. In the nest feather the yellow colour is often very pale, and the white tips on the buffs not so well developed, and consequently less striking, than in the case in the adult plumage. But, still, you should have little difficulty in deciding the colour. Of course you can see the difference much better when holding a bird in the hand. (2) I do not think there is anything to be gained by compelling the birds to eat their colour food all up each day before allowing them to vary it with seed. I prefer making the colour sufficiently palatable to induce them to clear up what is given, and leave them to please themselves as to whether they vary it by taking scraps of seed between whiles. The other suggestion as to giving the colour food at night with the idea that if the birds "slept on it," as you say, the colour might be absorbed more fully, seems to me a little too chimerical, even if it were practicable, which it is not. If a bird had access to seed during the day you could not make it consume a day's dole of colour food just before going to roost, and if you could I should not advise sending a bird to bed, so to speak, on a supper of soft food.

From Now Till Spring.

W.R., Hoxton.—Am afraid it would occupy too much space to answer this question fully, besides which, as you say you are colour feeding all the birds, you have to get them properly through the moult before you can expect to put them on any routine treatment for the winter months. If you have CAGE BIRDS' ANNUAL for 1908, as well as the current number, you will find full instructions in them upon this question. For the moulting season you cannot do better than follow the general directions now appearing in these columns, with this word of caution: that you must beware of making any very marked change in your colour food now your birds are well on "feed," particularly in cases where the moult has made some progress, or you will probably find that the result of such change is to bring the birds out patchy in colour. When the moult is over you cannot do better than select your breeding stock for next year, and keep the cocks, except such as you may intend to exhibit, in one of the large flight cages, the hens, with the same restrictions, in another flight, and all the other hens in the remaining flight. When the latter have been disposed of, this flight may be devoted to the exhibition hens when not in training for any show. All the cocks intended for disposal, and exhibition birds, should be caged separately in the small cages. Feed on a staple of plain Canary only. Give separately a little summer rape three times a week, once a week a small quantity of egg-food, and twice a week a little mixed seeds, composed of hemp chiefly, with just a sprinkling of maw, inga, linseed, and gold of pleasure, and for the larger varieties split groats, rolled oats, or coarse oatmeal. Towards spring treble the proportion of inga in the mixture given to the hens. Give a little green food three or four times a week whenever the weather is mild and open, so that it can be gathered quite free from frost; at other times give a little ripe fruit as a substitute. Provided the birds are well cared for, and treated on hygienic lines, I see no reason why town-bred birds should not be quite as good as country-bred ones for breeding purposes.

Brevities.

Yellow or Buff ("Durham").—See reply to "Y. or B.," the first part of which will fully explain the difference.

Are They Fertile? (W.H.K.).—Yes, it is quite possible for all the eggs in the clutch to be fertile. It is certainly not essential for birds in good health and condition to be together twelve days before fertile eggs can be expected.

Obstinate Diarrhœa (Berwyn).—You say nothing about green food, but if it should be that you are not giving any I should be inclined to suspect the quality of the seeds. Feed the bird for a fortnight as advised to "W.H.," and for two days give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence in the drinking water. After that give twenty drops of whiskey and as much carbonate of bismuth as will cover a sixpence in the water for two or three days. If this does not stop the looseness omit the bismuth and give instead five drops of tincture of opium, continuing this until the looseness is stopped. Give no green food until this trouble ceases.

Bare Head (E.M.F.).—It is likely the bare place at back of crest is due to the cock pecking at her on the nest, which has also caused the sore, though it is quite possible it may be a natural defect. I only advise touching the sore spot occasionally with a little carbolised vaseline; do not use sufficient at once to daub the surrounding feathers and make the bird unsightly. Encourage her to bathe freely, and see she is not pestered at all with mites or lice. Give a small piece of bread and milk twice a week for a fortnight, and slightly dust it over with a little flowers of sulphur. Then wait a while and see how the crest makes up after the moult, or whether any new feathers appear soon on bare place. If the soreness spreads write again.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

A Mixture.

Hilda.—Yes; this is the time for a Linnet to break into moult, and when birds are about to do so they gradually go off song and sit still for more or less long periods on a perch. There is nothing to worry about, unless the bird shows obvious signs of being ill. Do not hang him outside on cold, wet days, and keep him out of draughts when indoors. If you take its seed away it will probably go "soft"; then you may lose the bird. It is only necessary for a very small amount of colour food to be eaten daily. Lightly crush the seeds and mix them amongst the soft food. If you allow the bird to wash through the drinking hole, you will probably find it result in what fanciers term a "bad break" of the neck feathers, which will handicap it for show purposes. Birds intended for exhibition should have their water inside the cage.

"Meating-off" Small Softbills.

Jack, Oldham.—Live food is the best for all newly-caught small insectivorous birds; it is, in fact, essential to their successful "meating-off." One can manage very well with mealworms only. But more variety is helpful, and live ants' eggs especially, or flies, wasp grub, aphides (or smother fly), smooth caterpillars, and any of the crawling things found on garden plants are excellent, according to season. At first the bird should be put in a quiet corner in a suitable cage (a light cover over, if necessary), and have a free supply of mealworms or live ants' eggs; also the other things mentioned, as obtainable. Pin a few mealworms to the perches, at front of cage, and put a supply inside in a shallow earthenware or glass dish. The general feeding should be on the following lines:—As a stock mixture: Powdered Oshorne or other suitable biscuit, four parts; best ants' eggs and dried flies, two parts each; ground silkworm pupæ one part; meat meal, half part, by measure. I take the quantity required of this and mix it just crumbly moist with grated raw carrot, or finely-chopped lettuce, watercress or chickweed (use young leaves only). It is necessary, of course, to give in addition all the live insect food one can possibly obtain. To the above stock mixture I add, after damping, a teaspoonful or two of preserved egg-flake, or part of a hard-boiled fresh egg, finely minced, and, more occasionally still, a little finely-scraped raw lean mutton or beef. Good cream cheese is a splendid food, too, given finely chopped. To get the bird on to the stock mixture cut up a number of mealworms, and well rub the pieces into the daily food allowance (after, of course, it has been prepared for use). Gradually lessen the supply of live mealworms. The bird will pick the cut pieces out of the food mixture, and take up a certain quantity of the latter with them. It will not be long before he is eating the food freely, especially if you let him see some ants' eggs in it many fanciers are very niggardly in supplying the latter. These birds vary considerably in disposition (like most others). Some individuals are "meated off" in a day or two with no trouble whatever; others are as obstinate as can be. If a bird droops seriously, and seems to be getting very thin, it should be liberated.

Treatment of Skylark.

Janet.—Young Skylarks ("runners") do not require any very special treatment when fresh caught. As a rule, they eat the food offered them readily enough, and thrive all right. The best thing you can give them is a sprinkling of live ants' eggs on the cage bottom three or four times a day or on their clover turf. A nice few mealworms daily make the best substitute for the live ants' eggs in fact, should be given in any case at the first. A good and simple stock food which will keep practically for ever when sealed in tins, and which any good corn dealer or seller of birds' food will mix for you, is:—Game meal* (without grit) four parts; meat meal, good ants' eggs and dried flies, one part each, by measure. Damp quantity required for daily use with a little grated raw carrot, or finely-chopped lettuce, chickweed, watercress, or other green food in season, or a little water, and add a teaspoonful of preserved egg-flake or half a hard boiled egg twice or so a week. Give a little seed in a separate vessel (not along with the soft food), about a teaspoonful of Canary seed daily, with, for a change, crushed hemp, groats, maw, or rape. Let the bird have a fresh clover turf as often as possible. Cover the floor of cage with (or give in a deep pan) a mixture of fine road dust and sand, in which a teaspoonful of insect powder, or powdered sulphur, has been mixed. The bird will dust itself in this. It is a very excellent plan, too, to have a second drawer bottom to the cage, made of tin or zinc, which is run in occasionally filled with water (or very wet chickweed or grass) in which the bird will paddle, and so keep its feet in order.

British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hardbills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

Hand-reared Linnets.

Rosebud.—You are rather late in asking this query. In several recent issues I have given full information on hand-feeding. I do not believe in taking any young Finches from their parents at too early an age; let them show their feathers nicely before you remove them. I would sooner have to "cram" them at first. Up to the twelfth day is safe enough. The food to be used is the usual kind—that is, egg and biscuit. Crush two Osborne biscuits, and well mix with them the yolk and half the white of a hard boiled egg, using a fork to do this with, one with thin prongs. When feeding take the required quantity of this mixture, and make it the consistency of thin paste (or of cream) with new milk. See that it is always sweet and free from the slightest taint of sourness. The egg-food must be made fresh at least once daily. Often I put in a good pinch of Plasmon powder, which I am never without in my bird-room. A few small cut-up pieces of mealworm may be dipped in milk and popped into their mouths pretty frequently; likewise any house flies you can capture should also be fed to them, and any live ants' eggs you can get. As the youngsters grow, add a little soaked and just sprouting summer rape to the stock food. Steep the rape seed in cold water, which thoroughly change every day. It will soon begin to germinate (burst), and is then ready for use, dabbing it as dry as possible in a cloth before mixing it in the food. Keep the nestlings clean and warm.

Some Rare Birds.

E.T.I.—You ask too many questions for me to helpfully answer in the space I am allowed to give each querist. They would need a column filling. (1) The sexual differences in Hoopoes are merely comparative; no difference in plumage. An adult cock has usually a very long stout bill, and an extra fine long crest. They are not pugnacious; I have kept six or seven together for a considerable time. The cage needs to be very large to allow of wing play, and to afford a very deep sand-bath (4 inches, at least) on the floor. Food mainly mealworms, beetles, gentles, and other suitable living things. Hand-reared birds can be got to take insectivorous mixture; adult caught birds practically never. Have never tried to winter one outside; my bird-room is unheated. (2) The hen Blue-throated Warbler has not the distinctive blue throat of the male. Feed same as a Nightingale or Redstart. The Blue-throat is not included in the N.B.B. and M.C. list, which is a pity, I think. It is not more difficult to keep than a 'Gale; is a favourite species of mine, very bold and with a pleasing song. One needs to be careful to keep their feet clean and allow free bathing. (3) The hen Bearded Tit lacks the "moustaches" which give the male his odd appearance. Feed same as any other small insectivorous bird (plenty of live food in season). They should have a little colour-food. Will stand the winter out-of-doors if in well-protected aviary, with plenty of good food and cosy sleeping quarters. (4) This has nothing to do with the keeping and feeding of birds, and I cannot go into it in these columns.

Brevities.

Value of Hand-reared Blackbirds (R.S.).—Hand-reared Blackbirds are of no particular value; they are so easily obtainable. Hens are useless, except as aviary birds—very few care to keep them in cages. Young cocks ought to be worth several shillings each, if in good condition.

About a Nuthatch (F.C.F.).—The Nuthatch is greyish-blue above, cheeks and throat ashy-white, under surface yellowish fawn colour, inclined to reddish on flanks. There is a black streak about each eye. Food, a good insectivorous mixture, with some live food (see other replies) and a few sunflower, hemp, and other seeds, and small nuts (cracked where necessary).

Goldfinch with Worms (George Parker).—I have never yet had a bird troubled with worms, so my personal experience is nil. A friend was successful with a little areca nut powder (about the bulk of a large pin-head), made into a "pill" with a smear of butter, placed at the back of the bird's throat, and washed down (make sure, of course, that it is swallowed). He gave a drop of castor oil direct into the throat the next morning. The bird speedily recovered.

Bullfinch-Canary Mules (Another Novice).—I should not care to say that it is impossible to breed Mules from a cock Bullie and hen Canary, but I do not know of any certain instance where this has been done. It is usual to have the sexes the other way about, and many Mules have been produced this way. After what you have related, I strongly advise you to try again next year with your couple. I wish you luck. Good young Mules of this cross should be worth several pounds.

Song Thrush with Worms (Miss C.B.M.).—If any worms remain in the intestines you will certainly have trouble again. You might try a dose (only slightly larger) of areca nut, as advised "George Parker" this week, following it next morning with two or three drops of castor oil. It is unusual for birds to have worms I believe; in fact, as I have stated, I have never personally met with a case among my own stock

Goldfinch with Bare Patch on Head (Fatherless). You need have no fear about the feathers being renewed at the moult. Many Finches towards the end of the summer get a little bare on the head—round the eyes or round the beak—but come right at the moult. You might certainly gently anoint the place a few times with just a smear of sulphur ointment (from a chemist). It is not likely to affect the Muling hen he is with.

Blackbird in Poor Feather (Blaydon).—Are you quite sure the cage is not infested with grey bird-lice, or with red-mite? Either is a fruitful cause of birds having bad plumage, and often goes entirely unsuspected by the owner of the bird. If you will answer this, I would advise further. The feeding is correct enough. Mealworm boxes kept free from meat, bread, dead birds, etc., ought not to smell offensively; they should have ventilation at the top. The "bottoms" (dust) needs to be cleaned out from time to time.

Several Matters (L.W.C.).—It is a bit of a puzzle, but I think you will find the short upper mandibles gradually grow to the normal length. I have heard of Budgerigars mutilating other birds, and possibly yours may be the cause of the trouble. You might ask our Mr. Page what he thinks about it; but give size of aviary and number of inmates. In my opinion it is too late now to pair up the wild (unsteady) Linnet with the hen Goldfinch. You can, however, certainly try if you choose to do so.

Concerning a Muling Hen (Anchor).—I consider you are quite correct in assuming that the behaviour of the hen is due to the hard work she underwent last season. Don't let her build again, but put her in your large flight to moult (along with the Linnet, if you like), and give her a little soft-food now and again in which three or four drops of Parrish's Chemical Food have been mixed. You will, I feel sure, find her all right next season (providing she has a good moult), and such excellent mothers are not picked up every day.

Skylark Unsteady (Anxious).—The bird will no doubt get much steadier after it has moulted. You should hang its cage breast high in a room about which people are constantly on the move, covering the front with a light cloth (such as muslin) for a time, if necessary. Talk kindly to the bird whenever you go near, and then always quietly put a mealworm into the cage. Under this treatment the Skylark should soon lose its fear of you, and come to your hand for the mealworms.

Brown Canaries and Some Mules (M.J.).—The "brown" Canaries you speak of must be Cinnamons, and the fact of your breeding them shows that some of the Canaries you bought have a lot of Cinnamon blood in them. They are of no special value (such birds are common) unless good from the show point of view, viz., of excellent Norwich or Yorkshire type, whichever they may be. The young dark Mules get the blaze, etc., only after the moult. Are the two other birds you speak of all light in colour? If so, then they would be Canaries, the eggs being fertilised by the cock you thought the hen refused to mate with. If marked, let me know how they are marked.

Moulting a Bullfinch (Billy).—1. If the bird is wanted for exhibition purposes, then it should be kept out of strong direct rays of light whilst moulting. 2. I hardly understand this question. The standard of points is given (along with many others) in CAGE BIRDS' ANNUAL. It reads:—Size, 10 points; shape, as thick and chubby as possible, with short, thick neck, 15; head, broad, with clean-cut cap, 10; back and wings, back colour bright and clear, free from smoky appearance; wings carried close, with the bars well defined, 15; body, breast colour to be as rich and bright as possible, 25; condition, Feather to be soft and silky, the colours throughout to be deep and glossy, 15; steadiness, 10; total, 100.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S. M.B.N.H.S., etc.

Correct Name.

A.B.—You already have this; this species is known everywhere as Red-billed Weaver. Of course, nothing is really impossible, and though generalising on the basis of past experience, is quite sound, there are exceptions when even the apparently impossible is brought off. However, I must be perfectly frank, and tell you that they are very uncertain breeders, and I only know of two instances in which a young one has been reared in captivity in this country; even in large outdoor aviaries their hatching out young is very uncommon, and even them, as a rule, they are not reared. Give them egg, the best insectile mixture you can compound, green food, fruit, etc., but in 99 cases out of a 100 they refuse to feed except with live food, and even then will not always rear the young.

Breeding Budgerigars in Cage.

W.P., Hayward's Heath.—Yes, and I should advise hanging up four husks, having each, say, 12 inches distant from the other, and so arranging them that the back of one husk faces the opening of the next nearest husk. You are more likely to have breeding results in such a cage with Budgerigars than with Finches, though the young will have to be taken away as soon as they are able to feed for themselves. If you try Finches, I should suggest either a pair of Long or Rufous-tailed Grassfinches; either would be very probable breeders, and both are handsome species. If you get the Budgerigars, the booklet you name gives the fullest details as to treatment, etc., and if you carefully follow such, as soon as the birds settle down to breeding you should get good results.

Concerning Quassia Solution.

Reynolds.—Quassia solution, which only requires diluting for use, can be procured from several of our advertisers. If I am wanting a quantity I usually steep four ounces of quassia chips in a pint of water, diluting with an equal bulk of water for use. During warm sunny weather I should spray it every other day, taking the usual precautions against draught; for whatever the weather, draughts are always disastrous; neither must the bird be coddled and cut off from fresh air—fresh air without draughts must be the rule. If parasites are very troublesome, I should dust under the wings and round the nape of its neck with Keating's Powder. Pyrethrum Powder will answer equally well, just which happens to be to hand or the more easily procured. It is no use clearing parasites off a bird if the pests are also lurking in the cage, and I should advise you to swill out all crevices with scalding water and soak all perches in same. Two or three such cleansings, say, weekly, coupled with the spraying and dusting of the bird, should result in the complete eradication of these pests.

A Cage Mixture.

Peace.—I much fear that in a cage of that proportion, it would be a case of pieces instead of peace. I certainly would advise the following, instead of the selection you propose: One Bullfinch, one Siskin, one Linnet, one Redpoll, all males; with these you might put one pair each Zebra Finches and Zebra Waxbills, and possibly one or both of these may breed if you put up two or three nest boxes. Providing you clean out and renew sand daily you might also add a pair of Orange-cheek Waxbills. More than these you must not include; in fact, it is only the minute proportions of some that permit so many. Of such birds as you propose, you really ought not to put in more than six or at the outside eight, and only one male of each species. Greenfinches and Weavers are apt to be very pugnacious and spiteful in confined quarters.

Nuthatch and Foreigners.

F.C.F.—(1) This should have been sent to our Mr. G. E. Weston, to whom I am referring it. Queries relating to foreign and British birds should be on separate sheets of paper. (2) Zebra and Ribbon Finches, Zebra, Orange-cheek, St. Helena and Grey Waxbills from 3s. 6d. to 7s. 6d. per pair. Alario, Grey and Green Singing Finches and Grey-necked Serins 7s. 6d. to 12s. 6d. a pair. (3) It all depends on what you cover by size, but all the following could be shown in the small Seed eater class:—Diamond Sparrows, White Java Sparrows, Zebra or Goldbreast Waxbills, Queen Whydah, and providing competition is not too strong all the following cheap foreigners have a chance of catching the judge's eye:—Grey, Orange-cheek, and St. Helena Waxbills, White-headed Mannikins, Gouldian Finches (not cheap). Of course, with all these they must be in finest feather and perfect in every way, or they stand no chance.

Concerning Avadavats.

"Hal."—The description you give is that of the Green Avadavat; if a pair you will find one very much brighter than the other, but you will soon ascertain from their demeanour one to the other, and the hen bird is very much quieter than her mate. Avadavats are not free breeders in captivity, but they certainly are bred annually in this country, and if you put in a cocoanut shell nest or two, there is no reason why you should not succeed with them next year. I fear it is too late now for this season, but put the nests up and try, by all means; supply hay, grass, and moss for nesting material. Diet: Canary, white and spray millet; green food, especially seeding grass (grass in flower), and blighty sprays from rose and fruit trees, or any non-poisonous plant. Yes, the various show schedules will plainly indicate the class for you to enter them in. Also let them have a little ripe fruit to peck at; you will soon ascertain what kind they favour. It is very wholesome for all species of birds. Green Singing Finches vary as to cost, say, 5s., 7s. 6d., or 10s. 6d., according to number on market.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

Grey Parrot with Cold.

Busten.—I fear your bird is suffering from some infection caught during the voyage to this country, and also fear it will not recover. Keep it warm and quiet, but by this I do not mean put it in a stuffy corner of the room; place its cage where the temperature is most even, yet where the air is fresh and the bird is out of draught. Every other day, so long as its droppings are not watery, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia to each ounce of the drinking water, and in between well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. I prefer the following seed mixture: Canary, millet, oats, hemp, wheat, maize, and sunflower seeds, in about equal parts; well mix and keep a supply continuously in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit, plain biscuit (this can be immersed, not saturated, in the drinking water), nuts, and keep a piece of clean cuttlefish in the cage. While the running at the nostrils continues, well cleanse or spray them with diluted glyco-thymoline daily. Take a portion of the liquid and with a camel-hair brush well cleanse the nostrils; it will do no harm if a little of the liquid is swallowed. Well cleanse the brush and use a fresh portion of the liquid for each occasion. The treatment must be persevered with, as recovery must of necessity be rather slow. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever.

Brevities.

What Parrot? (A.G.E.).—It is an Alexandrine Parrakeet. Many of these birds make quite fluent talkers, but their capacity in this respect is very, very variable. However, most individuals of this species speak a word or two. At certain times, when they are plentiful in the market, they can be procured for a few shillings each, but when acclimatised, in good feather, and talking, they should be worth from 30/- to 60/-, according to capacity. Hope you'll have luck.

Birds for Small Aviary (Beginner).—Do not overcrowd. Try pairs each of Zebra Finches, Cutthroats, and Bengalese, all of which should breed. You could also keep with them Zebra, Orange-cheek, Grey, and St. Helena Waxbills, none of which I suppose would breed; but they are very cheap and beautiful, and would certainly help to make a display without interfering with the others' breeding arrangements. There should be no need for a partition. Hang up, say, half-a-dozen small cocoanut shell nests and several nest boxes. Zebra Finches and others are rather fond of using the Hartz travelling cage, in which German Canaries are brought to this country, for nesting purposes. Supply hay, grass, and moss for nesting material. Food: Canary, white and spray millet seeds, a little soft food when they are feeding young, a little ripe fruit, green food, cuttlefish, and water for drinking and bathing. Supply also blighty sprays from rose and fruit trees when obtainable.

What Parrakeet? (New Reader, Stockport).—It is a Roseate Cockatoo. This is a hardy species and only needs to be protected from draught. I prefer Parrots and the like to be covered up at night, but while the cage is covered up all round the sides, a space at least 6in. in diameter should be left open at the top of the cage. You have a tame bird which does not scream, and that is half the battle; keep it where it will hear plenty of conversation, also teach it by constant repetition of odd words and phrases; pet it, and make a fuss of it generally, but do not permit it to be scared or teased, and I should say it will soon begin to pick up a few words. Diet: Seed mixture (see reply to "Busten"), ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuits. Keep a piece of cuttlefish hanging in cage. If it has been used to boiled maize you must continue this at any rate for a time, but it must be prepared fresh daily as it soon turns sour. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps, nor yet any kind of annual food whatever.

Bishops and their Requirements (Inkpot).—Certain Weavers are termed Bishops, but I cannot say whether your birds are either of these—your description is not full enough and I do not think they are yet in full breeding plumage. The males of most species have a summer and winter plumage, which is termed being in and out of colour. The nuptial dress (in colour) is only worn during the breeding season. Very few Weavers attempt to breed in captivity, though very active in weaving numberless nests. Long hay and coarse grass are sufficient; no nest boxes are required. Let them have a roomy cage and put a twiggy branch at each end. On these they will construct, or weave, their interesting nests. Canary and millet, ripe fruit, green food, and one or two mealworms or other insects per bird daily will keep them fit and in the best of condition. They should be permitted to take a daily bath.

Is it Ailing? (Chorlton).—You have taken the best steps possible under the circumstances; it is always wise to take precautions, and so long as yolklings are not watery, a little Dinneford's is a very safe remedy. It is always wise to keep the bowels moving freely, but not loose. So far as I can gather, I do not think the bird is in pain, but merely seeking natural relief; in fact, if I read yours aright it is really lively, in fine plumage, and good general condition. Stop the Dinneford's for a few days, and only give it as above. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish continually in cage. The seed mixture advised for other Parrots in this issue will suit your bird, but the mixture you are giving is very satisfactory; continue the boiled maize and chemical food; give ripe fruit daily (not always the same kind), nuts, plain biscuit, and water for drinking and bathing. If there should be further development, or the bird goes off its food and becomes mopy, repeat query at once with fullest details.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's

GENERAL.

Answered by the Editor.

About a Cuckoo (J. Shaddock).—Accept our hearty thanks.

A Greenhood Holder (D. Sorbie).—We have illustrated a very similar idea in the past.

A Cover for Large Head-holes (D. W. Tatten).—We utilised an idea on very similar lines some little time ago.

A Suggestion (J. Tomlinson).—We thank you for your kindly letter, and will see if we cannot carry out your suggestion.

A Movable Perch (W. H. Walker).—Sorry, but we have already illustrated this perch in our correspondence columns.

A Combination Stove (A. Nickelson).—We do not remember to have seen this, and think it must have gone astray or have been mislaid. Could you repeat?

An Electrical Drying Cage for Birds (J. West).—We do not know of any such cage which has been placed on the market for sale; in fact, the only electrical cage we have seen or heard of is one invented by Mr. F. Wyse, and used successfully at various washing demonstrations, before London societies, particularly the City and Suburban A.C.B., of which he is a member. We should be pleased to forward a letter to him, if desired.

SOUTH SHIELDS C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held at Greggs Cafe, July 21st, Mr. Wm. Thompson in the chair. A fair attendance was present. A vote was taken for No. 1. District C.B.U. delegate, for which we nominated Mr. A. Grey (Morpeth). Our chairman then introduced Mr. S. W. Birchley (Chester) to our members, whom we were all anxious to hear. He spoke at great length about the different species of British and Foreign birds. Many questions were asked him and these were all ably answered. The evening was a very pleasant and instructive one. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded our visitor.—JAS. BARRASS, Sec.

MIDLAND ROLLER C.C.

Usual monthly meeting held at Swan and Peacock, Wolverhampton, on July 22nd, thirty members and friends being present.— Several members had brought birds, but unfortunately we did not get as much good connected song as we should have liked, owing to the effects of the breeding season. Mr. Harper brought a curiosity—a young bird hatched with only one eye, which was in the best of health, and in full song this early. Secretary read two articles from the Fancy Press dealing with the training of the young cocks, and the Roller, Gluck and Flutes, after which a discussion on various song tours was kept up till 10.30.—J. H. WILLOWS, Hon. Sec.

MIDLAND COUNTIES Y.C.C.

At our last committee meeting, held at Crown Hotel, several new members were enrolled. They are: Mr. P. V. Williams (Market Drayton), Mr. G. Gower (Bromsgrove), and Mr. W. J. Keeling (Wednesfield). I am still desirous of obtaining new members. All fanciers wishing to join will be in time if they send on to me their nomination fee by the middle of August at latest, when their names will be brought forward at our next meeting. Champion section have a very nice lot of prizes to compete for, and the novice is well catered for. All dates except one are fixed for our patronage; when complete, same will be published in CAGE BIRDS. Will all fanciers who promised their support to the M.C.Y.C.C. when this club first started kindly communicate with me at once?—W. H. UZZELL, Hon. Sec., 76, Drayton-road, Kingsheath, Birmingham.

How May Unfertile Eggs be Avoided?

SIR,—Will any reader of CAGE BIRDS kindly tell me how to avoid having unfertile eggs? For instance, with five cocks and five hens I had about 24 eggs, and only two chicks (in separate nests). The second round produced six chicks (2, 2, 1, 1 6). The rest of the eggs are perfectly clear, and birds seem in good health; one hen laid 5, 8, and 6. G. BARKER.

Going Light: Can it be Cured?

SIR,—During the last three or four years a great many British birds have come under my observation from various quarters suffering from that dreaded disease termed "going light," particularly Greenfinches. I have tried many remedies, have changed their food in various ways, and have also given them their natural food; but I find, after all my trouble they at last died. Some I have saved for some time, but in the end death took place. Is there any reader of CAGE BIRDS, whose stock has suffered to any extent from this malady, who is able to suggest a remedy which would bring about a certain cure? As a rule, it is the cock birds which suffer the most. I have never had any post-mortem examination made, but perhaps others may have had birds examined by a medical man. I hope these few notes will bring out some of our medical fanciers' opinions, and advice, because it would be of great benefit, not only to British bird fanciers, but to Canary fanciers also, for they, too suffer greatly from the same cause. I know of one who has lost over 20 Canaries during these last two years from this cause, and he tried nearly everything he could think of or was advised to use. He at last gave it up for a bad job and let them take their chance. NIMROD.

Every Bit a Parrot.

SIR,—I noticed in CAGE BIRDS (from which I gather a nice lot of information) a few weeks ago a reader "cracking up a Parrot" on the score of its abilities. Well, I was in York for about three months, and where I lived they owned a Parrot, a right good talker. From what our friend said of his Parrot, I imagine that the difference between that Parrot and the one I refer to, is that the one is a mutterer and the other a talker. I will in a moment relate the language of the York bird. Strangers she did not fear, nor was she shy, and no matter who was there she would keep putting her "spoke" in. I may say a soldier brought her from India, and she was taught on the boat amongst the "Tommies," as you will be able to guess by her talk. First thing in the morning she says: "Wake up, gunner, daylight's come, fix the fuze and fire the gun (bang)"; "Where's the old man? has he gone to work?" "Elsie, come in, else I'll fetch thee"; "You take the cake, you do, not half"; "Puss, puss, puss, mow, mow, mow"; "Polly wants a bath"; "Polly wants to come out"; "We will call the dog Toby"; "Now, Matt, get up"—are a few of her sentences. Naughty Polly went away from home once, when she got out for a day or two. There are other speeches that she used, but whatever she said was quite plain. I never heard one like her before or since. VERITAS.

The L. and P.O.S. and the "Weaker" Society.

SIR,—The member of the L. and P.O.S. (?) who owes this year's subscriptions (and probably last year's) wants a great deal for the money he has not paid! If Mr. Tringham answers his questions he will "send his subscription for this year (eight months overdue already, I believe) on shortly"! Who is the wonderful man who champions the cause of the L. and P.O.S. "behind the scenes"? It is quite easy to see that the object of this person is one "born of malice and nurtured in venom." I should very much like to know how this member (?) has the Fancy's interest at heart, or how he advances it by his unmanly tactics. Now he has shown his hand, one that I suspected from the first, I hope that Mr. Tringham will insist on seeing the receipt for 1908, as I am sure that a person who has ulterior objects in view will state anything. I will withdraw from his despicable controversy now that readers can see for themselves that it emanates from one who has no right to assume the title of a "Member of the L. and P. O. S."

H. W. TOMSETT, D. and P. C.B.S.

SIR,—The person who writes under the above heading in your issue of the 24th inst., has failed to comply with the very simple condition laid down in my letter of the 12th inst., which would have established his bona fides, and, incidentally, his right to ask questions of the Committee of the L.P.O.S. Beyond saying that the identity of this person was no secret, even prior to the letter of the 24th, and that our books show him in arrears for two years, viz., 1908 and 1909, I have nothing to add to my former letter. Any information on the subject will be gladly furnished him, if he will attend the next meeting of the Committee of the L.P.O.S., due notice of which will be sent him by

H. E. TRINGHAM, Hon. Sec.

SIR,—I am obliged to "Member of the L. and P.O.S." for his courteous acknowledgment of my remarks. I must say that I consider his charge of "cliquism" and "favouritism" levelled against the Committee of the L. and P.O.S. a most unjustifiable one, inasmuch as, on his own showing, he has no evidence at all with which to substantiate such a grave accusation. I think, in the interest of those "glorious traditions" of which he speaks he should be called upon by the officials of the society in question to tender a complete apology and retractation to the Committee.

JOHN B. WATERMAN,
Member L. and P.O.S.

Prize-money at Dulwich O.S. Annual Show.

SIR,—Messrs. Woolhouse and Rogers say the reason that I received no reply to my letter of June 26th is that I wrote to them instead of to the secretary. I am sorry to have made this mistake. Our member first wrote to Messrs. Rogers and Mazzoni, but received no reply. On April 21st he received a special from Mr. Goodwin, which he acknowledged, and asked him to look into the money matter for him; but he received no reply. Later on he wrote to Mr. Kent, the secretary, and up to the time I wrote my first letter to this paper had received no reply from him. On unpacking the birds, our member found two special prize cards attached to exhibit No. 3, class 32. In the catalogue it states that owing to short time at disposal, the winners of specials could not be inserted, but the award cards "will be found on cages"; so of course he came to the conclusion that he had won two specials. Each time he has written he has named the other special. If he has been in error, why has not his claim been refuted before now? You say that although a few fanciers waited "a little while" for their dues, they took it in a "sporting spirit." I hope our member is included with those "sportsmen." The point at issue is not the waiting for the prize-money and special, but the lack of acknowledgment of the same.

C. DUKES.

Sec., Warrington C.B.S.

SIR,—I am sure the Fancy generally will thank Mr. Dukes for his letter in support of a claim for prize-money by a member of his society. It is the efforts of secretaries that expose malpractices, and keep the Fancy as pure as it can be. I am only a novice in "Canarydom," but hope for advancement, and when I read the "bounce" of the Dulwich Ornithological Society, I feel these hopes are rudely brushed aside. It is not so long since Mr. Sandy's claim for prize-money was before us in the Press, and his was supposed to be the last. Now, Mr. Dukes writes; and Goodness knows how many more haven't yet received theirs. The letter from the show managers is an eye-opener. "All prize-money paid" was the cry. Now we read that the members never drew any, and are still waiting an indefinite period for it. We read of it as a "flourishing" society, and everything "promising." How can this be when they, after a year nearly, have not paid their dues for the last annual show? The "Lancashire" is very different from the "D.O.S." spirit, and they have waited almost a year in silence for what they were entitled to. May not all this "twaddle" about support be dismissed as being without foundation? How can they be promised support when they cannot pay out? They ought not to wonder at their society being off the S.N.P. Club's list when these delusive and, I think, unfair notices are sent for publication. "Bluff and bounce" will not in 1909 catch the unwary to send birds long distances at trouble and expense, and to then, if fortunate enough to win a prize, have to write and write to the society without even a reply.

The Allotting of the Southern Norwich P.C. Patronage.

SIR,—I beg to thank Mr. S. H. George and also Mr. F. S. Matthes for their replies. I can assure Mr. George that I am not begrudging Swansea the patronage allotted them; quite the contrary. My object was to bring before the members of the S.N.P.C. a system that, in my opinion, would be of greater benefit to the club, and I am pleased that our hon. secretary is also of that opinion. I can already see the fruits of the Swansea show. Presuming my proposition is carried, they will be so pleased, I hope, with our members' support, that another year they will induce the Norwich Fanciers of Swansea and that part of Wales to join the S.N.P.C., and so again by right of votes secure the club's support, and deservedly so. I only instanced both Swansea and Cheltenham to force home my point, not because of any feeling, for I hold the greatest respect for both societies. I feel sure there would be more satisfaction all round, not only from a show manager's point of view, but from the general body of members who help to carry out the primary object of the club. In fact, as Mr. Matthes remarks, it would just be the ideal thing for all. G. F. WOOLHOUSE.

A Voracious Pet.

The Story of a Tame Cuckoo.

SIR,—The Cuckoo depicted in the photo was brought to me when it was a week old. At that age it was a most ugly bird, completely filling the Hedge-Sparrow's nest in which it was hatched. There seemed to be only one good thing about it, and that was its appetite, which was enormous; his favourite food seemed to be the green caterpillars found on cabbage plants, and he has eaten as many as twenty-three of these at one meal, and still has asked for more. The photo was taken in the garden, and after the sitting, master Cuckoo had a fly round for some minutes—that is to say, he went from my hand on to the fence, which is about 7ft. high and ten yards away; he had one or two shorter flights, but seemed quite ready to come back to me when called. As he gets older I shall have to curtail his liberty, for he gets stronger on the wing every day, and I have no wish to lose him. He is very tame, flying to my shoulder when hungry, and if I do not see to his wants quickly, he viciously pecks my ear. He is a pugnacious bird, frequently pecking the hand that feeds him. His staple food consists of one part ant's eggs, one part dried flies, two parts ground biscuit, and one part hard-boiled egg fresh daily. He seems to thrive on this with a few scraps of meat and boiled potato added for dinner. I give him any grubs I may catch during the day, and if there are no grubs he has a dozen mealworms for supper. If any of your readers can give me any advice as to how I can get him through the winter I shall be obliged. I understand that up to the present no Cuckoo has lived in captivity for twelve months. Is this so? With best wishes for the success of your splendid paper from master Cuckoo and myself,

J. SHADDOCK.

Notes on the Beautiful "Butcher Bird."

SIR,—Permit me to say a little on the rare Great Grey Shrike or "Butcher Bird" (Lanius excubitor). This bird is one of the most beautiful of its kind. It is about the size of a Blackbird or Fieldfare, has a short neck, large ovate head with flattened top, and a short, stout, high bill, compressed towards the end. The upper part of the plumage of the male is light ash grey; the lower is white, and it has a broad black band on the side of its head extending from the nostril to well behind the ear. The female, in addition, has neck and breast well marked with semi-circular grey lines. It feeds upon various reptiles and small birds and insects, which, killed by repeated blows of its bill upon the head, are then impaled on a thorn or forced into the fork of a branch, so that they may be torn up into small pieces. Hairs and feathers are not first removed, but simply ejected in pellets later on, together with any other undigested material. It has earned the name of "Butcher Bird" by reason of its slaughtering propensity, and because it leaves such parts of its victims still impaled as it does not feel inclined to eat. Its ordinary cry is rather like the syllable "Wee, wee," uttered sharply and loudly; but when angry it screams like a Hawk. Its nest is large and is formed of moss and dry grass, with a lining of wool and hair, and is placed high up in the fork of a tree. It lays from five to eight eggs just over an inch in length and grey-white in colour, with reddish-brown or greyish-purple spots at the larger end. Shrikes defend their nests against Hawks and Crows with courageous skill, and easily drive off others far stronger than themselves. Their affection for their young, which remain with them till the following season, is as keen as their temper is impulsive and ardent.

REES REES.

A Remedy Wanted for a Fatal Disease.

SIR,—As an old breeder of Canaries, and one who has kept British birds from a boy, allow me to state that I have seen and had birds suffering from most kinds of illnesses, including the dreaded bird fever; but this and last season I have had some kind of fatal illness among my birds which greatly puzzles me, and for which I have tried a great many remedies. The symptoms are these: the birds have appeared all right, and in fact the cocks have been singing well and in full song, but all of a sudden they have become thick and sit all of a heap; of a sudden again they rush down to the seed, eat well, and again resume their position on the perch, head under the wing and themselves puffed up; after a short time again they go for the seed and eat well, then go to the perch and sit as before. Then all of a sudden they drop down dead. Six birds have been lost in this way. I am quite certain they have had no poison. All they have had is: seed (plain Canary and hemp mixed), either a small piece of chickweed or a dandelion leaf two or three times a day, with a small teaspoonful of egg food three or four times a day. If any of your readers can tell me the cause and the remedy, I should be grateful if they would do so. Perhaps some other fanciers have had similar experiences. I am quite certain it is not the bird fever, which I once had some 20 years ago, and which cleared me out of about 50 in less than a week, their symptoms being quite different.

OLD BREEDER.

Moving Day.

How the Birds Stood the "Flit."

SIR,—We have removed to the Hollies, 25, Polygon Avenue, Stockport Road, C-on-M, Manchester, where we shall be pleased to see, or hear from, all friends. It was a flitting, I can tell you, what with the building material for the workshop, business stock, furniture and the birds! The Thrush I wrote about before, which is nesting in a cage, had laid her second egg, and has not laid since. We have a Hybrid one day old, two nests of young Yorkies ditto, and one nest due to hatch on day of removal; they were all eggs in this nest when we left the old house, but a very short time after arriving at the new quarters we looked in the nest and found one youngster had got more than a "peep-hole" in the world. The whole clutch hatched out in due course, the hen feeding well; in fact, each hen fed as though nothing had happened out of the ordinary, and the hens that had been sitting on eggs for a few days continued to sit close. But one hen that had laid her clutch, and that had the eggs put back the next day, refused to sit. So I think this proves that it is better to move birds after they have been sitting a few days, or have young hatched out, than when they were about to sit. The Thrushes and Blackbirds appear to be very much at home in their new quarters, and if the weather will only pick up we may yet do the trick. I think the best term we can apply to this summer will be to call it a mild winter, with cyclones thrown in. The ride out, and change of wall papers, seem to have done my birds good, although many of the youngsters (we have about fifty) are in the moult, as are also a few of the old ones, yet the food is going quicker than ever before. It reminds me of the kiddies going to Blackpool; they cannot do too much for "little Mary." So we ought to do well if this continues, especially if we can yet get those young Thrushes, and the Thrush-Blackbird Hybrid. We have since lost the young Hybrid; it was a Hard-bill. W. DOWNING

Goldfinches Rear their Young in a Bird-room.

SIR,—I am a constant reader of CAGE BIRDS, and a friend of mine has now in his bird-room a pair of Goldfinches (netted in 1907) which have built their own nest, and sat and brought up their own young (four). At present they are doing well, and are out of the nest. We thought this would be interesting to readers, and we should like to know if this is a record, as we have never known it before. If any reader would like to know anything further about them we should be pleased to give it.

G. BACKHOUSE.

[We think many of our readers would be interested to learn on what food the Goldfinches brought up their young, also whether they were kept in a cage, if Mr. Backhouse would kindly give them this information.—EDITOR.]

A New Society for Tunstall and District.

SIR,—I am very pleased to inform you that we have started a Cage Bird Society in Tunstall, and we are going on with it very well. It is to be called the Tunstall and District C.B.S. I dare say you will be surprised to hear of it so late, but we intended getting on a sound footing before letting you know, as there has never been a club here before. We held our First Feather Show on July 10th, and it was quite a success. We had upwards of forty entries, and some very promising youngsters were amongst them. We are all readers of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, from which we have had so much useful information; we wish it the success it so richly deserves.

Resignation of the Chairman.

SIR,—Owing to pressure of business, etc., I find I am unable to attend to the duties of Chairman of the Club; but before resigning I beg to thank the various committees and other members who have worked with me for their kind assistance and attention at all times, and I hope they will select one who will carry out their wishes in a better way than I could hope to have done. I may add I shall always be an exhibitor, and will assist whomsoever they may select, as I have tried to do in the past. Again, I beg to thank the members, exhibitors and particularly the committees who have worked with me in the interest of the club.

JOSEPH J. CLOKE,
Chairman Y.C.C. of Ireland.

SIR,—Some few months ago I received a circular from Messrs. Sheridan and Fry stating that they were giving up the Fancy owing to pressure of business, and I understand that they have disposed of all their birds. I know they did not renew their subscriptions at the commencement of the year, and took no part in the election of the present committee. Why, therefore, their sudden interest in the affairs of the club? Let me tell the members it is because the committee have decided to investigate the reason why a former chairman left the club. When the result of the investigation is published members will see why Messrs. Sheridan and Fry launched the present game of "blnff" that is going on.

C. A. O'REILLY.

SIR,—Mr. Rooney in his last edition of "tit-bits" said he had letters from the most influential fanciers in Dundalk. Would he kindly inform your readers who they are, as nine out of the ten Dundalk fanciers who are members of the Y.C.C. of Ireland have put their names to the appended circular. Messrs. Sheridan and Fry published a circular some months ago saying they were giving up the Fancy (as a matter of fact, sold all their birds and cages long ago), but when certain "work" is to be done, they pay their subscriptions. Mr. Huggard also sold out, as a matter of course! Mr. Camp is not a member this year; Messrs. Stewart and O'Callaghan are only new members and are not entitled to call into question what occurred previous to their becoming members; Mr. J. Mulligan, I understand, is only 12 years old, and is not entitled to vote. As a matter of fact out of the list of names published there are only four exhibiting members.

RICHARD F. DUIGENAN (Hon. Treas.), on behalf of the committee.

Resolution put and carried at a recent meeting of the committee of the Y.C.C. of Ireland, in reply to requisition received by the hon. secretary:—

"July 8th, 1909.

"That inasmuch as the committee who are entrusted by the rules with the management of the club have, after mature consideration, already decided by a majority of six to two on the very matters referred to, it is unreasonable, and even frivolous, to take up the time of the committee with further discussion, or the time of the members by a general meeting as suggested; and, further, on these grounds, that this matter was dealt with and adopted at the annual general meeting. And the requisition is hereby rejected." (Mr. Cloke was not present at the meeting when the above resolution was put, but subsequently approved of it; he presided at the previous meeting.) Signed: J. J. Cloke, R. F. Duigenan, J. R. Hyland, P. H. Kenny, T. P. Lambert, C. A. O'Reilly, and W. C. Sholedice (Dublin Committee)."

We, the undersigned members of the Y.C.C. of Ireland, desire to associate ourselves with, and approve of, the action of the majority of the committee in refusing to stultify themselves by acceding to the request to hold an extraordinary general meeting:—J. M. Barclay (Dublin, vice-president), J. D. Rowe (vice-president), Dr. Lavery (country committee), P. M'Ardle, R. J. Gaskin, Wm. Keating (country committee), Patrick M'Keown, Thos. M'Kitterick, M. Byrne, and P. Grimes (of Dundalk), Thos. Meehan and M. Gray (of Drogheda), Miss E. G. M'Enift (Cootehill), N. Thompson (Tinahely, country committee), Archibald Neill, A. J. Hughes, and P. M'Guire (of Dublin).

Curious Nesting Sites of British Birds.

SIR,—The following facts are worthy of mention and might prove interesting to some. Among the various unusual nesting places noted during the past year, a Blackbird at South Witham (Essex) placed its nest at the foot of a lectern in the Parish Church. Four young Thrushes were reared in a Brussels sprouts plant near Worksop (Notts). A clutch of Robin's eggs was laid in the pocket of an old disused coat which had been hung up on an outhouse at Sandford (Devon), and the young birds were duly hatched out. Apparently without any dire results, a nest at Bishops Stortford (Herts) was shared by a partridge and a wild duck; when found it contained fourteen eggs, of which eight were those of the Partridge. Presumably the birds used the nest alternately. A double or combined nest was reported from Redhill (Surrey). It was built in a rustic arch, and was oblong in shape. The upper part was the property of a Blackbird, while the "ground floor" was tenanted by a Wren.

Was the Policy of "Grab" to Blame?

The Newport and Monmouthshire C.B.S. Closes Down.

SIR,—Kindly allow me a small space in your valuable paper CAGE BIRDS with reference to the above society, as much correspondence reaches me from all parts of the country, and having no club funds to work upon this comes expensive. On December 5th, 1908, we held a show at the Castle Hotel, giving two outside classes, with the sole object of bringing others to join our society, and make the whole business a sure success. The show was judged by Mr. A. Allen (Newport), and words cannot convey my gratitude to that gentleman for his kindness in giving his services free to help us, and everybody seemed satisfied when the cards were placed. Then came the winding up. Members agreed to leave prize money in the society, but pay out to non-members on the outside classes. We could hardly afford more than this, the gate being very poor. Now, to help the novice in members' classes I myself gave a Norwich cock for best bird, G. Brown, mahogany cage, G. Hughes' Yorkshire cock for Yorkshire section. The prizes and prize money were given out on December 12th, one week after the show. The result was the novice offered his prizes for sale; others left the society, leaving five of us to carry on, and giving no explanation for doing so. I called meetings week after week to consider the present year's dates for shows, etc., but could only get the number of five at each meeting. So we decided to discontinue the club altogether, as the expenses were too much for us, and to divide equally what was standing to the credit of the society. Here the whole business has ended, and I hope I never have the pleasure of again dealing with a half-hearted lot, and a lot of "grabbers" such as we had attending those meetings. The novices offering their prizes for sale (some given by those who could hardly afford it) I consider mean and petty. Unfortunately for us, their aim was to succeed, and then to bid us adieu.

Keeping Green Food Fresh.

SIR,—I keep my hen Canaries in fresh green-food all day when they are feeding young by getting a small drinker from a wicker cage (the wicker Roller travelling cage) and half filling it with water. Then you put in your dandelion leaves (or any other green food you choose), and place the pot inside the cage or the aviary.

The Song of the Linnet North and South.

SIR,—Kindly allow me space on the quality of the Linnet song. "A Linnet Fancier," whose letter I read with great interest, has given the biscuit to us fanciers in the North. We are cultivators of quality Linnet singing. If we get a good bird, we keep him with a few good companions, either young ones, or one or two that can sing a few notes as he does; if we can't get one he is better kept by himself. If we had to keep a good bird with the London racer, or time singer, or "comic singers," as we sometimes call them, it is ten to one the good bird would learn all the bad bird's singing. It is ten times easier to spoil a good bird than to make one. A friend of mine gave £2 10s. for one. I had the pleasure of judging this bird at many contests, and he was generally in the first three in the prizes. He is surrounded by time singers and goes to many of their contests. The fact is, that bird's value is now reduced to a few shillings. I was judging at a contest where this bird sang, and instead of being first for quality he got about last prize for time. Now this is a case in point where quality and time singing will not do together; that good bird had been spoil by its owner taking it amongst the time-singers. Then "Linnet Fancier" wants to know if the birds in the North have their own song, or is it learnt by artificial means. The Linnet, being a mocking bird, has no particular song of his own. There is no one particular song called the best before it has been sung. That bird is best which is endowed with the best musical abilities, the song running long length, varying in voices, having nice time and good form, with plenty of vigour, without any racing or time-singing. It is impossible to put the Linnet song down on paper. In my last letter I put the song down as sung by the bird. If I had heard a Madame Patti sing I could only say she was "a marvel"; to know the rest you would have to hear her. And that is so with the Linnet. Quality of every kind is always very scarce. There is not more than one good Linnet in a thousand. Fanciers in the South have the advantage. A young bird begins to learn its singing in the nest. Their schoolmasters are the Nightingale, Wood Lark, Sedge Warbler, Snipe, Yellowhammer, Greenfinch, etc. Our birds never hear the two first-mentioned. I always get my fresh caught birds from the South. Training Linnets with Roller Canaries is all right for teaching one's birds to go a good length; but the Linnet sometimes will take the Canary voice, and a bird with Canary voice would be disqualified. We want the pure Linnet voice. I am not a lover of time-singing nor of racing Linnets, and if it was mentioned in our society I should be the first man to put my foot on it. They only sing time-singing where the members don't know quality. I think if we had to start time we should be going back a hundred years, and our forefathers who handed down to us the pleasures of cultivating and understanding quality Linnet singing, would turn over in their graves.

GEORGE ROSTRON.

SIR,—In answer to "Linnet Fancier," of course I don't want any telling as to what part of the country he comes from. He says that if he were to put five London Linnets and one Leeds Linnet on the grass amongst the wild birds, say 20 yards apart, and all six birds were singing, the wild birds would fly to the Leeds bird, and take no notice of the five London birds whatever. Well, if our friend reads my statement on July 17th he will find that he proves I am right in what I said—these birds are good bird catchers, but not contest singers. He also asks if "a London fancier" would give a few notes on the quality song. Well, in London we don't cultivate this kind of song, except for the purpose I have mentioned; but I can tell him where the Linnet gets most of his song from, and that is from the Skylark. If you hear a Lark while he is rising, he will start with what you call "scraping" in Linnet song; the right name for it is "laughing," but the Linnet does it in different styles, and changes in keys, which makes it sound better. It starts like this: "Har, har, har, weet, weet, weet, chow, chow, chow, fear, fear, fear, egip," and so on. "Linnet Fancier" also said that these birds are trained under a schoolmaster. He does not state what these schoolmasters are trained under for their song. Are they trained under the Skylark, Titlark, and Woodlark, the same as we in London used to do some 30 years ago? These were known as toy songs, but even if they were they would not do "peeing" and "reeing," as he says, this song went like this: "Har, har, har, Joey, egip, poy, pipe, pipe, chow, chow, weet." Of course, these Linnets never used to "tolic" in front of their song, because they were taken from the nest when they were about 12 days old; but a man was lucky to get three birds out of 20 to do this song correctly, and he needed great patience in training them. But as the old fanciers died we slowly lost the strain of the song. But the song which I mentioned in my first letter is as good as you will find for ordinary song. I have no doubt I could mention every syllable of your song if I heard the bird, but I am afraid it would not be "water blubber." I don't wish to be sarcastic, but will be only too pleased to let you know any kind of British song which we call good song in London.

LONDON FANCIER.

Notes on Hybrid Breediug.

SIR,—I am glad to see by the articles published of late in CAGE BIRDS that Mule breeding is still "looking up," and that a great many have taken it up. No doubt there are lots who have not yet made any statement as to their success or failure. The latter, no doubt, is very general and is likely to be with so uncertain a hobby, but those who do "stick to it" and will not let their failures stop them, will come off trumps some day, and then they will be able to have a good smile at their past reverses. As a breeder for over thirty years, I can say that I have had my ups and downs in plenty, but still, as each season comes round I again "come up smiling," as one never knows what may be one's luck, for luck is the main point in this hobby. I have had the greatest expectations, both this year and last, of establishing a record, but these were broken by a fluke, on the hardest lines possible. Only fancy getting two nests of nearly impossible Hybrids hatched out; then to be beaten after they are from ten to fourteen days old! Such is the case, but as I am quite an old hand, I take it—well, as easy as possible, expecting that with every nest I shall come off trumps; and if not—well, I have gained a little more knowledge in bird lore. I dare say I should have been more successful this season so far had I had a good supply of "feeders" or sitting hens. But as I had not, the results have been so far bad. I have yet some time and some expectations from several pairs, that is, if the eggs count for anything. Of course, I have to chance the eggs being good, but when you get deceived, as I have been so much of late years, you never know what to expect. Why the British birds deceive you in this way I cannot as yet understand. From Canaries one expects different results, and as a rule get them; but, oh! from Hybrid pairs it is at times almost disheartening. No doubt there have been some good birds got this year from such pairs, and I do hope we shall see the results recorded. If there has been any good Hybrid bred, I hope the announcement will be published, i.e., the names of the parents of the birds given. I have seen of late several instances recorded in which the cock bird has been the Bullfinch. I have tried the cock Bullie for over 25 years with no results. I believe the Germans have used this bird in years gone by (if not of late) with success; but I think the English have not been so successful with it. So, fanciers, let us know the facts of the cock Bullie and what it has done in the Hybrid line this year. I hope these notes will draw out some other fanciers, and particularly the "old hands." Young ones will, I know, rush into print if they have been fortunate enough to raise a Mule or Hybrid, but we want the experienced ones to come forward so that the old hands can read a bit, if not learn, for I find it is never too late to learn.

By C. A. House.

This is a thorough and practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, written by a well-known expert and judge. It contains chapters dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, and an illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman, reproduced in the finest art style. There are also exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge approached by no other book of its kind at the price

CAGE BIRDS, 154, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

Under the White Rose.

C.M.Y.C.C. held a committee meeting on Saturday evening last. A goodly number of societies applied for patronage, and several will be sorely disappointed at not receiving it, but the rules read that the number of shows shall be limited, and the committee cannot go beyond this number, otherwise they would have endeavoured to disappoint fewer.

N.G.M.Y.C.C. also held a committee meeting on the same evening. It was decided that the meeting to allot patronage be held on August 21st, so societies please note, and have applications in before this date. The requirements are that four classes be provided at each show for Green Marked Yorkshires, two for cocks and two for hens. Many societies could easily run these along with those required for the Y.C.C. In fact a lot of societies have run Cock Classes for years, and therefore require only an additional two to fulfil the conditions of the club.

THIS society also decided to cater for the novice. A prize of £1 1s. for first place, and 10s. 6d. for second place is to be offered to novice members of the club for points gained at Yorkshire Union shows by Green Marked birds in novice classes. The same prizes are also to be offered to novices not members of the Union, for points gained at non-Union shows in novice classes (where such are provided), and in open classes when novice classes are not provided. The membership is now over 80, and this novice item should easily bring the total up to the century.

THE letter in last week's CAGE BIRDS (correspondence column), anent the Zoo and aviaries at Halifax, has been read with considerable interest in Bradford and district, and many fanciers have stated their intention of paying an early visit. This is a splendid opening for concerted action, and I am sure our friends at Halifax would only be too pleased to welcome a party, and would doubtless conduct them round. How would this suit the B.B. and M.C.? It should be interesting to all bird lovers.

CAMBRIDGE C.B.S.

Annual Young Bird Show took place at the headquarters, July 24th, when the entry was well up to the average, about 90 birds being entered in the various classes. Classes were provided for British birds, and a good entry was secured. The silver medal given by the society for best young bird of the year was captured by a novice, Mr. Bishop, with a yellow ticked Yorks, Mr. J. Gifford being runner-up with a Yorks green. Hybrids were not so plentiful as last year, and Mr. C. Lambert won here somewhat easily with a large, good-shaped Linnet-Can. Mr. Harrison (St. Ives) again judged. During the afternoon a large number of fanciers visited the show, the arrangements for which were ably carried out by Mr. T. S. Moore (hon. sec.), Mr. J. Gifford (asst. hon. sec.) and the committee.

BRADFORD EAST O.S.

Grand show of young Canaries in their first feather held at headquarters, Park Chapel Schools, West Bowling, on July 24th, when Mr. Hartley (Bingley) officiated as judge, having a splendid entry of 99 birds. This was the third and last show of young birds this year, and marks the halfway line in the competition for the valuable specials which the Society put up each year for its members to compete for. Keen competition has always been one of the main features of these members' shows; so keen, in fact, that in order to cater for each individual member, three sections have this year been provided, and these have drawn an average entry of 83 for each of the three shows. In the champion section at this show, most points were gained by Messrs. Laycock, Stables, L. Briggs, and Farrar. Novice section: Messrs. C. Walker, F. Gelder, Wilkinson Bros., W. Brooke, and in the extra novice section most points were won by Wilman and Barker. Following is a list of points with four highest competitors' names in each section for the three young bird shows. Champion section: W. Laycock, 63 points; W. Stables, 58; L. Briggs, 58; J. Farrar, 41; J. Northrop, 39. Novice section: E. Dinsdale, 61; F. Gelder, 51; C. Walker, 40; Baldwin Bros., 36; W. BEGINNERS READ THE ANNUAL

By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S.

Author of "The World's Birds."

King Scarlet.

The importation of one of the lovely birds known to scientists as Minivets, signalised in CAGE BIRDS recently, is too important an avicultural event to pass over, although both Mr. C. T. Maxwell and Mr. G. E. Weston have already possessed specimens of these birds, and Mr. E. W. Harper has imported some. They were not often to be obtained when I was in India, though many, if not most of the known species inhabited that country; a few, like the Verditer and Niltava Flycatchers, used to be brought down from the Himalayas to Calcutta every winter. Much the commonest kind was the Short-billed (Pericrocotus brevirostris); the male of this is a red-and-black bird, about as big as a Wagtail, with the colour distributed as I have attempted to show in the drawing. The hen is yellow and grey, but marked much the same as the cock, except that the yellow runs up to the beak below, the throat not being dark. There are several other red Minivets, and the native name for these is "Rajah Lal," which I have endeavoured to anglicize at the head of this paragraph.

The Bird with Seven Sweethearts.

A Rajah must have his harem, so the natives, seeing the red bird followed by about half-a-dozen yellow ones, as is commonly the case, jump to the conclusion that these are his lady-loves, whence the name given to him in many places "the beloved of seven damsels." This is very like the popular name of the splendid "Twelve-tailed Whydah" (Chera procne) in his native home in South Africa — "King-over-six." In the case of the Whydah, which is a polygamous bird, the followers really are his wives; but I know of no reason for thinking that Minivets are polygamous, and believe that the parties seen are an old cock, his wife, and the brood, which are all yellow-and-grey like their mother, though with the addition of a certain amount of dark pencilling. Few birds are so attractive to watch as Minivets; they are insectivorous birds, and catch their prey either on the wing, as one would expect from their Flycatcher-like shape, or, more often, by clinging to the twigs in all manner of curious attitudes, like our Tits; to the ground they very seldom venture.

The Minivet.

A New Blue Bird.

It is all very well, some may say, to tantalize us with descriptions of these delicate soft-bills, which will never be everybody's birds, and I must admit that Minivets are delicate, though not so much so as some of our small British soft-bills. However, another very beautiful bird has just come into the trade, for the first time, as far as I know, which, being a Finch, is an easy enough subject, and at the same time excels in beauty of colour. This is the chestnut-shouldered Blue Grosbeak (Guiraca coerulea) of Southern North America. In size this fine bird about equals a Russian Bullfinch; its colour is very striking, a rich bright violet-blue, with the wings marked with chestnut, much as in the Brambling. By this it may be distinguished from the better-known Blue Grosbeak of South America (G. cyanea), which is blue all over; but this is not nearly so bright in hue as the northern bird; nor is it so large, only equalling the ordinary English Bullfinch. Specimens of both are now in the Zoo collection.

The Rose-Finch.

A much better-known Finch, and one which will interest fanciers of foreign and British birds alike, is the Rose-finch, of which specimens are now available. This is a rare straggler to this country, and is called in British-bird books the Scarlet Bullfinch—a silly name, for the bird is more nearly allied to the Linnet than the Bullfinch, and its colour is carmine, not scarlet. It must be admitted, however, in shape it much resembles the Bullfinch, especially about the bill, and it is also similar in size and feeding habits. A notable point of difference, however, is its habit of erecting the head-feathers, as the Chaffinch does, and its note is very characteristic. The call-note is a "sweet," just like that of a Canary; the song is clear and pretty, but short; it sounds to me like "Sweet—my dear!" The cock is very handsomely but peculiarly coloured; he looks as if he had been originally brown, but had been dipped head first into a rich rose-carmine dye, and the colour allowed to spread from the head on to the rest of the plumage; it is very rich on the face and breast, and then gradually fades away. The hen is a very sombre bird, drab with dark streaks, not with no conspicuous mark of any colour.

A Likely Mule.

Unfortunately the cock, after a moult in captivity, loses the beauty of his carmine colouring, this being replaced by a sort of "old-gold" shade, as in the Cross-bill. I think, however, that he would be likely to prove an exceedingly valuable bird to the mule breeder. Crossed with the hen Bullfinch, he should produce a bird of the type of the Linnet-Bullfinch mule, but it ought to be far handsomer, as the Rosefinch has so much more of the red colour than the Linnet, and its shape ought to harmonize better with that of the Bullfinch, while its similar requirements in the way of food would be another advantage. If there were a regular demand for Rosefinches, they would become much cheaper, as they are to be obtained by the cageful in Calcutta during the winter, at which season they visit India; the bazaar dealers there used to sell them as Red Linnets, the Red-headed Bunting (Emberiza luteola), also a common winter bird, being known as "Yellow Linnet," as the under-parts of this bird are bright yellow.

Soft-bills in Favour.

The Rose-finch, or "Tootee" as it was called by the natives, was the only Indian Finch, which seemed to be kept as a song-bird in Calcutta; indeed, with the exception of Avadavats and Canaries, one saw but few Finches kept by the natives there, although a Finch-billed Lark, known as "Aghoen," was a common pet. Soft-bills were great favourites, the chief being the common brown House-Mynah, the Hill Mynah, and the Shama. A sort of Black Stone-chat, the Pidha (Pratincola caprata), however, was also kept at times, and now and then the Dhyal. A greater favourite than all, however, was the common black Bulbul, but this was kept braced, not caged, and was so treated with the idea of using it as a fighting bird, Bulbul-fights being a standing pastime with the natives.

The Pugnacious Corncrake.

The Corncrake, although shy, is a very pugnacious bird, and during the spring severe battles are fought between the males. They fight after the manner of game fowls, retiring and advancing to the fray. The young birds quarrel among themselves when quite small.

Vitality in Birds.

Birds have more life in them than any other creature. Many of them are never still except when asleep. Even when not running about or flying, they are moving their wings, and tails, or twisting their heads from side to side. This restlessness doubtless constitutes part of the charm of feathered life.

Protection in Ireland.

In Scotland the egg collector does not enjoy that freedom of hill and dale, so necessary to his pleasure, as most of the ground is watched and protected. But in Ireland he is free to wander pretty well where he chooses, so few nesting grounds being properly looked after. This is unfortunate for the rare birds in the Sister Isle, many of which are fast disappearing.

The Woodpecker's Tongue.

The tongue of the Woodpecker is an extremely wonderful bit of mechanism. Its bony tip is furnished on either side with small serrations set backwards, which enable it to get a grip of the grubs and larvae on which it feeds. But this part of the tongue is only a small part of the whole, for it extends backwards in two branches round the windpipe, and along the back and top of the skull round to the forehead at the root of the upper mandible.

NORWICH CANARIES

By C. A. HOUSE.

The young fancier is told all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder, and as an exhibitor on the Show Bench. This work, which has been written in a plain, practical manner, contains much of untold value to lovers of the Norwich Canary.

The chapters on "Forming A Stud" and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book many times over.

THE SCOTTISH DISQUALIFICATION CASE.

A STARTLING QUESTION.

Did Mr. McQuiston Himself Disqualify a Bullfinch Exhibited by Mr. Gemmell?

With regard to the statement made last week by a correspondent from Glasgow that "certain fanciers from Edinburgh did their utmost to get the Crystal Palace management to refuse Mr. McQuiston's entries at the Jubilee Show," we had a visit from Mr. J. W. Ramsden, on Tuesday, the 27th inst., and the well-known show manager asked us to state that he had no recollection of anything of this nature. What actually happened was that he received a letter drawing his attention to the fact that certain Scottish birds had been disqualified for being stained at Bathgate Show, and expressing the hope that similar cases at the Palace (if any) would not escape the notice of the judges there. He (Mr. Ramsden) had certainly never had to consider the question of declining to allow Mr. McQuiston's birds to compete at the Jubilee Show.

A Reply to Mr. Farmer.

SIR,—I see a letter from Mr. R. Farmer in last week's issue re the McQuiston disqualification case. As far as I have seen or heard of the writer, he is neither an exhibitor nor a bird fancier; therefore, how can he judge other fanciers? When looking over the list of members of the S.B.B. and M.C., (and through various catalogues), I find he is not even a member of this society. It would have been better for Mr. Farmer if he had been at the annual meeting of the S.B.B. and M.C. and heard the evidence there, instead of only hearing it second-hand. So my advice to Mr. Farmer is to leave alone matters that he knows nothing about. I think CAGE BIRDS is doing well to thrash out this case. I consider, too, that the McQuiston case was well fought out at the S.B.B. and M.C. meeting; the finding was unanimous. Mr. McQuiston was present, and all he could say was that he never stained the bird. But since he exhibited the bird from which stain was taken, he was therefore guilty in my opinion.

JOHN RAE, JUN.

A Curious Enquiry.

SIR,—Kindly allow me a small space in your valuable paper re the McQuiston disqualification. I think there is something peculiar about the case. I can't understand how either Mr. McQuiston or Mr. Gemmell could state that the latter had the Bullfinch in question at either of the Ayr Shows held last year. I was an exhibitor at both, and I know for certain that Mr. Gemmell had no cage birds at either of them, but had pigeons. I should like to ask Mr. McQuiston if he was the judge at Dalmellington Show, held Jan. 30th, and disqualified a Bullfinch of Mr. Gemmel's for being stained? If so, how is it he couldn't detect the staining on the one he was showing at Bathgate? I am almost sure Mr. Gemmell hadn't a Bullfinch capable of winning at a show like Bathgate. Could he stain a bird to deceive a judge like Mr. McQuiston, as I know it is only lately he has kept cage birds, as he was always a pigeon fancier? To my mind, there is a deal to be cleared up regarding the matter. It is the "getting-up" of birds that discourages amateurs, in fact all of us who can't paint."

LOCH DOON.

The above letter only came to hand as we were preparing to go to press with the paper. We telegraphed at once to Mr. McQuiston (July 28, mid-day) in the following terms:—

REPLY PAID.

Correspondent alleges you disqualified Bullfinch belonging Gemmell at Dalmellington Show, January 30, for being stained. Reply if you desire denial published. AVICULTURE.

Up to the time of CAGE BIRDS closing for press, 10 a.m., Thursday July 29, no reply to this telegram (and one was prepaid) had come to hand from Mr. McQuiston. We can find no report in the Fancy Press of any cage-bird section at the Dalmellington Show of Jan. 30 last, though we can trace the published account of the poultry and pigeon sections.

The time at our command has been too short to permit of enquiries being made other than from Mr. McQuiston, who, of course, is chiefly concerned. On the face of it, it is hard, very hard, to believe that Mr. Gemmell would exhibit another stained Bullfinch after the affair at Bathgate Show, and readers should view the matter with all reserve until we have been able to enquire further.—EDITOR.

The Keeping of British . . . . Hardbills as Pets.

By MISS E. G. WILLCOCK, D.Sc.

The purchase of birds as pets is in general a much easier matter than when they are wanted for show purposes. In my opinion, and I have kept a great variety of birds, any bird that can be kept under suitable conditions is capable of becoming a beautiful, intelligent and affectionate pet. Moreover, one is enabled to gratify humanitarian feelings, and purchase a bird which is obviously ill and miserable, in a small dirty cage, with the certainty that a few weeks will entirely alter his spirits and his appearance. In keeping birds as pets, I should always advise the keeping of several together, for they then display much more clearly their individual characters and provide much more amusement to their owners.

Before Procuring Birds.

Before procuring any birds, their prospective owner should get ready everything necessary for their housing and feeding.

If there is plenty of air and space, I recommend that the cage be kept in the living room, as the birds become much tamer under such circumstances, but my readers must remember that a close atmosphere, dark quarters, or a draught, are all fatal to the well-being of their pets.

As regard cages, I always use box-cages, the size of which is only limited by the space at my disposal. CAGE BIRDS has frequently given the number of birds which can be kept per sq. ft. of cage room, so my readers cannot go wrong in this respect. Cover the cage bottom with a good layer of sawdust, which is both clean and antiseptic, and put in the cage a large pan of good shell gravel.

For my hardbills I use equal parts of best Canary seed and teazle, with niger, hemp, rape, linseed and sunflower seeds added from time to time. I always provide a little animal food in the shape of ants' eggs, mealworms, or greenfly, and I like to vary the diet as much as possible. For green food I give dandelion, thistle heads, for the Goldies; chickweed, shepherd's purse and berries of all kinds, and bright-coloured nasturtium flowers. On this diet I have cage-moulted several Bullfinches, and have found that their colour is quite equal to that of fresh-caught birds.

Starting a Collection.

For starting a collection of tame birds I strongly advise the purchase of a pair of Bullfinches, cock and hen. These birds I have always found hardy and bold, and their greed makes them very easy to tame. Moreover, a great affection seems to exist between the cock and the hen, when once paired, and it is very pretty to watch the one mounting guard over the food pots or the bath, and keeping off the other birds until its mate has finished operations thereat.

Having purchased a pair of birds, let them at once have a good bath in water containing Sanitas. This is especially advisable when adding new birds to a collection; in this case, too, I always keep the new arrivals in a quarantine cage for some days.

Having got your Bullfinches in the roomy box-cage, and all comfortable, you must begin to accustom them to your presence. Speak to them often, and in the morning before replenishing the seed pots, hold a sunflower seed, a meal-worm, or a berry in your fingers against the cage wires. Do not be surprised if you have to do this at intervals for some days before the birds will take it from you. When your pots no longer flutter when you touch the cage, it is time for their next lesson.

The Next Lesson.

At a time when the room is quiet, open the cage door before feeding the birds, and allow them to fly out. Do not go near them, but put a flower pot saucer of water on the table for a bath and watch the birds. If he be not chased or pursued, a bird rarely dashes against the window panes more than twice, and will often return to his cage for food of his own accord.

If your pet is not so accommodating, I have found it a good plan to get a long stick with a bar at one end of it, fixed at right angles. If you touch the bird's breast gently with the crossbar, he will usually step on the bar, and can be carried on it to the cage door, which he will often enter voluntarily on seeing the food within. Never catch a bird up unless absolutely necessary; they all hate it, and birds who are so tame as to carry on nesting operations within a foot of us, will sulk for a day after being taken up in my hand, although they will perch on my hand willingly.

Get your birds accustomed to bathing outside the cage; you can then give them a bigger vessel, and keep your cage floor cleaner and drier.

When they are used to being loose in the room, tempt them to come voluntarily to your hand for titbits. Do not begrudge any pains with your first pair, for the others will all learn from them, and will give you little trouble.

New Arrivals.

Having got your Bullfinches tame, and having taught them by gentle chivying to return to the cage when the new food is put in, you may proceed to buy other birds, one by one, getting each accustomed to his daily outing and bath before arranging for new arrivals.

If you wish to go in for Mule breeding I recommend the purchase of a cock Goldfinch, or cock Siskin, and a hen Canary with perhaps a hen Greenfinch. From experience I find that the tame birds will breed readily in box cages, each pair being given a separate compartment, or, better still, a separate cage. I have not found it necessary to stop any of the ordinary quiet house-life in the room, and my breeding birds have come out for their morning exercise and bath throughout incubation and rearing. It is true I have not interfered much with the nests, but even the Bullfinch, who is the shyest sitter, will remain on the nest while I tidy up the cage. Unfortunately she will not pair with any bird but the cock Bullfinch, and has never hatched a family yet, since at both nesting times she had to undergo a house-moving. The nesting season is full of interest for the bird-keeper, and at this time his pets show more individuality and charm than at any other time.

In conclusion, I would say that if anyone can spare time to tame his pets he will more than double the pleasure he will derive from them.

The Points We Breed for in the Border Fancy.

By T. Walker.

A Paper read before the Berwick-on-Tweed C.B.S. on July 1st.

I cannot, of course, deal with all the points of the Border Fancy Canary as a specialist might, but I trust you will bear patiently with me as I endeavour to explain some of the points we have to breed for, if we are to have good show birds. Some years ago, when I started to keep this variety it went more by the name of the Common Canary than by anything else; but year by year it has made great progress, and wherever exhibited it has always drawn a host of admirers by its graceful action and other fine qualities.

The Grand Essentials.

The grand essentials of a Border Fancy are type and quality. Without these the Canary is worthless as a show bird. The general appearance is that of a clean cut, lightly made, compact, proportionable, sprightly, close feathered, smallish Canary, showing no tendency to heaviness, roughness, or dulness, but giving the impression of quality and symmetry throughout. The head should be small, round and neat looking.

To breed a bird with a fine round head is something to be proud of. Many a good bird fails in this point, being too flat on top, which gives it a back seat in keen competition. The bill should be fine, the eyes dark and bright, denoting health. The neck should be rather fine, and proportionate to head and body, the bird showing no frill when moving in the show-cage.

As regards the body, the back should be well filled and nicely rounded, running in almost a straight line from the gentle rise over the shoulders to the point of the tail. The chest, also, should be nicely rounded, but neither heavy nor prominent, the line gradually tapering away to the vent.

Discard all thin-chested birds, as they mostly always show the frill on chest; also have nothing to do with hollow-backed birds. The wings should be compact and carried close to the body, just meeting at the tips. Avoid all birds that clip or cross their wings. There are birds whose wings meet at the tips, but which are guttered down the back; that is, are a sort of V-shape. These birds do not stand much chance if there is keen competition. You want the wings to cover the back all the way down. The legs should be of medium length, showing little or no thigh; they must be fine and in harmony with the other points, with feet corresponding; also the bird should show no roughness or fluff at the thighs.

The plumage of an exhibition Border should be close, firm and fine in quality, presenting a smooth, glossy, silky appearance; and it should be free from frill or roughness. The tail should be close-packed, narrow, nicely rounded and well filled in at the root; you also want to keep out all fish-tailed birds or those having split or hinged tails, for if you breed from birds having these faults you are sure to have a fair percentage of young possessing similar faults. The colour should be rich, soft and pure, as level in tint as possible throughout, but there must be extreme depth or hardness. An exhibition bird's position should be semi-erect; it should stand at about an angle of 45 degs. The carriage should be gay and jaunty, with a fine free poise of head.

When One Gets a Good Bird.

Now, all these points go to make up a good show specimen. When you have bred a bird possessing most of these points, don't forget to train it in the show cage. Handle such whenever you have time, and have your exhibition birds thoroughly steadied down before sending them out, so that they may become fully accustomed to the cages. Nothing pleases a judge more than to see a well-trained and steady Border.

The beginner in this fascinating hobby is almost certain to meet with disappointment, but he must not in the least permit that to dishearten him; on the contrary, he should get to know what to breed for, and how to pair his birds up from the best he can get; he will come out on top some day. I omitted to say that the Border Fancy should not exceed 5½ inches in length, measured in the usual way; that is, from tip of bill to end of tail.

A liberal use of the bath is a good conditioner, and gives that beautiful gloss to the feathers of a bird which adds a finish to an otherwise good bird. In conclusion, I wish you all a very successful breeding and exhibition season.

Wild Bird Life.

Birds of the Seashore.

In different localities we find different trees, and flowers, and birds, and a walk along the sea shore affords a pleasant change from the dusty roads, hedgerows and woods of inland districts, for although we miss the hills and undulating landscape, yet the long, low stretches of marshland, with reed beds, intersected by dykes and bounded by the sea wall, have a charm of their own—a charm which, to the marshman, is unapproached by that of any other scenery. On these open stretches of country, a nature-lover finds much to interest and study all the year round. In the winter it is haunted by hundreds of wild fowl, driven in from the sea by stress of weather, or seeking the streams and pools in search of food. In the spring and summer it is a rare place in which to search for nests. Many waders and water birds build among the rough, tussocky grass of the marshes. Grebes, Rails and Moorhens may occasionally be seen diving or skulking among the flags, while the delicate Reed birds form a small group of such entrancing interest that days may be spent watching their habits, and seeking for well-hidden homes. Although so flat and open, it is astonishing how many different birds one may see in the course of a morning's ramble. Lying prone upon the sea wall we see a widening expanse of mud flat laid bare by the falling tide. From the sandy beach to the distant waters, hundreds of white flecks are visible, which we know to be Gulls by their manner of grouping. One and all face the strong wind blowing in from the sea. They are sleeping and resting while the tide is out. The majority are black-headed Gulls, but a few large black-backs in immature plumage are to be seen among them. A dozen or so Ringed Plovers cross the open, twisting and wheeling as one bird. It is difficult at times to follow their movements with the naked eye; their backs and wings harmonize closely with the colour of the mud flats, but when they turn, the white under-surface catches the eye, but they are gone almost as soon as identified. Further along where the piles of shingle stand high above the beach a crowd of birds is seen which we make out to be Terns (Lesser and Common), a few Dunlins, Turnstones, and some more Ringed Plovers. If one can only get near enough here is an interesting group that will afford pleasant occupation for an hour or more

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insistedupon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT. Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 12 words, 4d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

Net Traps.

Important Notice.—To those catchers who require a cheaper class of clap net or spring net trap. Being actual manufacturers, and not dealers, we are in a position to supply any particular style, size, quality, and specification, at a cost of 10 per cent. less than can be obtained elsewhere. Fullest enquiries invited. —Young and Son.

BIRDCATCHERS,
Kindly notice that I can supply every description of catching appliances at far cheaper prices than any others on the market. Clap nets from 4/- to 20/- pair, complete; Lark nets, Sparrow nets, trap cages, net traps, loose netting, bird lime, and everything required by catchers, kept in stock; send stamp for full printed list of sizes and prices, and hints on how to make your own nets. Everything sent on approval, and all your money back if not satisfactory. The following letters show what you get from me. Notice dates.—"Woolaston Inn, near Lydney, July 14th, 1909.—Sir,—Please send following. I am pleased to say that the nets I had from you last season were the finest that could possibly be bought for the money, and I have certainly recommended you to many friends.—Yours, R. Clutterbuck." "Southern Road, Thame, July 16, 1909.—Sir,—Please send following. The pair nets you sent me last season are beauties. I have had some nets in my time, but none to come upsides with them. I will do my best to get more orders for you, as I know you are to be relied upon.—Yours, E. Barrett." Thousands of similar testimonials published last season. Send stamp for full price list.

Club Reports.

QUEEN'S PARK (Glasgow) C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held in Marie Stuart Hall, Langside-rd., July 29th, Mr. J. Edward presiding. It was decided to hold annual show November 20th in above-named hall. A splendid classification is given with novice classes in Norwich to encourage young fanciers, and the Secretary will be pleased to communicate with same. Members will do well to attend the August meeting on the last Friday of month.—Geo. M. Thomson, Sec.

STRATFORD & EAST LONDON F.S.

Mr. T. H. Harrison gave a most interesting and instructive lecture to the members of the above society on July 22nd, subject, "The weeding-out of live stock." Many valuable hints were given, which were much appreciated by the members and friends present. Questions were put to the lecturer by members. These were replied to in a way which greatly pleased the audience. It is a great pity members did not turn up in greater numbers. It is not very encouraging to the lecturer when there is a poor attendance. We can assure those members who were not present that they missed a great treat. At the close of the lecture a most hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Harrison.—W. Maxey, Hon. Sec.

KELTY AND BLAIRADAM C.B.A.

Committee meeting held July 27th, Mr. Jas. Stenhouse (president) in the chair. A large turn-out of members was present. The formation of a club show in connection with our open show was agreed to, same to take place in September, no Saturday of the month being yet fixed. It is to be open for members only. A letter was read from Mr. Cullen, of Dunfermline (late of Creiff), stating his willingness to give an exhibition of hand-washing on August 14th, when a full attendance of members is requested. The election of new members then took place, when the following gentlemen were accepted, viz., Messrs. J. Campbell, A. Hunter, and A. Ramsay, of Lassodie; and Wylie, Chambers, Mackintosh, of Kelty. This terminated a very enjoyable evening. The chairman was thanked for the able manner in which he had presided.—J. Ford, Sec.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

Meeting held July 28th, Mr. Davison in chair. The following new members were elected: Messrs. Douglas (Whitehaven), G. Taylor (Newcastle), Blaydon and Newcastle shows were nominated for cup patronage, the former receiving 5 votes to Newcastle's 3. Consequently, Blaydon receives cup this year. Judge, Mr. H. W. Battye. The medals and points specials (Sandiford's cup and gold medal) were allotted to Newcastle, South Shields, Wallsend, Darlington, Cockermouth, Gateshead. The novice medals and points specials (Dr. O'Neal's cup and gold medal) were allotted to Newcastle, South Shields, Blaydon, Wallsend, Sunderland, and Gateshead. I will be ordering the show cages soon, so shall be glad to hear from any member who requires them. This is an opportunity for members to get cages at wholesale prices.—T. C. Crawhall, Hon. Sec.

LANCASHIRE AND LIZARD F.A.

Meeting held at the New Surrey Arms Hotel, Glossop, on August 1st, and we had an excellent turn-out of members from Gorton, Denton, Shaw, Middleton, Oldham, Rawtenstall, Glossop, etc. Business was soon dealt with. The following societies were granted our patronage for challenge cups, medals, and Ramsden's cruet, viz., Rochdale, October 22nd and 23rd; Manchester, October 29th and 30th; Rochdale Good Intent, November 6th; Nottingham, November 13th to 15th; L.C.B.A., November 26th to 29th, and Middleton, December 4th (patronage for Lancashires and Lizards); Pendleton and Salford, November 19th and 20th, and Scottish National, December 31st and January 1st (for Lizards only). We made two new members in Messrs. A. Martin (Shaw) and our old friend, E. Fuller (Glossop). Mr. S. R. Compston gave us a very able lecture on the Lizard Canary. Will all members who have not paid their subscriptions, forward same as early as possible? They will then be entitled to compete for specials as per rule. Subscriptions must be paid a month before a member becomes eligible to compete. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Dewsnap for acting as chairman, concluded the meeting.—John Rukin, Hon. Sec.

LONDON AND COUNTIES O.S.

Monthly meeting held at headquarters, the Sessions House Hotel, Clerkenwell-rd., E.C., on July 19th. In the absence of the President, the chair was occupied by Mr. O. Handt. Mr. R. J. Pretty moved that an additional silver-plated cup be added to the list of prizes to be competed for in the autumn (in Brit. and For. bird classes only). This was seconded by Mr. G. A. Marrison. Mr. Pretty kindly contributed 5/-, and Mr. W. Gilbert 2/6 to help to defray the expenses of same. This cup is not to exceed 21/- in value. The Sec. will be pleased to receive any further donations from members who feel kindly disposed to give same. Mr. R. J. Pretty moved, and Mr. O. Heine seconded, that the Secretary be instructed to make the necessary inquiries at the Northampton Institute for the holding of the autumn show there. The Chairman then read the half-yearly balance-sheet and report, which were very satisfactory indeed. On the pair and Finch shows there was a loss of 5/-, but this was counter-balanced by the profit on the Young Bird Show, viz., 6/9; leaving a balance of 1/9. The society has now £1 11s. 6d. in the bank, and £1 14s. 4½d. in the Secretary's hands, a total of £3 5s. 10½d. It is regretted that over 20 subscriptions are still outstanding, amounting to £5 2s. 6d. The Secretary trusts the members concerned will kindly remit at their earliest convenience. Mr. O. Heine then moved, and Mr. G. A. Marrison seconded, that the half-yearly balance-sheet be adopted, subject to being audited. Mr. R. J. Pretty moved a cordial vote of thanks to the Chairman, which concluded a pleasant evening.—W. Gilbert, Hon. Sec.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Special meeting to allot patronage held at head quarters, July 22nd, Mr. Hales in the chair. Working on the principle of giving patronage to only one show in each week, several societies had to be missed. Patronage was given to cover as large an area as possible, and as far as possible a different judge was elected for each show. In all cases the judge to take the Yorkshire Greens is given first:—October 22nd and 23rd, Newcastle, judges Messrs. Heath and Vardy; October 29th and 30th, Manchester, Messrs. Battye and Roe; November 5th and 6th, Liverpool, Messrs. Mundell and J. C. Barnes; November 12th and 13th, Preston, Messrs. Parker and Robinson; November 19th and 20th, Pendleton, Messrs. J. C. Barnes and Wellings; November 26th to 29th, L.C.B.A., Messrs. Mason and Trengove; December 3rd and 4th, Altrincham, Messrs. Hadwin and Wellings; December 31st and January 1st, 1910, Scottish National, Mr. J. Robson; January 11th, 1910, Llanelly, judge not settled; January 22nd, 1910, G.C.A., judge not settled; February, 1910, Palace, judge not settled. This year the club's gold medals will be competed for on the same lines as the cups, viz., in case of a tie most 1sts, most 2nds, etc., will decide. Medals will also be given in case the champion cups are not won outright. A small amount is still required to meet the cost of the novice cups. Any member wishing to subscribe, please write to the Secretary—S. Hadwin.

LANCASHIRE C.A.

For our meeting, held at the rooms of the Rochdale O.C., on July 17th, a large attendance of members turned up, Mr. Nadin (President) in the chair. The correspondence having been passed, we had the pleasure of welcoming two new members to our ranks, namely, Messrs. Woodhead and H. F. Hardy, of Littleborough. We next dealt with the patronage question for the coming season, and the list was the largest we have ever had before us. After discussion, it was decided to give our patronage to the following shows: Rochdale O.C., Manchester and N.C.O.S., Rochdale G.I., Nottingham, Littleborough, Middleton and Palace, and it was decided that we give a silver medal to the Frome F.A. open show for the best bird shown in standard cage and by a member of the L.C.A., as we have a few members in the district; this may encourage others to take up the variety and join us. As regards the unsuccessful application, I am sorry to say clashing of dates was the chief drawback. We wish them success and hope that next year they will repeat their application with success, as this year we have given it to two more societies than last year. We decided to hold our next meeting on the second Saturday in September, at the Great Eastern Hotel, Oldham, at 7 p.m. We hope to see another grand turn-up of members then. I may inform members that all subscriptions must be paid by September 16th, as no member will be allowed to count for points till the subscriptions have been paid. We also appeal to all Lancashire fanciers who are not members to join us, as the subscription is only 2s. 6d. per year; it would help the society very much in the endeavour to further the interests of the Lancashire on the bench, as this season it is intended to give about 12 extra medals in addition to points medal—six for best bird in show and six for best vhc birds, all to be won by L.C.A. members for standard cage, and no member to win more than one.—Wm. Adams, Sec.

Among the Proud Salopians and their Birds.

A Favored Spot for Wild Life.

I live in a Paradise of wild birds and my own stock, which I keep in my bedroom and living-rooms (being single) are the best and most interesting collection I have yet kept. They include a Sparrow, a Waxwing, a Robin, a mealy Redpoll, a Greenfinch, a Goldfinch, a Siskin, a Bullfinch, a Blue-winged Lovebird, and Hawfinches, and they give me great delight. Very few fanciers live near me, but a few miles away in a little town noted for its manufacture of clay smoking pipes, I know a keen bird fancier, whose acquaintance I made through an advertisement in Cage Birds. It is a bright sunny morning, and duty does not call me to work, so after attending to the wants of my pets I make up my mind to go and see this fancier. On my way I pass a broken-down cider mill; the wheels are there, but they cease to grind. Near by in ruins is the house where they used to sell the sparkling cider; it used to be good cider, I was told (the Salopians love their beverage). The orchards still remain from which the fruit used to be gathered, and near by the Hawfinch has its habitation—the prince of all the British Finches; the "Hawstone Cracker," from which habit it gets its name. The Bullfinch also rears its young. This is the soldier bird, the most beautiful Finch we have. And if you take the trouble you can find the nests of the Goldfinch, that proud little bird (as proud as the Salopians themselves), the sweetest of all our Finches for song. I pass along and cross a running stream. Here the Water Ousel (the Dipper) with its pretty white breast, has its home and builds its nest. At last I arrive at the town and enquire for Mr. George Potter, for that is the gentleman's name. I find him at home, and after being made welcome (you are always made welcome, no matter where you go in Salop), he takes me into his aviary. Here he has some splendid Mules or Hybrids. He appears to have had a very good season, and a team that he ran into their show cages, I feel sure, will take some beating, all three being light Mules. As I am a British bird lover, it is not these that appeal to me, but the British birds that he owns. His Goldfinches are splendid, and a good-sized Bullfinch I saw was having a fruit diet, as he ought. The interior of his aviary Mr. Potter has decorated with his prize cards, which show he has been among the prizes many times. The most delightful bird of all was his Yellowhammer, one of the best I have seen in a cage. He gave it a mealworm, which it ate bit by bit from his fingers. One of his Brown Linnets gave us a song. One thing I noticed was the clean way in which the cages were kept. I also noticed how well supplied they were with seed and water. This is as things should be. A man or woman who keeps birds should attend to their wants even before their own wants. After seeing the birds, the good lady of the house would have me partake of their mid-day meal, which I enjoyed very much, as she appears to be as good at cooking as her husband is in getting a bird into show condition, and she seems to be ready and willing to help her better half in his delightful hobby. When I get inside some of my brother fancier' homes and see them married to a wife who takes no interest in their hobby, it almost makes me sing, "There's a girl wanted here."

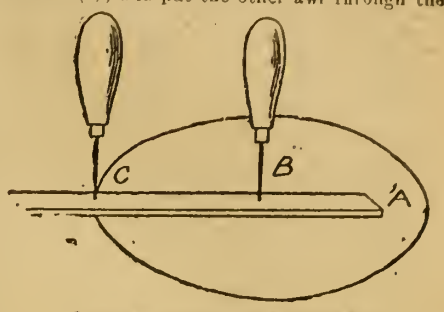
NORTHERN YORKSHIRE CANARY CLUB.

The last Nest Feather Show of the season was held July 28th. There was a good entry of 28 birds in the two classes. Mr. W. Cockburn (Wallsend) judged to the satisfaction of everyone. As this was his first attempt at judging, he was accorded a very hearty vote of thanks, on the proposition of Mr. Wigglesworth, seconded by Mr. Tomlinson.



CL. (13): 1, 4, Hutler; 2, Tomlinson; 3, Wigglesworth; vhc, Crawhall; hc, Dix; c, Davison. TKD., ETC. (15): 1, 2, 3, Crawhall; 4, Hutler; vhc, Davison; hc, Atkinson; c, Tomlinson. Mr. Davison won silver cup with 52 points, Mr. Crawhall second 38, and Mr. Wigglesworth third 29. As these table shows have been so great a success, it was decided that we have three in the autumn and a pair show in January, the first to be held October 27th.—T. C. Crawhall, Sec.

Making a Box-cage Side Door.
Sent by Mr. T. Macrae, 10, South Portland Street, Glasgow.

Here is a simple device for making a door in the side of a box cage, two awls being the only tools required. Take a strip of wood, say 12ins. by 1in. (a); insert an awl in the centre of this and right through the board to be "holed" (b); and put the other awl through the strip of wood only at the required distance (c). Then work this round on the centre awl, and by applying a little pressure, cause it to slowly eat its way into the wood. After a little the awls may be worked in the same manner on the other side. The result will be a very workmanlike door.—J. Macrae.

get a piece of cardboard, from which the corners (a) should be cut out as indicated in the illustration. The two ends (b) and the one side (also marked b) should be turned up. The opposite side should be fastened under the cage either by pins or glue.—T. S. A. Bates.

Country Rambles

Kilmarnock C.B.F.A.

Annual trip took place on July 3rd, the destination being Failford by Mauchline. The weather was not very suitable for driving in, although about 40 in all left Kilmarnock in brakes about 10 o'clock, reaching our destination at about 1 o'clock in very heavy rain, where a suitable hall was provided for the company. A few of the ladies served tea, which was very much enjoyed. The weather was still wet, so we had to keep inside for two or three hours. Mr. James Johnstone was called upon to act as M.C. In addressing the company he said it was very disagreeable to be in the heart of such lovely scenery for a day and yet have to resort to a winter pastime such as song and dance amusement. However, to pass the time away he called upon Mr. James Cree to give a few selections on the concertina, which were well received, as also were a few songs by several of the ladies and gentlemen of the company. As the weather now cleared up with a fine sun the company got out on to the banks of the Ayr. For scenery, nothing can surpass this in "the Land o' Burns," and we spent a happy hour before leaving for home, via Mauchline, which we reached between 8 and 9, all fairly well enjoying the day considering its inclemency.—ONE OF THE COMPANY.

Highgate and District C.B.S.

Our first ramble took place recently, when a few members and friends entrained for Epping Forest, leaving the home station at 2 p.m., and arriving at Epping Forest at 3 p.m. There the party was met by Mr. J. S. Clarke's son, Horace, Mr. J. S. Clarke having gone to meet some friends coming home from abroad, promising to meet us later. The weather seemed somewhat dull and heavy at the start, which no doubt kept many from turning out, but it did not take the train long to get us out of darkness into bright sunshine, for we had not been walking long in the forest before some wished they had got no jackets and vests to carry about. Master Horace made a capital guide, for he led us into some of the thickest parts of the forest, and brought us out again (without getting out of radius) to the place towards which we were working, the "Owl," Highbeach, where we were to take tea. Several bird nests were found, both with young and eggs; also various birds were seen on the wing, including Jays, Thrushes, Bullfinches, Tits, etc. That which took the attention of one and all most was the beautiful sound of the Cuckoo, he "letting go" for all he was worth. One of our company, Mr. Street, made a remark that he would turn out the first "Bunny," and sure enough he did, for we were one and all working to find nests when a cry went up, "Look out!" and there we saw a nice Sunday dinner running away, leaving behind a young one that could not run fast enough to enable it to get away. But it was, however, left in its happy hunting ground. It was now well after 5 o'clock, so Master Horace called us near to the tea table. Tea was not quite ready so we adjourned to a meadow in front of the house and enjoyed ourselves for half-an-hour at a game of tug of war, which resulted in a win for Mr. Neal's side. I can assure readers that justice was done by all to the ham, beef, eggs, and various other tasties provided by the lady at the "Owl," Mrs. Ward and Mrs. Giddy doing the mother's part, pouring out the tea and seeing that all were well supplied. After tea Mr. J. S. Clarke arrived, so we faced the camera and started off in another direction under the leadership of Mr. Clarke. He was a "marvel" at nest finding, as we had not walked 50 yards before he started to show us many, both with young and eggs. We were somewhat loth to leave the forest as it was getting nice and cool after such a hot afternoon, but Father Time said 9 p.m., and we entrained for home, saying good-day to Mr. Clarke and son, with many thanks for their guidance. We arrived home at 10 p.m., very tired, but glad we went.—G. H. NEAL, secretary.

Singing Contests.

LEEDS.

Usual contest held at King's Head, Shannon-street, July 31st, when 15 birds were hung up. Some very good singing was heard. 1, Sissons; 2, Stead; 3, shared between Wigfield and Hardcastle. Judges, Messrs. A. Jennings and T. Johnson. Also on August 1st, when 20 birds faced the judges, Messrs. A. Jennings and B. Mawson. 1, Sissons; 2, Hardcastle; 3, 4, Stead. Also on August 2nd, when 16 birds faced the judges, Messrs. A. Jennings and W. Naylor. 1, Thompson; 2, Wigfield; 3, Stead.—WILSON NAYLOR, Hon. Sec.

SOME BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1909 SEASON.

Notes on the results of the recent breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others, and must be accompanied by the sender's name and address in every case.

Kelty and Blairadam C.B.A.

Now the season of suspense has passed away, I will give you the following results of our members:—Mr. Cargill has 30 on the sticks at present—Yorkies and Borders, some to be reckoned with. Next comes Mr. Duff with 26, all Borders; he has bred some very fine birds which, in my opinion, will make a mark. Next comes Mr. T. Barday, with 25 Norwich Plainheads, including some fine promising youngsters. He is exceedingly strong in Yellows. He made a good mark at our show last year with a fine yellow cock bird, but I think he will be able to score a better innings this season. Mr. Smart has 14 Norwich Plainheads, and one of them is a fine buff cock, which should be heard of later. Next is Mr. Dickson, with 11 Norwich Plainheads; he has a very good yellow variegated cock bird. Next comes Mr. Veitch, with 12 Crests and Crestbreds, and 6 Mules, one of the latter being an almost clear Goldfinch Mule. Mr. Anderson follows with 16 Borders, also some good birds. Then comes Mr. Fotheringham with 6 Scotch Fancies; as far as I can learn he has refused a very tempting offer for one of them. Next comes Mr. Dunn, with 6 Borders, one very promising yellow amongst them. Mr. Laing has 11 Scotch Fancies, some good birds come from this room every year. Then follows Mr. McConville, with 3 Norwich, including one very promising youngster. Next come Mr. Hunter with 3 Mules, all dark, Mr. G. Barclay with 24 Borders, Mr. Ransay with 6 Norwich, and Mr. Hunter with 8 Yorkies. Then follows Mr. Campbell with 7 Yorkies. Next comes Mr. Veitch with 6 Borders; this birdroom, in my opinion, is the guiding star of the owner's mates. I myself have 6 Yorkies, and Mr. Tod 15 Borders; he has an even-marked of good quality amongst his lot.—JOHN FORD, secretary.

LARKHALL C.B.A.

Successful table show held in Miners' Hall, July 31st. Competition was very keen in all classes, the British birds especially being very hard to separate. Mr. Swan staged a variegated Sparrow, and Mr. Bankier a Yellowhammer with only a few dark feathers. These exhibits came in for a lot of attention, many queer remarks as to what species they belonged to being heard. Forty-five birds were staged in the four classes provided. There was a good turn-out of fanciers and others present. Mr. Hamilton (Eddlewood) judged, and gave every satisfaction.

EPWORTH.

This fixture, held on August 2nd, was fortunate in securing a nice day. Following the terrific deluge of July 31st and the next day the morning opened dull, but as the day wore on it was quite fine and bright, and a large number of people attended. Cage birds only had four classes, but these filled fairly well, except the Foreigners. Mr. G. Boyes judged.

NOR. (7): 1, 2, spl, Axe, two good yellows, leader nice varieg., best type and feather; 2nd, cl., good shape and colour; 3, c, Crawshaw, promising first feather bird; vhc, Wheldrake. YORKS. (7): 1, 2, spl, Wheldrake, both yellows, leader grand-feathered cl., good type, colour and feather, stands well; 2nd, marked eyes and wings; 3, hc, Hall and Shipley, leader green, nice position; vhc, Blackburn. BRIT. (8): 1, 3, Jackson, topping Nightingale and a Pipit in order named, A1 feather, very steady; 2, Axe, real good Yell. Bunting, A1 colour and beautifully mkd., we liked same owner's Goldie much; vhc, c, Hall and Shipley. FOR. (2): 1, Mrs. Lambert, grand Blue-fronted Amazon, in perfect feather and bloom.

HALIFAX O.S.

Second members' First Feather Show held at Talbot Hotel Assemhly Rooms, July 31st. Messrs. Maude Bros. won special for best in show, and Messrs. Burdikin Bros. best vhc bird. Mr. A. Wooler (Sheffield) judged and gave every satisfaction.

BEAUMARIS.

Sixth annual Cage Bird Show, in connection with the Agricultural and Horticultural Exhibition, held in the Castle meadows, adjoining the town, August 2nd, the weather being very satisfactory. There was a very good attendance, the energetic secretary being Mr. T. J. Jones, who went through his duties in the usual form, entries being very fair. Judge, Mr. Fielden Richards (Beaumaris).

YORKS: 1, 2, and Hyde's special, Williams, pair of very typical birds, good size and quality. BEST BRIT.: 1, Griffiths, pied Blackbird, well shown; 2, Hughes, Bullfinch, nice size and colour, moulting; 3, W. H. Williams, very good Greenfinch, extra large. NOR.: 1, W. H. Williams, extra good wing mkd. dark Crest, of immense size and quality, rightly won; 2, Griffiths, typical wing mkd. buff; vhc, Smith, Thomas; vhc, Roberts. GOLDFINCH: 1, E. Jones, good Finch, nice size, lovely blaze, flights, and buttons; 2, Lewis, good size and colour.

INVERNESS O.A.

Annual F.F. Show held in Crown Mission Hall, July 31st. The entry was better than last year's, and the quality was far in advance of that of any previous fixture. The hall is lofty and is provided with an excellent top light. The show being held from 3.30 to 7.30, enabled the birds to be exhibited to advantage. The majority of the exhibits were deep in moult, which could only be expected at this time. Mr. J. Dunbar placed the cards and his awards left little room for criticism.

CREST OR C.-B. (5): 1, Loadall, stormer for a youngster, almost self green, excels in radiation, clear win here; 2, 3, 4, Smith, Lochiel Arms, former C.-B., nice sized skull, 3rd Crest, very short in top-knot, but well placed centre, 4th similar. YELL. (9): 1, Stamford, well up in size, very typical; 2, 3, Hutcheson, former very highly coloured varieg., appears to be clean moulted, latter neat all over, short flights and tail; 4, Mclean, good colour and size. BUFF (5): 1, 2, 4, Stamford, former short, thick-set, good quality, well up in size, gets body well over perch, should develop into a stormer, some thought a yell., 2nd similar to winner but longer behind, looks like out of same nest; 3, Hutcheson, close up, really typical, hard to find fault with. BORD. (9): 1, Swanncy, jaunty Border, very typical, some thought lucky; 2, Smith, another typical one, neat wings and tail, very jaunty carriage; 3, Maclean, very close in feather, worth its place; 4, Connachie, good quality, several really good birds, including a gem of a green, had to stand cardless. MULE OR HYB. (3): 1, Tibb, dark Goldie Mule, nice size aid colour, hard pressed by 2, Hutcheson, larger, but unfortunately marked, pepper would probably work miracles here; 3, Fraser, dark Linnet Mule, medium size, good condition.

RADFORD AND DISTRICT O.S.

Young show of Canaries, Mules, British and Foreign birds held at headquarters, "The Pheasant" Hotel, Prospect-street, on July 31st. The show, which was the first the society has held, was a decided success. The quality of the exhibits was good, and the quantity was a record for Nottinghamshire this year. This promising society, which is barely a month old, bids fair to take a prominent position amongst the local societies, as the society is engineered by a committee of experienced fanciers, and these left no stone unturned to make the show a success. Mr. Walters, an old fancier, holds the reins as secretary, and deserves great praise for the way in which he managed the show. Mr. Geo. Marshall, of Huthwaite, judged.

CL. ETC. YELL. NOR.: 1, 3, Sharp, 1st large bird; 3rd, nice bird, good quality; 2, Barnes, lovely type and quality, grand head and wings. BUFF: 1, 2, Barnes, two grand specimens, good all over, in their right places; 3, hc, c, Sharp; vhc, Hill. TKD.: 1, Sharp, another good one, grand type and quality; 2, Birch, marked on head; 3, Hill, head and wing marked. BUFF: 1, 3, c, Birch, 1st marked eyes, neck and wings, grand type and quality; 3rd, nice type and quality, on small side; 2, Towle, nice bird; vhc, hc, Sharp. KING'S LYNN C. AND C.B.B.S.

Second annual F.F. Show held July 21st, in Rechabites' Hall, Coronation-square, where 111 birds were staged, and the attendance of members and friends was largely in excess of that of the previous show. Mr. Smith (Downham) judged and gave great satisfaction. Some splendid exhibits, both in type and quality, were on view, and competition was very keen, and with a good moult some of the youngsters will be heard of again.

UDDINGSTON AND DISTRICT O.S

F.F. Show held in Tunnock's Hall, July 31st. Mr. Wm. Brownlie (Hamilton) judged, and gave every satisfaction. Fifty-six birds were staged, which were a very good turn-out for a first venture, and caused quite a stir among the local fanciers, our little hall being taxed to its utmost to accommodate all who wished to view the young birds.

Shepherd with 18 points, Mrs. Key being second with 14 points. The hall was on the small side, and more room must be had for our next show.—JNO. KILPATRICK, Sec.

BARTON C. AND B.B.C.

Successful F.F. and British Bird Show held in the large club room at Red Lion Hotel, July 31st. We had a larger number of entries and also more visitors than at last show. Our shows being such a success, we hope to have about four open classes at our annual show in December. Mr. G. Harland (Hull) judged, and gave every satisfaction. After the judging a special prize was given for best bird in show, which was won by Beach.

YOUNG YORKS: 1, 2, vhc, hc, Beach, 1st large beautiful type, good feather, colour, and carriage, 2nd not so large, good colour and carriage, clear yell.; 3, Pettit, tkd. buff, very good type and carriage. CARLISLE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Second Nest Feather Show held July 17th, when 124 entries were put down for competition, and with the quality being A1 all round, it made Mr. Connerton's (the judge's) task an arduous one in spotting the winners. Mr. McGuffie again did well in Borders, winning three 1sts, one 2nd, and two 3rds. Messrs. W. W. Moore, Herring, Nixon and Dockerty also did well in the same section. Mr. Lawson had a strong team down in the Norwich section, winning 1st, 2nd, and 3rd in all four classes. Mr. Carrick cleared the deck in Yorkshire classes, the same applying to Mr. Dixon in Mules. Messrs. McGuffie, Cranston, Nixon, and Dockerty won all prizes in British and Foreign bird classes. The show was well attended, everything being carried out in good style; it was voted a great success. These shows are being well supported by the novices who are new members, 13 new ones being enrolled since February, and others promising to join at next meeting.

CAMBRIDGE.

Held August 2nd, on Midsummer Common, Cambridge. Despite the wild, windy day, with its frequent hints of rain, the sixth "mammoth show" managed to achieve a by no means inconsiderable success. In the morning things looked black in every sense of the term, but at noon the outlook brightened, for the weather conditions became a little more cheerful, and the crowds began to invade the ground to sample the huge number of attractions provided. The plucky executive merit success, and we hope will not be let down on the financial side. There certainly seemed a huge crowd present during the late afternoon. The tent containing our section was heavily patronised, and the visitors had some grand birds to look over, the display being voted about the best yet seen at this fixture. The Canaries were good, considering the time of the year, the Hybrids and British splendid, and there were a few attractive Foreigners. Mr. A. E. Brooks had charge of the cage bird section, and a more painstaking and genial fancier it has never been our lot to meet. He and his stewards, Messrs. Bye, Dean, Gifford, King, Linsey, and Morley, had the birds nicely and comfortably staged, and were in every way obliging. The joint secretaries were Messrs. T. H. Brown and W. Driver, and they got through their heavy task in a manner which did credit to their powers of organisation. Among the visitors we noticed many well-known fanciers, including Messrs. W. P. Barnes (Grantham), G. R. James (St. Ives), H. E. Tringham (London), S. L. Cocks, A. Rowles, H. Popple (Peterborough), and the Northampton veteran, T. Irons. The three challenge cups aroused keen competition. The open cup for best Canary or Hybrid fell to Mr. C. J. Ward, his noted Redpoll-Bullie this year scoring a second win, thus making the trophy his own property. The open cup for best British bird was awarded an attractive Waxwing exhibited by Mrs. E. G. Weston. The members' cup was secured by a splendid heavily-variegated Crest-bred owned by Mr. Brooks. The judge was Mr. J. Robson, and his awards were favourably received.

NORWICH YELLOW (5): 1, 3 spls, 3, hc, Brooks, leader slashing big clear, grand chest, stands well across perch, nice wings and tail, fine wide head, though a trifle browed; 3rd, neck and eye mkd., not so well built, but good in shape and style, and a clinker for quality; 2, Irons, hardly the substance of winner, but a fine bird for type, feather and carriage, close up; vhc, Handley and Son. BUFF (6): 1, spl, Irons, beautiful clear, well-built, shapely, very stylish, grand meal and under-colour; 2, Popple, fine chubby bird, good front, well cut up behind, nice head and wings; 3, vhc, c, Brooks, clinking good trio, leader full of quality, excellent build and style. BRED 1909 (18): A good class; 1, spl, Irons, buff, fine bouncing youngster, trifle lengthy, but plenty of substance, and all quality, in nice form; 2, Popple, yellow, not over large, but well proportioned, charming quality and style, should make up well, especially if a hen, runs winner closely; 3, Arscott, rattling big buff, shade over long, but well built and good in feather, nice carriage; vhc, Irons, another excellent bird; hc, Handley and Son, shapely and promising; c, Taylor. CREST OR C.B., 1909 (6): 1, hc, Mayhew, variegd. C.B., nice build and quality, good rising skull, plenty of hroad feather, in fine form; 2, 3, vhc, spl, Brooks, leader slashing big youngster, fine dome head, and good feather, not quite so neat as winner, but looked a close race; 3rd, another nice C.B.; c, Mitchell. BORDER (5): 1, 2, 3, vhc, Linsey, very smart team, leader neck mkd. buff, excellent type, travels in taking style, feathered like boxwood; 2nd, good clear buff, dainty mover, full of quality, but not so well moulded at neck and head as winner; 3rd, another smart bird, also hardly "free" enough at neck. CLASSES 86, 87 and 88 cancelled. A.O.V. CAN. (10): 1, members' cup, and 3 spls, Brooks, wonderfully good heavily-variegd. Crest-bred, big stout body, well-clothed, remarkably wide dome skull, grand lashing and quality of feather; 2, vhc, Mitchell, clear body dark Crest, very neat headpiece, nice size and radiation, good quality feather, well built frame; 3, Harrison, splendid buff cinnamon for quality and correct colour, shapely, stylish bird; hc, Gifford; c, James; No. 437, Barnes, splendid Lizard, finely spangled and rowed, but had knocked out greater part of its tail. SELLING (15/-) (8): 1, spl, Rogers; 2, Hearn; 3, James; vhc, Linsey; hc, Nichols; c Barnes. HYBRID (13): 1, cup 2 spls, 2, Ward, the well-known Redpoll-Bullie leading, looking grand, and seems to have improved since last we saw it, well deserves its honours; 2nd, the champion Linnet-Bullie, close on its stable-companion's heels; 3, c, Mrs. Weston, fine jonque Goldie-Bullie, grand size, rare colour and quality; vhc, Parsons, sweet Goldie-Redpoll, rich colour; hc, Laurence, rattling good dark jonque Goldie Mule. BRITISH GOLDFINCH (18): A very hot class; 1, Mrs. Weston, wonderful big face top and bottom, very square-cut and rich in colour, splendid bars, buttons, and moons, richly tanned, steady, fine shape and style, not house-moulted, should be hard to beat later on; 2, c, P. H. Harris, heats leader a shade to-day in tightness of feather and bloom, grand cobby bird, very stylish and steady, and with a remarkable expanse of blaze, but not so good and well cut as the leader's, however, splendid colour all over, a noted winner, but meets his Waterloo to-day; the c bird is also a fine Finch; 3, spl, Watson, very pretty bird, in lovely condition, beautiful colouring, good-sized well-cut face, the underblaze cut in a trifle at the sides, staged in grand form; vhc, Wyse, also put down in the pink of condition, very stylish, shapely bird, rich in colour, and with a good square-cut blaze; hc, Mitchell, looking very soft when we saw it; No. 465, Watson, a really good Goldie, as were several others "crowded out." BULLFINCH (7): 1, spl, Wyse, fine cobby fellow, good breast colour, excellent cap and bars, wins on condition; 2, Parsons, bouncer, hot colour, grand shape, "gone" at throat; 3, Rouse, another good, typical bird, fine colour, but out in feather; vhc, Mitchell; hc, Barnes; c, Watson. LINNET (5): 1, Harris, good size and shape, sound colour, nicely pencilled, stylish, wins well; 2, Keymer Bros., bonny bird for size and type, good markings and carriage, fails a trifle in colour, otherwise close up; 3, spl, Gifford, big, bouncing bird, nice colour, though little pale at centre, well marked; vhc, Bye, may make a good one; hc, Bloy. GREENFINCH, ETC. (13): 1, Arscott, nice jonque Greenie, good size and shape, very sound colour, in excellent condition; 2, Mitchell, also a smart Greenie, beats winner in size and build, but loses in condition; 3, Hipwell, very nice Siskin, good size and colour, shapely, fair bib; vhc, Bell, good Mealy Redpoll; hc, Rouse; c, Laurence. CLASS 96, cancelled. A.O.S. SMALL (9): 1, hc, Cocks, splendid young Tree Creeper leading, very nicely staged, should make a beauty, latter a lovely hand-reared Grasshopper Warbler, had one damaged feather in tail, but seemed very low down in prize list; 2, Lowne, very smart and shapely Black Redstart, good feather, not very dense in colour yet; 3, Heaton, really beautiful Nightingale, very large and shapely, grand plumage, tame as a kitten, though in a large all-wire cage; vhc, Bell, good big Hawfinch, fine bib, runs a shade pale on head; c, Mrs. Weston, a Whitethroat. A.O.S. LARGE (4): 1, cup, 2 spls, 2, Mrs. Weston, leader a beautiful Waxwing, lovely colour and markings, little deficient in tail; 2nd, almost perfect Golden Oriole, full adult colour, remarkably steady. PARROTS, ETC. (5): 1, 3, spl, Stubbings, two very fine Blue and Amber Macaws, a great attraction to the visitors; 2, Cutting, real smart Lemon-crested Cockatoo; vhc, Wakelling, fine Mealy Rosella; hc, Bell. CLASS 100, cancelled. MEMBERS' CANARY (5): 1, 3, spl, Brooks; 2, Mitchell; vhc, James; hc, Barnes. BRITISH (5): 1, Mitchell; 2, Barnes; 3, vhc, Cocks; hc, Mrs. Dawson. The winners above were also in the open classes.

STRATTON, BUDE AND DIS. F.A.

Held August 2nd. The society was favoured with another big success. The weather was everything that could be wished for and the spectators numbered just over 2,000. The Cage Bird exhibits were well up to the average in numbers, and the quality of all exhibits was very good. Mr. J. Rushmere, who judged, had some difficulty in placing the awards. The birds were well staged and were ably attended to by a good committee. Everything went off admirably and without a hitch under the guidance of Messrs. Bohn and Welch, the hon. secretaries.

DOWNEND (Bristol).

Held August 3rd. The quality was first-class all round. The class for young Yorkshires was a good one, the team put down by Mr. Osborn being a good one, all stylish, shapely, of fine position. The special for best bird in show went to Mr. Davies' Purple-capped Lory. Messrs. Pearse and Rathbone, the hon. secretaries, worked hard and had matters well in hand. Mr. J. H. Payne made the awards.

YORKS BRED 1909 (14): 1, 2, 3, vhc, Osborn, leader yell., capital feather, nice position, 2nd head tkd. buff, grand stand, nice flights and tail, good feathers, 3rd neck tkd. buff, good shape and feather, stands well; hc, c, Morgan. HAWARDEN.

Fourth annual show held at Hawarden Park, August 2nd. A most enjoyable day was spent by a good number of visitors, as well as exhibitors, and good tents were provided for the Cage Birds, etc. Everything was in good order when we arrived. The show was well managed by the hon. secretaries, Messrs. E. Ratcliffe and H. C. Butler, who were ably assisted by a good staff of stewards, who took great interest in the event, the hon. treasurer being Mr. G. I. R. Butler. The park, no doubt, was a great attraction for visitors, and the committee should be very proud of such a place for their annual show. Mr. F. Hampson (Wrexham) judged and gave general satisfaction. Yorkshires took pride of place to-day, a good number being brought together. A nice cl. yell secured special for best Can. in show; it had a good many admirers. Norwich were less in numbers, the winners being of nice type. A good collection of British was brought together, and some very good birds were shown, especially the Goldie which took special in the Britishers. A really good six-pointed Goldie Mule took premier position in the Mule or Hybrid class. The winner of Hyde's special was Mr. Albert Williams.

NOR.: 1, 2, 3, A. Williams, team of nice birds, good type and quality of feather, winner varieg. buff, blaze of colour, rightly won, 2nd another buff, shade longer, 3rd nice youngster; vhc, Tozer. YORK.: 1, vhc, Jones, winner varieg. yell., nice type and stand, good quality feather, put down very fit, deserved his position, well fed; 2, c, A. Williams, a buff, good length and style, lovely feather, a wash would improve him, the c bird took Hyde's special; 3, Millington, another nice youngster; res., Nolan, slashing yell. of rare size; vhc, J. O. Williams, good buff Yorks. hen, good length and quality, some good birds had to be left cardless, the moulting season being well advanced on a good many. A.O.V.: 2, good young Lizard, very well spangled, slightly broken cap, deserved his position. G. Evans' Crests arrived too late for competing. BRIT. GOLDFINCH: 1, spl, F. Jones, one of our best Finches, very good size, blaze well cut down and deep in colour, well shaped body, extra good in tanning and wing bars, in very good form; 2, J. O. Williams, another youngster, fine blaze, good tans and buttons; 3, Johnson, nice size and shape; vhc, Parrish, very fair bird. BRIT. BULLFINCH: 1, Bell, we admired for colour, one of our best, shown in good form, 2nd fine size, close up to winner; 3, Brookes, nice Bullie when ready, too heavy in moult; vhc, Millington; hc, Ellis. BRIT. A.O.S.: 1, Bell, good Greenie, not what we have seen him, slack in feather; 2, Brookes, another good Greenie, same fault; 3, Bell, nice young Waxwing; vhc, Millington, Linnet. My address from August 7th to October 10th will be Downie Park, Kirrienuir, Forfar, N.B., writes Mr. Geo. Goulden.

Kindly announce that I am forced to give up the Fancy, and so reluctantly compelled to sell out.—T. W. Adams (E. Twickenham).

Report does not credit me with winning v.h.c., at Llandudno Show, writes Mr. J. Mustchin (Weston-under-Lizard, Staffs.)

Will secretaries and customers kindly note that I have changed my address to 69, Dukes Brow, Blackburn? writes Mr. F. N. Watson.

Show secretaries are asked to kindly note that Mr. James Nicholson, British bird exhibitor, has removed from Sutherland Street, York, to 23, Bright St., Skipton, Yorkshire.

Kindly notify my change of address to 15, Settle Terrace, Thornton Lane, Bradford, writes Mr. H. Hill, hon. secretary, Yorkshire Union C.B.S., and the Bradford East O.S.

Am pleased to say our Young Bird Show was a great success, writes Mr. J. Higman, secretary, Barrow and Dis. C.B.A. All worked splendidly up to the letter, financially beating all records.

Will secretaries of societies, writes Mr. F. E. Hawkes, hon. secretary of the Liverpool Bird Breeders' Association, kindly note my change of address to 39, Lloyd Street, Everton Road, Liverpool?

Will Miss E. Young, who has sent us an order for a copy of Dr. Clarke's book on "Septic Fever," kindly let us have her address, upon receipt of which we shall be pleased to forward the book.

We hear that a Nantwich fancier, Mr. Peers, is having excellent luck this season in the breeding of Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrids, getting young in several nests, and rearing them successfully under foster parents (hen Canaries).

Anyone having written to me at Parliament Place, Liverpool, and getting no reply, should please write me again at 9, Thirlmere Street, Liscard, Cheshire, the latter now being my permanent address, writes Mr. Edward Williams.

The Bolton and Dis. O.S. have arranged a bowling sweep, for August 14th, to be played at Railway Hotel, Black Lane, writes Mr. H. Parkinson, the secretary. Members meet at Joiners Arms Hotel, at 2 o'clock. Car at post office 2.15.

At our Annual Show, to be held December 4th in the Hall, writes Mr. Jas. Lamb, secretary of the New Stevenston and Dis. O.S., Mr. Hugh Morcland, of Falkirk, will judge Norwich Crests, Borders and British birds, while Mr. Andrew Allardice, of Wishaw, will judge the Scotch Fancies.

We have had to alter the name of our society, writes Mr. R. Edmunds, hon. secretary of the King's Lynn C. and C.B.B.S., as the club is getting on so well; and we have had to remove to larger headquarters. The old name of the society was Seven Sisters (King's Lynn) C.B.S. We are now going very strong.

Colour-feed on Ramsden's Pure Peppers only to secure the best results. Owing to the wonderful depth of colour contained in Ramsden's peppers, they are far and away the cheapest and most economical colour-feeds ever offered. Ramsden's Peppers are guaranteed to be absolutely pure.—(Advt.)

Members of the Lewisham and Dis. C.B.S. (headquarters, "Roebuck Hotel," High Street), will please note, writes Mr. Geo. H. Phillips, the hon. secretary, that I have changed my address, which is now, 8, Ermine Road, Lewisham, S.E., to which address all communications with reference to the society should be sent.

We have been fortunate in getting Mr. J. Bailey, of Bradford, to come through to give us a washing exhibition and hints on staging Yorkshires on September 17th, writes Mr. T. C. Crawhall, hon. secretary, Northern Yorkshire C.C. Will all fanciers in the North please make a note of date? Everyone is welcome.

At the Hallam and Ecclesall Society's Show on August 19th next, in the Endcliffe Park, Sheffield, classes (10) for cage-birds are offered for the first time, with Mr. W. Mundell as judge, and under C.B.U. rules. That well-known fancier, Mr. R. Colton, has undertaken the stewardship of the section, so nothing will be lacking on that score. He writes: "As it is the first time the society has included cage birds in its schedule, I should like the section to be a success, then it will become an annual affair." Exhibitors should give the society and Mr. Colton their support.

Memorandum forms to hand, with thanks. I think they are wonderful for the small charge you make; really, everyone having birdy transactions should never be without them.—John H. Jowett (Bradford).

Kindly thank my customers for me, writes Mr. S. Drake (Halifax), as I have sold more Canary rings this year than ever before, and have never had a single complaint, my new pattern seeming to give entire satisfaction.

The Hygienic Institute of the Imperial and Royal University of Vienna reports (June 24th, 1909) the result of experiments made with regard to the harmlessness of Danysz Virus on domestic animals as follows:—Two dogs, three cats, three fowls, one goose, three pigeons, two rabbits and two guinea pigs were given a liberal supply of white bread soaked in Danysz Virus, and three mice were fed with the prescribed quantity of the same preparation, which in all cases was readily eaten by the animals. The three mice died, one after 5 days, the other two after 9 days, showing the typical symptoms of the Danysz infection. The other animals experimented upon were kept under observation during 21 days, and remained perfectly healthy, except one fowl, which suffered from a disease otherwise traceable. The preceding experiments, therefore, demonstrate the fact that Danysz Virus is harmless and without danger to domestic animals and corroborates the results already obtained by other observers. —(Signed) Prof. Schattenfroh.

OBITUARY.

Mr. GEORGE BROWN (Northampton).

It is with feelings of deep regret that we have to chronicle the death of Mr. Geo. Samuel Brown, the father of the cage bird Fancy of Northampton, at the ripe old age of 82 years, writes Mr. J. Nason (Northampton). The deceased had been suffering from a serious malady for several years, and passed peacefully away on July 27th. It is now some 25 years ago that the writer was first known to him, and during his lifetime he was a keen fancier of the Cinnamon, and has bred some of the best that ever graced the show bench in this variety, notably the grand buff shown by the late Messrs. Howe and Robinson in the eighties, which won at all the leading shows, including the Palace. Crests and Mules were also included in his list of fancies. (We do not forget his love for a good fox-terrier, with which by the bye, he first founded the celebrated Banker breed, which a few years ago took such a prominent place on the show bench. Game bantams, too, he successfully showed for years, and many a prize has he lifted with this little popular variety of the poultry Fancy.) Our friend was the oldest license holder in Northampton, having until some four years ago, when he retired from business, been mine host of the Foresters' Arms for some 27 years and of the "Old House at Home" for 12 years. He was also treasurer of the Northampton Hand-in-Hand C.B.S., since the foundation some 25 years ago, and held the office up to the time of his death. There was no more popular figure at the local shows than "Old George," as we were wont to call him. Upright, straightforward, and generally loved by all, for he always called a spade a spade, as the saying goes, and what he said you could rely on he meant. He leaves three sons (all fanciers), and four daughters to mourn his loss.

It is with feelings of deep regret, writes Mr. F. E. Hawkes, hon. secretary of the Liverpool B.B.A., that I report the death of Master B. Davies (eldest son of Mr. R. Davies, a well-known Norwich fancier), who passed away on July 29th, at the age of 19 years. Of a quiet and kindly disposition, he was well respected by his comrades. The funeral took place on August 1st, and amongst those at the graveside were Messrs. A. McWilliam, R. Bretherton, E. Peake, Boothroyd, Brown, T. Abbott, T. Rice, all members of the Liverpool B.B.A. His loss is much felt by the family, to whom we tender our heartfelt sympathy.

A Correction.

On last week's frontispiece the winning of first prize in the Unflighted Buff Norwich Class at the 1909 Palace Show, was erroneously attributed to Mrs. Southcombe's bird. This should have read "fifth" prize. The actual winner of first place, was, we find, Mr. G. Dobinson, of Seaton Delaval.

Absolutely Alright!

At a recent City and Suburban A.C.B. Show, a fine mealy Rosella was exhibited by Mrs. Vincent, who related how, when the bird and its cage had been made into a "parcel" for transportation to the show-room, it kept saying, as they jogged along the streets: "I'm alright, I am; I'm sure I'm alright!"

A Strange Nesting Place.

For many years a Swallow nested in the upper sash of the window of a dwelling-house in the principal street of a small seaport town, writes Mr. A. G. Hustwick (Aberdeen). It was an object of much interest to passers-by, and the old lady of the house was careful never to open the window for fear of dislodging the nest.

London Fanciers at Cricket.

At our next meeting, writes Mr. V. Wynn, hon. secretary, City and Suburban A.C.B., we should have had a lecture on the Lancashire Canary by Mr. F. J. Green, but unfortunately he has been called away on duty (military). Our annual cricket match against the "Early Birds" C.C. takes place this Saturday, August 7th, at St. Quintin's Park (second turning to the right after passing Ladbroke Hall, in the Ladbroke Grove, which is near to Notting Hill), at 3 p.m., when we are making a tremendous effort to recover the lost "ashes" of last year.

The August number of "British Birds" (1s. monthly; Witherby and Co.) contains an exquisite photographic supplement, which consists of eight beautifully reproduced photographs (taken by Miss E. L. Turner) of the Water Rail, which is a particularly wary species. In one instance the bird is depicted "running to the nest"; in another, "chipping the shell to assist the chick"; in another "brooding." The remaining five show the Water Rail removing the first, second, third and fourth chicks respectively, and the removal of an "addled" egg from the nest. Miss Turner is to be congratulated on obtaining these remarkable photographs, and the publishers not less on their beautiful reproduction. Miss Turner also contributes an article respecting the Water Rail. Among the "Notes," one of the most important, as having some bearing on the cause of Grouse disease, is that by Mr. F. J. Stubbs on "Red Grouse, Heather, and Crowberry." The whole issue is unusually interesting.

Selby Stands Still.

I have resigned the secretaryship of the Selby F.S., writes Mr. J. H. Dixon, after having held the post for 16 years, and as no one has yet taken over the duties the society is at a standstill. We have a very nice balance to our credit at the bank. But owing to other most pressing engagements I cannot possibly carry on the secretarial work any longer.

A Guessing Competition.

The Golden Oriole exhibited at Cambridge Show provided the fanciers present with a little mild amusement in listening to the efforts of the visitors to decide its identity. It was called a Woodpecker, and many other things, but one individual, after gazing at it in astonishment for a few moments, turned to his friend and said: "Well, I'm blowed; look'ee 'ere, John Henry, at this 'ere yellow Blackbird!"

An Albino House Martin.

Yesterday I watched for some time an albino Martin, writes Mr. John Campbell, from Cupar, Fife, to the "Scotsman." It was a beautiful little bird, and looked like a white butterfly. Neither Howard Saunders in his "Manual of British Birds," nor Harding in his Handbook mentions this variety; but Macgillivray in his "British Birds" (Vol 3, p. 275), says, "Accidental changes to white or cream colour sometimes occur"; and Selby, in the text of his "Illustrations of British Ornithology," states (p. 130), that "white varieties of this as well as the other species sometimes occur." I have never seen one before.

The McQuiston Case.

It will be remembered that last week we published a letter from a correspondent, signing himself "Loch Doon," who asked the question whether Mr. McQuiston, when judging Dalmellington Show on June 30th last, disqualified a Bullfinch shown by Mr. Gemmell for being "faked"; and also that we sent a reply paid telegram to Mr. McQuiston concerning the matter. To this telegram we have received no reply. We have obtained a catalogue of the aforesaid Dalmellington Show, however, and find that there is no entry in the cage-bird section standing in the name of Gemmell. From a letter which appears in the correspondence columns this week, though, it would seem that some bird or other (presumably a Bullfinch) was either disqualified or "shelved" at this fixture.

The Crossbill When Feeding.

On July 19th, when walking in the vicinity of Castle Grant, Strathspey, says a writer in a contemporary, I heard an unfamiliar twittering proceeding from some tall Scots fir and spruce trees. On going to investigate, I found that a flock of some forty Crossbills was feeding on the pine seeds, and what was even more interesting to me, on the galls of the spruce aphis, which are unusually numerous this season. As the Crossbill is by no means shy, I had no difficulty in observing closely their method of feeding. Biting off one of the galls, they usually flew to a stronger branch, and there, holding on with one foot, and steadying the gall with the other, they proceeded to extract the aphides. Only a few of the birds remained on the Scots fir trees, the majority of the flock evidently preferring to feed solely on aphides. I examined a few of the fragments which they let fall, and found that the lice had been almost all devoured, so that the visit of the Crossbill may be of great service in helping to exterminate these pests. When moving from tree to tree the birds kept up a continual twittering by which their presence could be detected.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS.

By that distinguished authority on aviculture,
WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., Etc.
Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds," Editor of the Foreign Bird Journal.

A thoroughly comprehensive and highly instructive Manual, written from personal observations made during a lifetime's experience. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds. Replete with useful hints and reminders. Especially instructive and useful for beginners in this most interesting branch of bird-keeping.

By C. A. House.

This is a thorough and practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, written by a well-known expert and judge. It contains chapters dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, and an illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman, reproduced in the finest art style. There are also exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge approached by no other book of its kind at the price.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

An Amusing Ox-eyed Tit.

We have a most amusing Ox-eyed Tit. He is never still, and is always ready for a tasty mealworm. He is kept next to a Robin, and the two birds gossip together in their bird-like way. The Tit likes cheese and snatches it from one's fingers eagerly.—Sent by Dorothy Baker (age 14), 44, Bowthorpe Road, Dereham Road, Norwich.

Jealousy Among Thrushes.

A Thrush was singing in an orchard near a farm where there was another Thrush in a cage. The latter, hearing the other, burst into melody, and sang even more loudly and sweetly than its rival, which, finding itself outsung, flew at the cage, forced its way into it through the wires, and fought furiously with the occupant.—Sent by H. Perry, 31, Brunts Street, Mansfield.

*In the Muzzle of a Gun.

Perhaps the most unlikely place of all for a nest is the muzzle of a gun. When Cromwell seized and held Windsor Castle, he planted a big gun in the Curfew Town to command the bridge over the river. To fire it now would have a curious effect, for a pair of starlings have year by year built their nest in its mouth. —Sent by J. B. Leech (age 12), Inglenook, Melton Road, West Bridgeford, Notts.

*The Robin's Soliloquy.

How very cold it is to-day,
Said Robin Redbreast small.
And not a bit to eat I've had,
No food I've found at all.
I wonder if that little girl,
With face so kind and sweet,
Who sits up in the window there,
Would give me crumbs to eat.
So up he flew and sang so sweet,
That soon he found some crumbs to eat;
And then he sank more loudly still,
As if to say, my thanks I give.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following Conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in toll to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor. "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Still Wheezes at Night.

W.D.H., Walton.—I almost doubt whether you will ever be able to get quite rid of the wheezing now, as it appears to be of the most chronic type. However, try what the following will do for it. Continue to feed as before advised, but vary the chickweed and greenstuff with plantain stalks, shepherd's purse and groundsel heads. Keep in one place, and do not move it about, but see it is in a comfortable temperature, free from draughts, and in a pure atmosphere. Get a chemist to mix you one dram each of oxymel of squills, ammonia bromide, and chlorodyne, five grains of potass. iodine, and thirty drops of ipecacuhana wine in one ounce of glycerine. Give the bird fifteen drops of this in the drinking water two days in every three for a week, when the wheezing is audible. Then omit it for a week, and give again for another week if the wheezing returns. Continue giving this in alternate weeks as long as necessary. Shall be glad to hear result in, say, a couple of months.

Scaly Feet.

E.C.—The scaly condition of the feet is almost certainly an indication that the bird has left its youth behind. If very bad so as to hamper the free use of the claws or appear unsightly, wait until the bird has quite recovered from the moult. Then soak the feet for a few minutes in tolerably hot water, about as hot as the little finger can be comfortably borne in it, occasionally working a little lather of pure soap about them with the thumb and finger. This will soften the scales sufficiently to enable you to lift them off with the thumb nail, by gently pressing the point of the nail against the lower projecting edge of each scale, beginning from the top and working downwards to the end of each toe. Do not hurry over the business. Do it very gently, use no force, and be careful not to cause any bleeding. If scale is not sufficiently softened to life easily soak it a little longer. A sharpened match-stick is useful to help lift off scales. Do one foot first; the other a few days after.

To Save the Young.

J. Edwardes.—Your feeding is chiefly to blame, and if you adopt the following regime at once I have no doubt you will yet save a good proportion of the birds now living. When the young leave the nest and begin to pick well at the egg food, separate them from the parents by a wire slide as you have done hitherto; or, as it is getting too late now to allow the parents to nest again, remove the hen to a flight cage, and let the cock remain with the young until he is about dropping into moult. The latter plan will be best, as the cock will continue feeding the young for some time. Before the young leave the nest supply the parents with a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape as staple seed diet. Give egg-food fresh at least twice a day; green food, as much as they care for, freshly gathered twice a day; and give a supply of cracked hemp, which also should be prepared fresh daily, once a day. Should the old birds prefer it, you may also add a little soaked rape daily, but be very careful this does not become sour. When the young are separated from their parents give them a supply of plain egg-food made crumbly moist, and rather on the dry side, a little cracked hemp in another vessel, and a saucer of Canary and summer rape, both given dry. As soon as you see they are beginning to crack the rape seed, gradually cut down the supply of hemp, and later reduce the quantity of egg-food, until at between four and five weeks old you have the birds on a staple diet of two parts Canary to one part rape, with just a pinch of hemp two or three times a week, and a little egg-food, say, a teaspoonful between three birds, three times a week. The egg-food may be varied occasionally with an equivalent amount of bread and milk. When the young are first separated give no green food for a week (they will be given enough by their parents for this time), but after that give seed stalks of plantain, shepherd's-purse, chickweed, or groundsel heads, in limited quantities, until the birds are six or seven weeks old, when you may give it more freely, about every second day. Give the young that are now ailing six drops of syrup of buckthorn, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence in the drinking water for two days, and put them on the above-detailed dietary at once.

Pecking at Feathers.

"Jerry."—At this season the birds frequently pecking at their plumage may be nothing more serious than a symptom of the moult approaching. At the same time you should carefully examine the cages and birds for any trace of insect pests—the former for red mites, and the birds themselves for any traces of grey lice, as the latter live upon the birds permanently, whereas the red mite only visit them periodically at night. In either case the pests must be eradicated, allow the birds to bathe freely, and occasionally soak a few quassia chips in the bathing water, and add a pinch of Epsom salts to the drinking water for a day or two. In case the moult should be coming on the birds, give them a little maw seed daily, until they are well broken into moult, and, of course, if you desire to colour feed them you should get them on the colour food at once. A stray flight or tail feather in the cages of the old birds, or a few small feathers in the cages of the young ones will set all doubts as to the moult being imminent at rest, and by the time this happens the birds should be well on the colour food.

Wheezy Yorkshire Male.

G.R.T.—You must not be content with merely trying to keep the bird free from draughts, but you must make your efforts succeed at any cost, even if you have to move the cage farther away from the window. No treatment will be of any material good until you have attended to this point. Keep the cage in a cosy position, not too near the fire, but where the temperature will vary the least from day to day, and be, above all else, perfectly free from draughts. At the same time see that it is hung where the air is pure and fresh, and avoid any place near a burning lamp or gas jet. Your diet is also wrong. Attend first to above points, then as a staple diet give three parts Canary to one part summer rape, and give separately a pinch of a mixture of hemp one part, inga and teazle half a part each, twice a week. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it for a fortnight, and on the alternate days a little green food in variety. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whisky, ten of glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, two days in every three for a week, and every second day in the following week. After the fortnight continue the above feeding, except that you must omit the additions to the sponge cake, and give it only once or twice a week. You may also vary it occasionally with a scrap of bread and milk, or a little egg-food. When it is moulting you may give a little maw seed, but the linseed is best left out altogether.

Moulting Matters.

R.H.J.—Certainly, as colour is quite an unimportant qualification in Crests and Crest-breds, you will be quite safe in moulting your birds without the aid of colour food if you desire to do so. Providing they have the necessary qualities of crest, feather, size, and shape, well developed, you will have nothing to fear on their behalf on account of the absence of the colour-feeder's art. What you should particularly aim at is to get them through a good and speedy moult, and by generous treatment in the matter of nourishing diet keep the system well up to meet the drain upon it towards the close of the moult. In this way I am inclined to think that a certain amount of the blindness which afflicts this variety just after the moult is finished can be prevented. Give an unlimited supply of Canary and rape as a staple diet, and every second day allow a little egg-food, sponge cake, bread and milk, or plain crushed biscuit, and on the alternate days green food, and a pinch of a mixture of hemp, inga, broken groats, and coarse oatmeal, with a few grains of linseed sprinkled amongst the bulk of the mixture. At the commencement of the moult, and for a week or two after it has got well in progress, give a liberal supply of maw seed, and at the close of the moult a few extra grains of linseed. Keep the birds in a warm temperature, not too dry, and allow free opportunities for bathing. The latter especially—that is, heat and moisture within reason—is the great thing to encourage and develop growth of feather.

A Quartette.

No Name.—(1) Certainly, you would do quite right to cover the bottoms of your cages with fine sawdust. It is a very good plan to do so through the moult and winter months, as it keeps the cages much sweeter and cleaner than sand. It will do the birds no harm; but you must not forget to give them a saucer or shallow tin filled with gritty sand in one corner of the cage. (2) Yes, it should be quite possible to colour feed your young birds; indeed if they have not started moulting they are just about the right age to begin. Put them on colour food without delay, making it about half the full strength, but if any of them have started dropping feathers get them on full strength in two or three days. If they have made any progress with the moult they will doubtless come out patchy, through not being put on "feed" early enough, but that cannot now be avoided. (3) Proper moulting cages are somewhat similar to breeding cages, but lower, and less open in front. It would be much better for you to moult the birds in breeding cages, three or four in each, than to put them up singly in small cages. You should be quite able to tell the cocks from hens now by their bolder carriage, and altogether more pushful and defiant demeanour, besides which any cock should have made some efforts at singing. (4) Hall's Sanitary Distemper would serve your purpose excellently, and is as cheap as anything I know of consistent with quality. Ask the makers for a colour card, and you should be able to choose anything to your liking in decorative effects. I should imagine a dado of autumn green around the walls, with a neutral grey, or sky-blue, or light pea-green, above, and the doors and window frames painted stone colour, or oak grained, would make a very nice and cosy effect.

Yorkshire with Cataract.

A Lover of Birds.—Sorry, but the only thing I can confidently advise you to do is to leave it quite alone. In birds, as in humans, the only way of curing it is by a surgical operation, which is impracticable in birds. You may, if you like, try the effect of an ointment composed of five grains of red oxide of mercury in half ounce of pure spermaceti, which any chemist would mix for you. Put a tiny piece, the size of a pin's head, in each eye three times a week, holding the bird whilst it melts, and assisting it to run well around the eyelids. Candidly, I do not expect it will do much towards a cure. Feed it liberally, and occasionally give twenty-drop doses of chemical food in its water, and a drop or two of cod liver oil emulsion on a scrap of bread and milk to keep it well up in strength. Keep it in the same cage, or one of similar pattern, always stick its green food in the wires at the end of a perch, and also give any egg-food or bread and milk in a finger drawer stuck in the wires in a similar position. The bird will then get along quite easily, even though it should become totally blind. One of the very worst foes of blind birds are insect pests, so keep an eye on this matter.

A Feather-eater.

Miss Eunice Crisp.—The bird has doubtless been improperly fed, and treated wrong generally for some time, though it is not unlikely its feather-plucking habit arose through the irritation of insect pests. See its cage is now kept quite free from any trace of insects; allow the bird to bathe daily, if it desires, and occasionally soak a few quassia chips in the bathing water. Let it have a fair-sized cage, keep the floor strewn with nice, clean, gritty sand, and see it is not exposed to any draughts. Feed on a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape as a staple. Give separately twice a week a pinch of maw seed, on two other days a few grains only of inga, and three times a week a small piece of sponge cake slightly moistened with sherry. Give a small spray of green food daily. You might also for a week or two give a mealworm if you have any, three or four times a week, or in lieu of this pin a scrap of the rind of boiled pork or bacon on the end of its perch. This will help to divert its attention from its feathers. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, the same quantity of chlorate of potash, and twelve drops of glycerine for two consecutive days, and every second day afterwards for the remainder of the week, and in the following week four drops of aromatic sulphuric acid in the water every second day. After a fortnight of above treatment, discontinue all drugs, and instead of the above-named extra items of diet give a pinch of hemp twice a week, and a little plain egg or biscuit food once or twice a week.

Owing to the holidays, many queries have necessarily had to wait an answer until next week.

Brevities.

Accommodation (P.E.P.).—The full capacity of your bird-house would be thirty-four birds; therefore if you intended removing the youngsters as they got able to feed themselves you might turn in eight or ten cocks, and from twenty to twenty-four hens. If, however, you allow the young to remain with the parents until the end of the season three cocks and six or eight hens would be quite sufficient to begin each season with.

Breathing Heavily ("Yorkie").—The Yorkshire which is breathing heavily and wheezes at night has probably been exposed to cold draughts. You must remedy this. First give a pinch of Epsom salts for a few days, and add to the diet a little egg-food or crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry mixed in it every second day for a fortnight, and give twenty drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil, in the drinking water, every second day for a fortnight or three weeks as may appear necessary.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

An Owl and a Jay.

G. H. Naylor.—You ought to have no difficulty in keeping either a Jay or an Owl; both are very hardy, given the right kind of food. Any good brand of dog meal (such as Spratt's, or Clarke's "Melox") makes an excellent stock food for such birds as Jays, Jackdaws, Magpies, etc. It should be scalded with hot water and then reduced to a crumbly consistency by the addition of a little packet Thrush or Lark food. Also give table scraps, including meat and greens, dead mice, sparrows, etc.; a raw egg now and again is a great treat. An Owl must have flesh food if it is going to live and thrive in captivity—for instance, mice, Sparrows, and other small birds, beetles, pieces of rabbit, the "innards" of fowls, etc., scraps of raw beef or mutton, etc. If you cannot undertake to provide these things, you should certainly let so useful a creature have its liberty.

About a Starling.

Age Fourteen.—To keep a Starling in good condition give a good insectivorous mixture designed for the coarse-feeding Softbills, and let it contain finely minced lettuce or other green-meat or vegetable ingredient in liberal quantity. The Starling is fond of a little scraped raw meat, hard-boiled egg, fruit, finely chopped green stuff, berries, worms, snails, beetles, wasp grub, gentles, and, in fact, most forms of suitable live food. Also you could scrape a little raw lean mutton amongst its food fairly frequently, or give a little grated dried liver. Keep in a very large box pattern cage and clean out frequently. It is quite true that Starlings can be taught to repeat short sentences, various whistles, etc. Some become very accomplished. It is necessary to choose a short sentence, which comes trippingly off the tongue, as it were (such as "Pretty boy,") and repeat it to the bird very, very frequently. When it has learnt this, then another can be tried.

Half-a-dozen.

Ignorant.—(1) A Bramblefinch is a smart, attractively coloured bird, but (2) it has no song worthy of the name. Therefore, you must decide for yourself whether it is "worth keeping." Plenty of people certainly do keep Brambles, but I cannot gauge what may make a bird worth keeping from your own point of view. (3) A Bramblefinch-Canary Mule has never yet been bred to my knowledge. It would most decidedly be "worth producing." Go ahead and try for it. (4) The packet mixture you mention would answer very well if you added a fair proportion of sunflower seed to it. (5) The Bramble will nibble at almost any kind of suitable green food—especially the seedy heads of chickweed, shepherd's purse, plaintain, groundsel, and the like. My own birds like a little soft food now and again, a mealworm or two, a few live ants' eggs, thistle heads, etc. Fruit I don't offer. (6) I should think petrol fumes (if heavy) decidedly noxious to birds. Unfortunately, the Budget prevents me from investing in a motor car to test the point.

A Starling Problem.

J. J. Gray.—If the birds had voluntarily left their nest, the perching would not cause their deaths. I am assuming they could not get very cold at night in your sitting-room. I should think it highly likely that the birds did not get sufficient food; this would be likely to bring about death on the second day. They would not be properly feeding themselves and, of course, they had not their parents to supply the deficiency by giving them a "fill-up" now and again. You ought really to have "crammed" them for a time; at their age they would be "sulky" (or shy) and refuse to gape to be fed. You took great care of them otherwise. Bread and milk would be poor food for Starlings; dog or puppy meal (such as "Melox," or Spratt's) would be vastly better, given after being soaked in hot water and drained. Better luck next time.

About a Lark Cage.

Lothian.—It is usual to raise the "balcony," or bow at front, an inch or so from the floor level of the back part of the cage. This helps to keep the turf, when placed in the bow, from getting covered with road dust, or sand, off the bottom. The balcony can project just so far as you choose to let it; about six inches would be ample for the width of cage you name. I think your cage would be very much improved if you made the width of the back part nine inches. Cut the turf to any shape you like; it is, of course, supposed to fit into the bow. Just sprinkle the grass lightly with water, especially during the summer. You should line the bow with thin sheet zinc, or have a tray made to fit into it. The food vessels I like are wood outside, with white glazed earthenware linings. Inch and a quarter to inch and a half head holes would be ample, while one inch gauge would suit the wiring admirably. The inside of the cage could be enamelled, and would look very handsome so treated, but the wires are generally left bright, though there is no real reason why they, too, should not be enamelled.

British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hardbills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

Colour-feeding a Thrush.

Cymro.—I dealt with this matter only a few weeks ago. Keep the bird indoors for preference whilst being moulted. There is no need to give a Thrush, or any other British bird, hot pepper. Sweet (tasteless) pepper is quite sufficient. I never knew a Softbill bird that would not eat colour-food (sweet). Of course, it is necessary to begin with a very tiny quantity, as the change in the colour of the food (and this alone) makes them shy of it unless very gradually brought about. The bird should be kept in a not too well-lighted spot (out of direct rays of light, especially the rays of the sun). How strong the colour-food should be given depends on the natural colour of the bird. To give a jonque Thrush (naturally a deep brown), the colour-food extra strong, would be to make him unsightly. Such a bird only needs sufficient to slightly enhance its natural colour, and put a gloss on its plumage. One in four (one teaspoonful of pepper to four of food) is strong, and sufficient for most purposes. Probably one in six may be quite enough for your Thrush. It must be continued until the moult is right over; for about a fortnight (to be safe) after you cease to find cast feathers in the cage. The last part to finish is generally the head, and the pepper should be given for some little while after pen feathers (or quills) cease to be noticeable thereabouts.

Brevities.

Linnets Breeding (Pharos).—Linnets caught now ought to be very likely Mule breeders for next season, providing they are then in proper condition. Your question re Foreign Finch Hybrids should have been addressed to our Mr. Page; look in his column next week for an answer.

Linnet in Trouble (Forester).—Soak the mandibles for a few moments twice daily in fairly warm water made claret colour by the addition of a little Condy's fluid; also gently bathe the eyes and surrounding parts with the same, using a piece of surgical lint, or very soft cloth, or a pledget of cotton-wool to do it with. Use a glass or pot vessel only, and let the bird have a few drops of Condy's Fluid in the drinking water. Keep the bird by itself.

Always Drinking.—(Social, Oldham).—In a small teaspoonful of water dissolve as much citrate of iron crystals (from a chemist) as will lie upon a shilling, and give the birds to drink, fresh daily. Increase the strength if it seems necessary, but do not make the birds constipated. Let them have plenty of chopped greenstuff in their food.

In a Room (W. M. Johnson).—All the species of birds you name are quite hardy and easy to keep. They should thrive admirably in a room free from damp and draughts, and well lighted.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S. M.B.N.H.S., etc.

Treatment of Young Grey.

J. Lang.—Young greys are certainly delicate on arrival, and very difficult to rear, but this is owing to the hardships and unsanitary conditions of importation, than to actual delicacy of constitution. Get a camel hair brush and some diluted glyco-thymoline, and well cleanse the nostrils two or three times daily, while the running lasts, well cleansing the brush and using a fresh portion of the solution for each occasion. Put 10 to 20 drops of Parrish's chemical food over its boiled maize daily, and also make the drinking water the colour of pale port wine with the chemical food. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish in its cage, and also supply some ripe fruit daily, an occasional shelled walnut and piece of plain biscuit. You must carefully guard against draught, and keep warm, yet at the same time the bird must have fresh air. As soon as the bird is eating really heartily of the seed mixture, I should gradually wean it from the boiled maize. Its condition is rather disquieting, but if you treat it as above, you should manage to pull it through, but it will not really be safe for two or three months yet. After treating it as above for a week or ten days, you had better report progress, repeating full details again when doing so.

How Many Birds?

"Ocho Rios."—You could keep a dozen with safety in such a cage, with a daily clean such as you suggest. I must, however, speak a word of warning. These all-wire cages are really dangerous, except in the hands of those who have had some experience of bird-keeping. The points you must note are these: It must not stand in such a position that the wind can blow through it, neither must the sun be allowed to shine unrestrictedly through the top of it. Draughts must be avoided, or the birds will soon "moult off." When the sun is shining directly on cage, a cover must be placed on top of same; the birds can get all the sun they require by taking a perch near side of cage. If you bear these points in mind, you should succeed well with the small Ornamental Finches. You ought to get "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1s. 1d., post free, from this office.

Birds for Outdoor Cage.

"118."—I most certainly consider Budgerigars would be the most suitable in every way for your cage. Put in two pairs, and as the young are able to fend for themselves, dispose of them as profitable as possible, or form another flight for them. Hang up four husks, each one as far removed from the other as your space permits; it will be best for the back of one husk to face the entrance hole of the next nearest. As regards shelter for the winter, providing you exclude driving rain, very little more should be required, but it would be best to fasten a piece of sacking over the open netting each night, and it might be left there all day as well during severe weather, especially as your locality is a northern one, and your cage only allows limited flight exercise. You would find "Foreign Birds for Beginners" very helpful; see advertisement in this column.

Birds for Cage.

L. D. Pickard.—It is always a safe axiom not to mix birds of varying strength in such confined quarters as yours would be. At the same time, I have never found the Magpie Mannikin do any harm, but others have, and I should advise you to have an ordinary Canary breeding cage for their sole occupancy; they would probably breed under such conditions. Bichenos are not by any means plentiful at the present time, at least, most Australian Finches are rather scarce on the market at present, and these also I and others have found rather combative in close quarters. The following should make a very handsome series for your cage, and the same treatment would suffice for all. Zebra, grey, St. Helena, blue-breasted and orange-cheek Waxbills, and I certainly advise you to be content with these, they are all beautiful, and are all your cage will properly accommodate. You certainly ought to get "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1s. 1d. post free from this office.

A Feather-eating Parrot.

C. Berry.—I can only advise you to continue the treatment already given. It is weary work curing Parrots of this vice. To be quite sure there are no parasites on the bird sprinkle Keating's powder (pyrethrum powder will also answer very well) under the wings and round the nape of the neck, and also wherever there appears to be any irritation, but avoid getting any into its eyes. Re fruit, very few Parrots will refuse apple, grapes, or cherries; if it refuses one kind, try another. A little ripe fruit of some kind will be beneficial. I certainly think the bird will ultimately speak, at any rate, a few words, and whenever it is quietly settled talk to it in a casual way, also repeating again and again any short sentence you wish it to learn. If you persevere with the treatment advised, I am of the opinion your bird will recover condition.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

Long-tailed Greenfinches.

W. S., jun.—(1) I think as the season has so far advanced it would perhaps be better to keep them still in the unheated room; however, if the weather becomes settled and warmer, they would do well enough in a roomy flight out of doors, and probably breed, but for the first winter I should bring them indoors, say, about end of October, or early November, according to weather, putting them out again next May, after which they could be left out altogether. This species is very fond of spray millet and seeding grass. (2) I have found them hardy here in London, and a friend of mine on the north-east successfully winters them out of doors in a roomy aviary—for time of turning out see under No. 1. (3) The outward sexual distinctions are very slight, the colour of the female is not so rich; she is more silent, and has a slightly smaller black bib than the male. They breed fairly freely, and usually rear all they hatch out. They were bred last year in quite a moderate-sized cage. (4) No, their song is little more than a plaintive call note, but they are handsome and entertaining birds.

What Cockatoo?

B.K.G.—(1) You have, I presume, a Solomon's Island Cockatoo, but your description is too vague for me to be definite. (2) Your only way is to cover him up in a cloth while fixing on a ring, unless you are prepared to wait until he will let you handle him freely; this should come later. My Hawk-headed Caique, really savage and dangerous with those he does not know, will lie on his back and hold his feet up for a piece of tape to be tied on his leg before being taken out of doors. You must either wait, or cover up his head and fix on the ring, and then leave him to come out of his upset in due course. (3) I should try him with all sorts of fruit before I gave up; most will take apple. Try him with sultanas, as he is fond of sweets, also give him nuts—walnuts, hazel, Brazil, and other nuts. Hemp, canary, sunflower and seeding grasses will do well enough for him. Try him occasionally with a piece of biscuit that has been moistened in water well coloured with Parrish's Chemical Food. It will also be helpful to well colour the drinking water with the chemical food while the moult lasts. (4) I should suggest covering him up whenever he starts screaming. Most of them soon recognise this as a punishment; but it must be done quietly, and not in such a manner as to scare the bird.

Starting an Outdoor Aviary.

M.G.L.—Your best plan will certainly be to divide your suggested aviary into two parts, each one with a 24-ft. flight and as large a shelter house as you can manage. Parrakeets and Finches do not assimilate, and must not be kept together. Parrakeets will soon destroy every growing bush in their enclosure; put in plenty of branches, stout and thin, and sow the ground of flight with grass, oats, etc.—even this will require sowing at intervals. Turquoisines have not been obtainable for years, and I should be doubtful if the Elegants would survive the winter out of doors. I should suggest the following Parrakeet aviary: Cockatiels, Redrumps, Ringnecks, Budgerigars, Cardinals, Troupials (you must watch how winter affects these in your locality), Blue Robins (very seldom to be obtained), Virginian Nightingales, Starlings, and Thrushes. Room for nine or ten pairs. Finch aviary: Greenfinches in variety, Waxbills, Buntings, Mannikins, Serin Finches, Nonpareils, Liothrix, and any of the small Ornamental Finches, also one pair each small Doves and Quails. You could accommodate 20 pairs. It is not practicable for you to use the flight universally, the Parakeets would soon destroy every plant and bush therein, as well as gradually kill off all your small birds; so I have replied on the basis of two aviaries of 24 ft. each with a separate shed and no connection one with the other. "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (see advert.) would help you.

Amazon Parrot Shouting, etc.

Jacko-bird.—(1) All birds go off their speech occasionally, and very frequently after each period surprise you with fresh words. I do not think keeping him occupied with toys has anything to do with it, but I should certainly advise you to talk to it continually while you are feeding it, and perhaps more especially when it is resting in its cage and quiet. Even if it does not respond, it will surprise you with some word or sentence unexpectedly a little later; at least, that is, and has been, my experience with them. I do not think there is any age limit, though sometimes quite an aged bird will forget part of its vocabulary. (2) Most birds will shout out if left alone for a time, or when they hear the person they are most fond of about. Covering up is a good check, and I should still practice it; the time will come when a sight of the cloth may be sufficient. (3) Weather affects Parrots much the same as individuals. I do not think there is anything wrong with it, but it will do no harm to put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia to each ounce of the drinking water for one day, and repeat the dose in three days' time. I presume you are feeding as advised in this column? (4) I do not advise an exchange unless you are prepared to pay a really large price for an established and trained bird. Greys are tricky purchases, and losses are often many before you get one established.

PARK AND LAKE AVICULTURE.

Identification of Dove.

Marie L. Livings.—Your description is excellent, and enables me at once to identify your Dove as the Australian Crested Bronzewing (Ocyphaps lophotes), a very handsome species, and quite unlike any other. It is not a rare bird; specimens may always be seen at the Zoo, and they have some flying loose there.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post-mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Young Canary (C.W.H.).—This fledgling died of inflammation of the lungs, liver and spleen; all symptoms of bird fever.

Canary (Puzzled).—This bird, and probably the other fourteen, died of well-established "bird fever."

GENERAL.

Answered by the Editor.

An Address (P. Henson).—Have looked the matter up and should think the address you enquire about is Messrs. Palmer and Son, Selater-street, Shoreditch, London.

A Correction (T. Walsh).—Accept our thanks for taking the trouble to write us. We have no idea of "blowing you up."

Explanatory (Novice).—Yes; the explanation given by your friend was quite correct. The modern Crest is called the Norwich Crest because its shape (body) is supposed to take after the type of the modern Norwich Plainhead—that is to say, be short and chubby.

A Change of Habit.

The usual nesting site of the common Wood Pigeon is in trees, tall bushes and hedgerows, but a few instances have been recorded in recent years of their nesting upon the ground.

The Shy Corncrake.

The Corn Crake is seen less upon the wing than any of our migrants. The bird frequents the long grass and herbage of low lying meadows. Its cry may be heard daily, but a whole summer may pass without the bird being seen.

Hard Working Herons.

The Heron is single brooded, but no bird works harder to read the ever hungry and ugly youngsters. From dawn till dark, and many times half through the night, the old birds work to satisfy the cravings of their noisy brood.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS.

By C. P. ARTHUR.

(with notes by W. T. Page, F.Z.S., and W. Laskey).

The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognized as one of the most profitable and pleasure giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. In this thoroughly practical handbook an eminent authority and highly successful breeder of these two species gives very full details upon

The Breeding, Rearing and Moulting of Yorkshire Canaries

By SAMUEL DEAN.

A Lecture recently delivered before the Pendleton and Salford O.S.

It gives me great pleasure to have the honour to appear before you again, and though the subject you wish me to deal with is one that has been gone through times without number, I will do my best to make it as interesting and instructive as possible.

Concerning the Cages.

The first articles we require for our hobby are the cages. These are made in a great variety of styles and sizes, but the plain box-cage with flat bar fronts are the ones I like best. The most useful sizes are 20in. by 18in. by 10in., and 16in. by 16in. by 10in., the first named for breeding cages, and the latter as stock cages. It is immaterial whether these are done out with whitewash, limewash, or distemper, so long as they are thoroughly clean, especially at the commencement of the breeding season.

The perches should be made of some fairly soft wood, about ½in. by ⅜in., with the corners planed off and sandpapered; but after sandpapering it is best to dip the perches into hot water to take the "slippiness" off the wood so that the birds can get a good firm grip on them. The doors in the cage front should be made to open outwards, not to slide up and down, as they are much more convenient and are quieter to use, those that slide up being, as a rule, very noisy (and when a hen is timid, everything should work as noiselessly as possible). Also an egg glass will be much more convenient to put over the door between the two top perches.

A seed-box should occupy one side of cage and a water-glass the other. For the latter, those perfectly round inside are the best, as they are so much easier to keep clean, and any odd kind of small pots are very useful for placing in the cage corners to hold mixed seeds, grit, green food, etc. For grit, a nice sharp sand is required; we fanciers in Bradford are very fortunate in this respect, as we can get a nice clean sea sand delivered at our doors for 2s. 6d. per cwt.

The Staple Diet.

The staple food is, of course, the usual Canary seed. A good, full, plump seed is the best. A fair test of quality is to push your hand into a sackful, and if it is quite easy to reach the bottom without exerting great strength, you may rest assured it is decent; also note, if the hand is dusty when withdrawn. But, if possible, I prefer the birds to be the judge of quality. If, for instance, I intend to buy one or two cwts., I secure a stone of seed and put some in a few cages; if then the birds do not throw it out and about the cage, but eat from the top of the seed vessel in a rational manner, I know I can buy that particular seed with safety.

Other seeds required are rape (German summer and English, or black), hemp, inga, linseed, gold of pleasure, maw, etc. The rape can be given a few times a week, and the others as required at different seasons—hemp for feeding young, inga and linseed before the breeding season as a preventive of egg-binding, and the gold of pleasure and maw as conditioner.

Procuring and Preparing Stock.

Having all ready, the stock must next be procured. It is the cheapest and best method to go in for only a moderate quantity, but let the quality be of the highest your means will allow. Get the birds as early as possible so as to get them used to yourself and to the room.

Be sure to get your stock into proper condition ready for breeding; not too high, especially if you intend to pair the birds up early, but just bring them on gradually by a judicious use of special seeds and egg food. From the 21st to the end of March is, as a rule, quite early enough, and should you intend to pair the birds up at about this time, you should begin at about the middle of February to give the hens a fairly plentiful supply of inga and linseed, half-a-teaspoonful twice a week, and at times a little egg food and gold of pleasure seed. The cocks, if in good health, will require practically nothing to bring them on, but a little egg-food about once or twice a week will do them no harm. What you must look after at just about this time in both cocks and hens, is to see they do not get a chill. The very changeable weather is very apt to do a deal of harm when they get into high condition.

In regard to the condition of the birds constituting a pair, my firm conviction is that the bird which is in the better condition is the bird which the young will most resemble. How often has it been noticed that there is a great changeableness in the various nests of young birds from the same pair? For instance, suppose you have a big stock cock bird on the rough side and very faulty, you will, of course, pair this to a neat, typical hen possessing good quality of feather; now, it will always be seen that if the cock is in tip-top condition the young will take more of his style; but run him with two hens and let him feed a nest of young, and there will be a change in the progeny. I always, therefore, see that the better of a pair is in the higher condition.

This is very noticeable in the breeding of marked birds. A fancier whom I remember well, put several sets (one cock and two hens) up for breeding, and from the first round bred some very nice marked birds. He kept the cocks on good feed during the time the hens were sitting and rearing, with the result that for the second round the cocks were in far better condition than the hens, and practically every youngster was foul-marked like the cocks.

When Pairing-up Stock.

Having now everything to your liking, you pair up. I much prefer to let the birds have a nest pan and nesting material to start with; it tends to occupy their thoughts and time, and keeps them from fighting. You must now give on alternate days a small quantity of egg food and mixed seeds. Watch for building operations to start, and if the hens cannot get things into shape, you might assist them a little. Oft-times I have seen them carry nesting in, only to pull it out with them when they jump out of the nest pan; this may be caused by their nails being overgrown and curled round; it is, therefore, advisable to trim the claws of both cocks and hens before pairing. Or the nest-pan may be too smooth and the birds may be unable to get it to grip the material. Should this be the case, a lining may be fixed in and just a little cowhair given to them to line with; but I prefer, if possible, to get the birds to make a nest of their own, as it will be much better ventilated than a lining can permit it to be.

For nesting material I supply dry grass, which I can usually gather during early March. This requires washing well in soap and water; it then makes an ideal nesting. Give it a good rub in the hands before placing it in cage, to soften it, and break it up into lengths of about two or three inches long. When the birds have made a fairly compact nest with this, allow them a little cowhair for lining purposes, as this will give a better surface and will be much smoother for the bird to turn the egs.

When the Eggs are Laid.

As the eggs are laid it is preferable to remove the first three, which must be returned on the third evening. Then the hen will lay the fourth among them the following morning and start to sit straight away. The eggs should hatch on the fourteenth day after the eggs are returned.

At the expiration of the first week a bath should be put in the cage for the hen to bathe in, providing, of course, the weather is suitable; if it is otherwise, gently spray the bird with slightly warm water, which should be repeated on the 10th and 12th days: the bath, or the spray, is for the purpose of preventing the inner skin from getting too dry, thus making it impossible for the young bird to break out of the shell.

On the seventh day, if you would like to know how many good eggs there are in a nest, you can easily tell by holding the eggs up to the light in a perpendicular position between the thumb and first finger; if good, it will appear very dark; but if clear, it will look as the word implies; and if addled, it will have a dirty yellow cast about it.

If on the 15th day the eggs have not hatched out and yet appear good, place them for a minute in some nicely warmed water (as hot as you can bear your fingers in without discomfort); should the imprisoned youngster be still alive, the warmth will cause him to kick about and the egg will move very perceptibly, according, of course, to the amount of life the youngster has left. Leave the egg in the water for about one minute and then replace it in the nest for a few hours to see if the young can hatch out; if it cannot, place the egg again in warm water as before. This method has many times brought young birds from the shell that would otherwise have been unable to break through.

The Troublesome Red Mites.

Red mites are usually very troublesome in the nests during breeding time. To keep them away and prevent their multiplying, the nest must be well dusted out with insect powder—both between the nest and nest-pan, and in amongst the eggs and nesting material. Also, a very good thing is to spray (on the seventh day of incubation) the nest and eggs with a solution of alum and water, or give them another good dusting with insect powder.

The Language of a Parrot.

SIR,—I read with interest the letter from "Veritas" in your issue of July 31st. I should like to tell him that we had a Parrot which came from India that used to say exactly the same sentence, viz., "Wake up, gunner," etc. If we asked it to call the cat it would say "mow, mow." To call the dog it would say, "Toby, Toby." It seems strange that these two birds should say almost the same words. I should like to know which part of the country his Parrot came from. Our bird came from Bangalore. I may add that the man who brought our Polly was in the 1st Essex Regiment. The Parrot, I'm sorry to say, is now dead.

BIRDY LAD.

The Leyton Tramwaymen's Unique Venture.

SIR,—I have much pleasure in reporting to you that there is to be a very unique show of cage birds, poultry, rabbits, pigeons, cavies and horticultural products at the Tramway Depot on September the 3rd and 4th, in connection with the Social and Athletic Club. I need hardly mention how pleased I was to learn from the esteemed secretary, Mr. J. Fayle, of this venture, and of Leyton leading the way in this direction, and it is to be hoped that his efforts will be crowned with success, and that other tramway districts will follow suit, as in my humble opinion this sort of thing not only tends to foster a good and friendly spirit among men employed in large firms and Corporations, but also relieves the usual routine of their daily toils, by giving them something to look forward to and attend to after work is finished, thus promoting health, happiness and content; eventually, too, it may be the means of many fanciers joining their local societies, and getting made thoroughly acquainted with and educated in their particular variety. In conclusion, I am pleased to state that I have been appointed judge for the cage bird section, and can only hope that I may give satisfaction. Trusting that the committee may have a bumping entry, fine weather and a good gate.

A Young Fancier Sets a Good Example.

SIR,—Being a constant reader of your splendid paper, CAGE BIRDS, I have noticed the records of experiences of beginners. I beg to offer you a description of my experience with Norwich Canaries. It is by no means an encouraging one; in fact, just the opposite, but I have not given up and intend starting with a fresh hope next season. I commenced in April with one pair, but before I had them a week the hen died, showing that the man did not serve me well. I then bought a hen in the town (Oxford), and breeding was soon commenced. The hen laid three eggs in the first round, but only one hatched and the chick died the following day. The next round she laid four eggs, hatching all four. Everything went well until a fortnight after, when she deserted the young and they soon died. I again tried her, and in the third round she laid the same number (four) and all hatched; but it was of no use, as she left the young when they were only ten days old. And to end it all, I eventually lost her as well. I have not given up; "better luck next time." I am only a youth, but hope this will interest your readers and not discourage beginners.

BERT WINDOWS.

The Bankfoot and District C.B.S.

SIR,—The second meeting of this society took place on July 27th, and was very well attended. After the minutes of the previous meeting were read and passed, 12 new members were added to our ranks, thus increasing our membership to 44—not a bad start this, despite the fact that this society has sprung up in the midst of other strong societies. The business of the evening commenced with the election of officers, and the following received the solid support of all present:—President, Mr. E. W. Johnson; vice-presidents, Messrs. J. Bywater and H. Taylor; treasurer, Mr. E. M. Waddington; auditors, Messrs. H. Kershaw and B. Wilman; secretary, Mr. F. Gelder, 14, Centre Street, Little Horton. It was then decided that we hold three members' shows, the first on October 9th, second on November 20th, and the third on December 11th; and for these a valuable list of specials is promised. A cup will be given for most points gained by a novice at each show. Another special is for most entries and least points; so it will be seen that the novice receives every encouragement in this society. The specials will be allotted so that every exhibitor will receive a prize. I might say that the special list is being very well supported. A varied classification is being provided, so that every member will be able to show whatever variety he happens to have. The election of a committee of management was left over until another meeting. The schools where we hold our meetings are known as the Bankfoot Schools, and no charge is made to us for the use of them; in this I consider we are very fortunate, for we have a cosy room where we can hold our meetings, and another well-lighted room where we can hold our shows. The subscription to the end of the present year has been fixed at 1s. 6d., and then 3s. per year. Will all intending members and friends please note, that the next meeting will be held on August 31st at 8 p.m., when we hope to put forward a varied and high-class winter syllabus.

An Appeal for an Old Metropolitan Fancier.

SIR,—I crave a small space in CAGE BIRDS on behalf of Mr. W. Shakespeare, a very old member of the Fancy, who, through no fault of his own, has fallen on very hard times. He has always been ready to help anyone on in the Fancy by placing his vast experience at their service, also by going to the various societies' meeting and giving lectures and washing demonstrations, at which he was a marvel. The past few years have been very trying for him, he having had his beloved wife ill for the last six years or so, until she recently passed away. During the last 12 months business has been so bad that he has had to sell all his birds to get the necessaries of life. But his strength could stand it no longer; he broke down, and has been in the Highgate Infirmary in a very low state for the past month. On visiting him yesterday, however, I am glad to say I found he is getting to be convalescent, and if no relapse occurs will be about again shortly. He is so well known and respected in the Fancy that I know there are many who would like to show their sympathy for him in a practical way, to help him to obtain a day or two at the seaside to set him on his feet again, so that he may come amongst us again with his old-time smile. I shall be glad to receive any donations, and to acknowledge same through the Fancy Press. I appeal to all fanciers, and especially to friends, knowing this to be a very deserving case.

The Song of the Linnet North and South.

SIR,—I have read week after week the nonsense and rubbish which some have indulged in on this subject. They say the Linnet is a mocking bird, and has no song of its own. I say it is not a mocking bird, and has its own song from the nest. They say the London Linnets are racers, and that racing spoils their Linnets; and yet they have theirs from the South—rather funny! The letter from the West is far the most sensible, and contained the most correct song I have yet seen in CAGE BIRDS; but "Tolic, Joey," and "tolic, ger, ger, Joey," are both foul notes—"chalks" we call them. The best and correct Linnet song is: "Tolic, tolic, ick, ick, e qua; tolic, tolic, ick, ick, e quaker weet; tolic, tolic, lug, lug, archer, weet; tolic, tolic, wissy; tolic, gipsy, gipsy, weet; tolic, biddle, biddle, weet; tolic, chow, chow, weet; tolic, ick, e pie, chow, weet," etc. I could fill the paper with the correct Linnet song. But I say and maintain that the first three notes are the best notes any living Linnet can say; no peeing, whining, scraping here. Such are what we term scriggling, and birds with such are only fit for bird catching. We are content up here with our style of singing, so let the North be content with theirs. I have been bird singing and bird catching for 35 years, and have won 42 handicaps since Christmas with Linnets, Chaffinches, and Goldfinches. But if they went in for the Northern style of singing, I for one would be finished. Besides, I think if some of the Northern cracks were here with us at bird catching, they would quickly alter their opinions regarding our birds on the field. I may add that we sing similarly to the West—back to back, 3ft. apart on the nail; but only 10 minutes' singing. Years ago we used to sing 15 minutes. I shall be pleased to arrange for week-end contests, or on any week night, at Barking Cross Tree Tavern.

A Crestbred Canary Faces the Camera.

SIR,—I herewith forward you a photograph of my young Crest-bred Canary, which was hatched on May 25th, 1909. It won first prize at Hyson Green Show, Nottingham, on June 12th, when three weeks and five days old. (See CAGE BIRDS, June 19th, page 588.) It also won first prize at the Admiral Duncan Show, Nottingham, June 26th, 1909, when five weeks and five days old. (See CAGE BIRDS, July 10th, page 632.) It was vhe at the Nottingham Permanent Show, July 10th, 1909, but was then going into moult.

Pet Jay Makes a Meal of a Scarfpin

And Goes Under the X-Rays.

SIR,—On the 15th June, Mr. J. Eckford came to me in great concern about his Jay, a particular pet of the whole family. During one of his periods of liberty in the sitting-room on the Sunday, he had picked up a lady's scarf pin about two inches long, with a golden head. The pin was missed, and could not be found after careful search. Noticing the ruffled appearance of the bird, he was caught and examined, when the sharp end was seen, the pin having been swallowed head first! With a pair of tweezers they tried to remove it, but, slipping off, the pin disappeared entirely, to the dismay of all. I advised Mr. Eckford, who has been long connected with, and is now a life governor of the Newcastle Infirmary, to take the bird to that institution to have the pin removed. Quite an interest was taken in the case by the doctors, who applied the X-rays, and located the pin in the stomach. Dr. Turner, who, I understand, has performed many operations on Fancy stock of one kind and another, advised him to leave it alone so long as the bird kept lively, but as soon as he noticed any signs of drooping to take it to him, and he would operate on it. The pin is minus the head now, as the Jay cast it up some time ago, leaving the pin to possibly find its way through the flesh. On Friday last Mr. Eckford told me the Jay was talking and whistling, and as bright as ever.

A Novel Rearing Experience.

SIR,—I have been a reader of your valuable paper CAGE BIRDS for five years, and must say it is one of the best papers I have read on birdy matters, and wish you every success. I don't know whether the following will be of any account or interest to fellow readers, but I think it quite a novelty. I paired up a Foul Green hen Canary to a last year's (caught) cock Linnet. The hen laid two eggs, and only one hatched out. At the same time I had a pair of Foul Green Canaries up together with six eggs, due to hatch out three days after the Linnet Mule, and as only three hatched out, I took them and placed them with the young mule. This hen has brought up the brood which are now doing for themselves. I paired the same cock Linnet to another green hen Canary who laid two eggs, and on the 12th day of incubation deserted them. I examined the eggs and found one fertile and one clear, and being anxious not to lose the young Mule, I was at a loss to know what to do, as all the other young were a week old. At last I thought of the following plan. I had a pair of Canaries up together; the hen had laid three eggs. So I took the egg that had been deserted (which was quite cold) and placed it under this hen, who also laid two more eggs, and the same day that she laid the fifth egg she hatched out the young Linnet Mule. She is a small Norwich green hen, and has reared the young Mule and hatched out her own five young at the same time. I took the young Mule and placed it in another nest pan alongside, and she still fed the two broods for two days; but suddenly stopped feeding the Mule, which was 16 days old, and as the cock would not have anything to do with it, I transferred it to the hen before-mentioned with the three Canaries and one Linnet Mule, which are seven days older, and she has brought up the three broods, which are now doing for themselves. I should like to know if any or your readers have ever had such an experience with the birds they have kept, as this beats hand feeding hollow. I have done very well this year, having 32 young Canaries and seven young Mules from two cock Canaries, one cock Goldie, one cock Linnet, and five hen Canaries. I have to thank you for the valuable information I have derived from your paper.

Y.C.C. of Ireland Matters.

SIR,—Will you kindly allow me to contradict a statement made by the Hon. Treasurer of the Y.C.C.? He says that I had no right to a vote in matters of the above club, as I am only a lad of 12. Would Mr. Duigenan kindly let me know if this is his reason for not sending me the balance of my prize money still due to me for the 1908 show, taken credit for on the balance-sheet sent to the members last March, and which I have applied for twice since? Now, Mr. Duigenan, I think the lad of twelve will be able to teach you your business. Do you not think it would suit better to sit down and send out the prize money still due to the exhibitors at last Y.C.C. show, than to write the Fancy Press? In case you may challenge my statements, I wish to put the following questions to you: What about specials 14 and 16 paid by the donors with their entrance fees and not as yet sent to the winner? Why did Dundalk exhibitors receive their prize money weeks before other exhibitors? Which, you or I, gave the best support to shows last season? When you have replied to this, I will let you know where to procure my birth certificate.

M. J. MULLIGAN.

A Remedy Wanted for a Fatal Disease.

SIR,—Having read the letter from "Old Breeder" in CAGE BIRDS, I may say I am troubled with the same complaint in my birds. They seem in good health one minute and the next are like a ball, having their heads under their wings. When eating they seem to be quite ravenous. They may last like that for a week, and then suddenly drop dead. I have lost eight birds during the last week. This is my first year of breeding, and I have bred about 40 youngsters from eight pairs, and just when old fanciers were congratulating me on my success, I am meeting disaster. I should be pleased if some one could give me a little advice in the matter.

CYMREE.

SIR,—Seeing "Old Breeder's" letter in last week's CAGE BIRDS, I may say I have just lost a Hartz Roller cock Canary in exactly the same manner as he described. This was a 1908 bird, that with a Norwich hen had brought up seven youngsters. Seeing him look lumpy, I removed him from the hen and last brood of young, as I thought he was upset from overwork. He died two days afterwards—this was on Saturday. At the time of writing (Sunday) I have a young cock bird out of this bird's last brood affected by the same symptoms. As this is my first year of breeding, it is rather disheartening. I hope other fanciers will state their views on the matter.

The Sensational Scottish Disqualification Case.

SIR,—I presume by the signature of Mr. J. Rae, jun., that he has only joined the S.B.B. and M.C. since March, 1903, when I resigned the club as secretary and treasurer; and with all due respect to Mr. Rae's right of opinion re Mr. McQuiston's case, I hope to make allowances for Mr. Rae's inaccurate information regarding myself. I hesitated very much before replying to these assertions, which had nothing to do with the case whatever. All of us in human life generally judge one another more or less correctly or otherwise. I joined the S.B.B. and M.C. in the first year of its existence, 1902. I have kept Norwich, British and Foreign for a number of years, and have still a few of my open show cards, including my Crystal Palace honour. Your list of members, Mr. Rae, is only imaginary, as no list appears now, since the revision of rules, although you may find a few names in catalogues where patronage is granted only. I find it a good principle not to kick a fancier when he is down, but like to give him the benefit of the doubt until the case is proved against him, and without boasting in any way; if a little more of that spirit was shown it would be better for the Fancy (but not to wink at repeated acts of infringement). I only wish that some had as clean a record as Mr. McQuiston up till the present case (which is not finished yet). According to the minutes of the S.B.B. and M.C., Mr. McQuiston has not a single case against him. No harm can be done to the club if an impartial sub-committee be appointed to submit a report on the case, instead of having the usual heated discussion at an annual meeting. In fact, I most heartily approve of the decision of the N.B.B. and M.C., which shows a much broader spirit, and gives the member a better chance of proving his case. Had I been present at the meeting of the S.B.B. and M.C., I certainly would not have come to a hasty conclusion, because there are wheels within wheels, and some judges are just as liable to do things against the rules as exhibitors. You will find good, bad and indifferent in all classes, but after you get your "baptism of fire," Mr. Rae (if you understand this language), no doubt you will be more careful. I have no prejudice against the club, but, in spite of its decision, the knowledge is common property that a large show has decided to accept entries from all fanciers, which clearly indicates that they will not be led by the nose or dictated to by any club. I have no intention of pursuing the matter further, as I merely wished in my previous note to correct a statement about a rule which did not exist in the trophy competition, and I thank the editor for his courtesy in publishing this. R. FARMER.

The Scottish Finding said not to have been Unanimous.

SIR,—In last week's issue I read a letter from John Rae, jun., in reply to Mr. Farmer. Now, Mr. Editor, I have known Mr. Farmer to be a bird fancier and also a judge of cage birds. He is the late Secretary of the S.B.B. and M.C., and during his term as Secretary of the above society he spared neither time nor trouble to make the society a success. Where Mr. Rae got his list of members from I do not know. I have been a member of the above society for a few years, and I have never yet seen a list of members, or known of any such list. Mr. Rae says that the finding of the S.B.B. and M.C. was unanimous in the McQuiston case. I beg to differ with him, as I attended the meeting and know that the finding was not unanimous, as I moved that the case be withdrawn. I like to give honour where honour is due.

W. M. MILLAR.

SIR,—I feel compelled to express my appreciation of your efforts concerning what may be a great wrong to a prominent exhibitor in Scotland, and for doing it in such a manner as to endeavour to leave no doubt in the minds of fanciers as to the admission made being a genuine admission of guilt. On the other hand, it would be a great pity if any unsportsmanlike action could be smoothed over by the connivance of one or two fanciers, and an exhibitor be again placed on the roll of honour. If I may express an opinion, it is to the effect that this is a trumped-up piece of work, judging from the evidence you have been at the trouble to procure. What a reflection the Scottish Norwich Plainhead Club casts on the Fancy by their decision that a fancier having transgressed the laws of exhibiting to such an extent as to warrant expulsion from a kindred society, is still an honourable fancier as far as they are concerned! Is it not astonishing the admissions that are made of staining, etc., in Scotland, and yet so little effort is made to put an end to it. Are the Scots of to-day afraid to do their duty when they have suspicions of the enemy being in the camp, or are they all knowingly, yet covertly, tricking each other? I am not given to eulogising a paper, but I must congratulate the Cage Bird Fancy on its leading organ. It is since its advent that the Fancy has grown, and there is a fresh and higher spirit sweeping over the cult of bird keeping that is mainly due to your paper, and to all I recommend the purchase (and keeping) of CAGE BIRDS. May it long be spared.

GEORGE W. MACPARTLING.

[We do not know whether Mr. MacPartling is aware of the fact that Mr. McQuiston was not a member of the Scottish Norwich Plainhead Club; it may be, of course, that he thinks the decision in such matters of any one specialist club should be reciprocated by all other specialist clubs. EDITOR.]

SIR,—Having followed this case with interest since its commencement, I am surprised that, with the exception of the East of Scotland fanciers interviewed by your representative, no one has criticised Mr. McQuiston's statement as made to your representative, and published in your issue of July 10th. Personally, I should be sorry to think that he or any other man was suffering an injustice. Unfortunately, however, his efforts to prove himself innocent seem singularly unconvincing. Apart from the fact that it was five months after Bathgate show before he took any steps at all, it does seem an extraordinary thing for a man to say he is "too busy" to attempt to clear his name. Surely to uphold his character he would find time. But to revert to his published statements. On page 642 of the above-mentioned issue, it appears that he wrote the National B.B. and M. Club that his winning Bullie had knocked out a few flight feathers, and consequently could not be shown at Bathgate. On the same page he tells your reporter that his winning Bullie and two other birds returned from the Scottish National Show "queer," and that all of them subsequently died. Again, on the next page (643) he says he would have sold all his birds, "but friends who believed in him, and that it would all come right in the end, persuaded him otherwise." A few lines further down he says he had no friends to advise him what steps to take to clear his name. How does he reconcile these conflicting statements? Then again, how does he explain his statement that Gemmell was second with a Bullie at Ayr show when, as a matter of fact, no one of that name showed in the Cage Bird Section at all? Lastly, is it the case (as has been freely stated in some quarters) that the "elusive" Gemmell is a relation of his own? I trust Mr. McQuiston will find time to answer this, for I have no doubt that if he can do so satisfactorily it will considerably strengthen his defence.

SUMMING UP.

SIR,—Kindly allow me a little space for reply to a few words given by "Loch Doon" in your last week's issue. I am not an orator, nor friend nor foe to any man, but I am interested in CAGE BIRDS. The Bullfinch which was disqualified at Dalmellington on January 30th, was "shelved" for the same cause the Saturday previous, at a local show, and was exhibited under a different name. When the exhibitor was challenged, he gave in to it, and said he had put it there to test Mr. McQuiston's skill. But if "Loch Doon" wants to know anything there were several British birds at Dalmellington show, and winners at that, borrowed (also cages) and kept for a few weeks after it, and bought by a certain exhibitor, which I can prove to be correct. To my idea, borrowing is just as bad as faking, so I think "Loch Doon" should think over this, as it is easy to cry "Hullo" when we are out of the wood. There is one thing I can say: when a time like this comes it tests our friends and foes, and I know for a certainty Mr. McQuiston has shown his generosity to many, and I think the least they can do is to show gratitude. The great Battle of Bannockburn, which all Scotchmen are proud of, or should be, would never have been won by Robert Bruce if his followers and soldiers had done as Mr. McQuiston's friends have acted. So let us also think of ourselves in such a trial as the accused gentleman. Trusting this will stir the thoughts of all the readers of your very interesting paper, I will close.

HOW TO BREED, MANAGE AND EXHIBIT

By C. A. HOUSE.

The young fancier is told all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder, and as an exhibitor on the Show Bench. This work, which has been written in a plain, practical manner, contains much of untold value to lovers of the Norwich Canary.

The chapters on "Forming A Stud" and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book many times over.

The L. and P.O.S. and the "Weaker" Society.

SIR, It is marvellous how Mr. Tringham is gifted with second sight, for not only does he pretend to know my identity, but that my subscription is not paid. After all, he must admit that whatever my name is, it does not alter facts, and I defy him and his colleagues to prove that I have acted in any way detrimental to the interests of the L. and P.O.S. My object, as I have before stated, lay solely in their interests. My contention is that without a scheme has the approval of the general body of the members it cannot turn out an absolute success, and as the L. and P.O.S. members are drawn from the provinces as well as London, I fail to see how the consent and approval was obtained. If Mr. Tringham hits on the right nail, and I have an invitation to attend the next committee, I shall be pleased to support my contention, provided of course the date is convenient; and by this invitation I shall know that I am recognised as a member of the L. and P.O.S. Apart from the question of subscription, an individual is a member of that society till he tenders his resignation in writing, no matter if he owes five years' subs. If not, why are these names included in this year's list of members? There is one more thing I should like to point out to fellow-members before I go to this committee meeting: that is that the Hon. Secretary of the L. and P.O.S. is also Chairman of the Committee of the D. and P.C.B.S., the Assistant Secretary of the L. and P.O.S. is the Secretary of the "Weaker" Society, and I believe the Chairman of the L. and P.O.S. is a member, and also some members of the Committee. Under these circumstances may I expect satisfaction on behalf of those members, to whom this proposed amalgamation is repugnant?

How to Cure Hens that Break or Eat Eggs.

SIR,—Having read your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, for a long period I have just had an experience which I would like to show my brother fanciers. I have an ordinary Quaker oats' box cut into half, which just fits on the nest pan. I have cut a hole in the bottom to prevent the hen touching the eggs at all. She is a lovely yellow, and every egg she has laid she has either laid it in the bottom of the cage or else she has eaten half of it in the nest. I have tried almost all sorts of dodges to save her eggs, and have failed up to using this method. Now she is compelled to lay in the box, and so I have saved them that way. I shut her up each night I think she is going to lay again, and this is the only way I can save them.

MRS. A. MARTIN.

Prize-money at Dulwich O.S. Annual Show.

SIR,—Whatever motive inspired the unwarranted attack of your correspondent in last week's issue signing himself J. Halliday, I think he cannot congratulate himself on having done a noble deed in assailing a body of fanciers and gentlemen who for energy, enthusiasm, determination, and perseverance it would be hard to equal. If he cannot define between true grit and bluff and bounce it would be better if he had fostered these opinions in silence. Some allowance might have been made if the Dulwich O.S. were indebted to J. Halliday, but we fail to find his name in our list of exhibitors, or that by his influence he helped our venture in any way. His object, therefore, could not have been for "that advancement of the Fancy" for which he craves. If I judge the Fancy correctly, from experience, I should say that far from thanking correspondents who make these attacks—or gloating over a society's misfortune—they would rather offer the helping hand of friendship and sympathy when, through unforeseen circumstances, they suffer financially. Allow me, for Mr. Halliday's information, to point out that the D.O.S. has amongst its members some of the most respected and well known exhibitors in the kingdom, whose integrity is beyond dispute, and who could never be guilty of malpractice, as this Mr. Halliday suggests, and the committee of this society is composed of gentlemen who are not paid servants or interested in any trade connected with the Fancy, but work for the pure love of their hobby. It would prove interesting reading if J. Halliday would give a lesson on how to make a show a financial success. I am sure any show committee would be willing to learn. Last year the D.O.S. did all they could, under the circumstances; they ran the show for no personal gain, but for the hobby of it, and at a heavy cost to themselves. They obtained a magnificent list of special prizes that received unanimous praise from the winners; also subscribed to the show fund, guaranteed prize money, and paid out in full even where there were only four or five in a class, thinking the deficit could be made up by the gate, which was unfortunately affected by the inclement weather (the unforeseen occurrence). They paid the rent of the hall, a heavy printer's bill, and other items, preferring to allow about a dozen exhibitors (whom they thought would not mind waiting a while, especially those who had won special prizes) to stand over, so that the tradesmen's accounts could be paid. To those whom we kept waiting we tender our heartfelt thanks for their kindness, and also to the three exhibitors in the open classes who are now waiting. From over 150 exhibitors we have received not more than two complaints, but scores of congratulatory letters on the way they received their birds back, and the quick payment of prizes. With a deficit of £30 to face, the officials banded themselves together with a determination to fulfil their promise. No thought of disbanding the society or levying the outside members entered their heads; but by generosity that has always characterised their actions, they have almost succeeded in carrying out an intention from which they have never wavered. Is this malpractice or bluff and bounce? Our members will not thank Mr. H. for his interference in that which does not concern him in the least for what is due is chiefly to the officials of the society who require no assistance, pecuniary or otherwise, from this gentleman. In spite of the deficit on our last show, our second venture will be on a large scale; every class will be guaranteed, and the usual special prizes that Dulwich is noted for will be on view, and if only out of sympathy for our last loss exhibitors generally, we feel sure, will support us. I would remind Mr. Halliday that we have never cried "all prize money paid," and, further, warn him to be more careful in making wild statements against a society that he will, perhaps, find out to his cost, is a more powerful organisation than he probably imagines.

G. F. WOOLHOUSE,
Chairman of Committee.

SIR,—We beg to inform Mr. C. Dukes that the special he claims for his member, Mr. Langley, was won by Mr. Cory, of Birkenhead, a "Royal Doulton vase," for second best bird in novice classes. It is apparently an error that the card should have been on Mr. Langley's cage, which we regret. The committee also regret if Mr. Langley's communication was not acknowledged, as they were under the impression that it was. We consider Mr. Langley a sportsman, and as Mr. Dukes' prize money was paid promptly, we hope for their future support.

Two Crests aud a Cup at Far-away Cape Town.

SIR,—I am pleased to notice in your highly-esteemed bird journal of June 26th, that some one from here (Cape Town) has written you re the Young Crest Classes at the late Cape Town show. I myself was not an exhibitor at the show, but a spectator, and I will at once say I never saw such a miscarriage of judgment before. Tho Grizzle Crest that was awarded the cup was entered as a young bird (as stated in "Subscriber's" letter), and sworn to by the exhibitor, who brought a letter supposed to be written by some one who was supposed to have seen the bird grow up in exhibitor's bird room; but he did not bring the witness himself. Now, Mr. Editor, I have been breeding Canaries for over 40 years, have sold hundreds and imported hundreds, and flatter myself I can tell an old bird from a young one of four or five months, the supposed age of this Grizzle Crest. I believe any one can tell if a bird is old or young by blowing it up at the vent. The judge said he did not examine it at the vent, and to account for it having a double set of wing feathers, said the owner told him it moulted its wing feathers late. I was not aware a young bird moulted its flight feathers the first year. Now, Sir, for my candid opinion: In the first place it looked to me like an imported bird, from some smoky English town, and the owner had tried to wash it, and being a novice at the game, made a mess of it, for the same exhibitor had other birds (Colonial bred) looking quite spick and span. Why this difference in appearance? Secondly, the other Crest mentioned by "Subscriber" was a genuine young Colonial bred Crest, and a gem of a bird, fairly outclassing the other Grizzle Crest, even allowing that it had been a Colonial bred bird. Lastly, I say such happenings do not tend to the furtherance of the Fancy. A proof of this can be seen by the absence of exhibitors at a subsequent show. There was the same classification at this last show. Where were the exhibitors?

DOUBLE CREST.

SIR,—I read the letter re "Two Crests and a Cup," published in your issue of June 26th, with utter disgust, and feel sure that every Canary fancier of repute in Cape Town will treat it with contempt, as there is no doubt that such a letter as this was written by one of those persons who have done their utmost this year to wreck the Cape Town Cage Bird Society by boycotting same, etc., and who now wish to injure the judge, and also my reputation as a breeder and fancier, or may be this person is jealous of my success. Being the owner of this Crested Norwich bird, I feel it my duty to reply in honour to our judge, Mr. Norman L. Morton, who is an authority on cage birds, and, moreover, the most able and competent judge we have had for the past 12 years in South Africa on Canaries. In this matter a protest was entered, and both birds were before the full committee, and they were most unanimous in their decision in my favour. The bird in question was bred by me last season from imported stock, and had a lovely crest, good flights, and perfect tail; but was never in good health, which undoubtedly made it mopey, and certainly went again its appearance. But, to my idea, it scored easily on points. As to the writer saying the bird had scaley feet, and was shown without a tail, I shall esteem it a favour if he will call at my office and be presented with a pair of spectacles before he patronises another show. Unfortunately, this bird died a few days ago, otherwise I would have sent it with pleasure to England for you to comment on.

L. C. CARRICK.

SIR,—Being the aggrieved party, I wish to substantiate a "Nine Year's Subscriber's" version of the matter as being perfectly true. The bird in question, which was awarded the "Lawrence Cup," was shown in a very poor and sick condition, and its tail was missing. I at once noticed that the bird in question was an old bird, and furthermore, in my opinion, not Colonial bred, it having every appearance of being an imported bird, for it showed signs of the smoky colour which one finds on all imported birds, apparently caused by the smoke of the funnels of the ship, or coal dust. This bird had been washed, but whoever washed it was a novice at the sport, for the bird looked filthy. I pointed this matter out to the judge, who informed me that the bird was entered in the young class, and that he was only there to judge. I eventually lodged a complaint on the grounds that the bird in question was an old bird and not a young bird. A committee meeting was called to decide the matter, and I was requested to attend, and to bring my proof. Unfortunately, my only proof was my own experience. I might mention that the owner of the bird brought no witnesses to prove that he bred it, with the exception of letters, which, of course, could not be cross-questioned by anyone. I called on a Mr. James Templer, an old member of the society, with about 40 years' experience, and whom I consider one of the best judges in Africa. He kindly consented to attend the meeting and examine the birds, and to give his decision to the best of his ability. Both myself and the committee were willing to accept the decision of Mr. Templer before he commenced to examine the birds, there being no other proof. I may further mention that Mr. Templer was an uninterested party, he not having shown any birds in the show referred to. The birds were examined by Mr. Templer, who explained, I believe, the difference between a young bird and an adult to the committee, and his decision was that the bird was undoubtedly over and above the age limit, to wit, 12 months, and an old bird. On the face of the decision of Mr. Templer the committee came to the conclusion that the bird in question was a young bird and Colonial bred, and thus awarded the cup.

W. P. STEVENS.

The Cuckoo in Confinement.

SIR,—In reference to Mr. Shaddock's story of a tame Cuckoo, I wish to mention that I have tried to keep one for twelve months and have failed. The bird was successfully reared, and continued in good health till about the period at which other birds of its kind are in the habit of leaving the country, when it began to mope during the day. Towards night it became restless, flying up and down the cage, not being able to escape. It soon recovered its spirits, and was alive and in good health in December, 1907, but died in the midst of the winter. I believe the English winter to be fatal to the Cuckoo. The why and the wherefore are yet to be learned. I may mention that I reared mine on Hyde's newest food, earth worms, ant's eggs, dried flies, mealworms, raw meat, raw suet, and caterpillars of the peacock butterfly. Should be very glad to hear from Mr. Shaddock again.

J. KERSHAW.

SIR,—A few words of encouragement to our friend, Mr. J. Shaddock, who from his remarks in your last issue is having a very interesting time. I know from experience what amount of pleasure is derived from the company of a young Cuckoo. Four years ago I had a similar experience with one that we reared from the nest. At three months old he was a grand specimen, and more like a Parrot in his manners. He was a great favourite, too, at five months. He developed what I called a mania for night flying. He would fly about the cage, which was a large one, nearly the whole of the night, and so injured his plumage that he looked a perfect wreck at times. Then I had to wash him and frequently had to improve the feathers. But I was unable to get him into condition because of the continued night-flying. (He never did it during the day time.) After the pegging, which consisted of egg food, I gave him chopped caterpillars and mealworms. He declined much soft food, and preferred a live caterpillar or a cockroach. The latter he was very fond of and would chase round his cage. Chopped egg, a little flesh meat and Lark food he also had. He lived until the following April, we having kept him nine months. I was sorry to lose him, as he was a great pet, and our endeavours were in vain.

BARKER CLEGG.

SIR,—I should like to reply to Mr. Shaddock as to keeping Cuckoos, and to say it is a mistake to think they cannot be kept longer than twelve months. I am a British bird fancier, and have kept nearly all kinds, including Cuckoos. The first was when living at Westbury-on-Trim. I took one then from a Hedge Sparrow's nest, and kept it two years, after which I parted with it to a gentleman who wanted it to put in his aviary. He kept it for six months, when it was killed by Wood Pigeons. The second I kept nearly two years. I also reared that from a nest of Hedge Sparrows. I used to allow it its liberty, and it would feed out of the same dish as my dog and cat, and generally agreed well. It was fed from all sorts of scraps from the table, but was most fond of meat. It always went to roost on the kitchen fender, but one night in the winter, when bitterly cold, by some means it got to the bay window, and it was found dead, evidently from intense cold, as the window was all frosted over. It was great friends with my dog and cat, but was shy of strangers. Perhaps some fanciers may think this sounds a bit like a Yankee yarn, but many of my friends would bear me out in this experience of mine. I should advise Mr. Shaddock to keep his bird in a warm room in the winter. I trust this may be of some interest to Mr. Shaddock and any other Cuckoo fanciers who read your interesting paper.

The Blackcap's Song.

Of all our summer musicians the Blackcap is one of the best. Its song has a flute-like mellowness, a wild sweetness, and a continuance which bring it into the ranks of the first half-dozen of our field songsters. It has neither the fulness, nor the force, nor the variety of song that the Nightingale has, but equals the master songster in purity.

The Breeding & Management of the Norwich Canary.

By E. COWLING.

A Lecture delivered before the Cramlington and District C.B.S.

What to do During Incubation.

We will now presume that your hens have got safely over the laying. I always take out the eggs as they are laid, substituting dummies for each as nest-eggs.

In lifting the egg from the nest, take hold of it by the two ends between your finger and thumb. Remember they are very "thin skinned," therefore easily punctured, and the least crack in the shell renders it useless. What might have been a prize-winner in that case is gone for ever.

To store the eggs while the hen is laying her clutch you must make a box full of little compartments, each being numbered to tally with the number on your breeding cage; there will then be no danger of your eggs getting mixed, or of your not being able to tell from which pair your young ones have come. Put your hen to sit on the evening of the day she lays her third egg. The eggs will then hatch pretty much together. The fourth egg never having been cold will come out just as soon as the other three.

I always take my cock bird away while the hen is sitting, as some vigorous birds have a tendency to try and tread the hen in the nest. The consequence in that case is, the hen rushes out of the nest, and more than likely a couple of eggs go with her. So for safety I put the wire between him and his "missus" while she is sitting.

At this time I give her plain Canary seed only, until the evening of the twelfth day, when I supply her with some egg-food. Also about the tenth and eleventh day, should there be a cold easterly wind prevailing, a very good plan is to sprinkle the nest and eggs with a few drops of lukewarm water; not cold, remember; nor should you drench the nest, but just a sprinkle. There is no necessity to drive the hen off to do so, but you can entice her to leave the nest easily enough by putting a little bit of green food before her. She will then, when she goes on again, create a moisture, which will soften the shells, and consequently help the young to successfully break from their prisons.

How to Feed After Hatching.

From the time the young leave the shell until they are able to do for themselves, the old birds must be supplied with egg-food, green-food, and a plentiful supply of seed. We will take egg-food first, which must be made fresh every day, and given in fresh supplies to the old ones (at least twice a day, three times if possible).

To make your egg-food, take an egg, boil it for fifteen minutes (else there is a possibility of its being tough and stringy, and a quarter of an hour will make it so that it will crumble into a powder). Of course I am referring now only to the yolk, which should alone be given for the first few days. After this you may give the white as well. There must be mixed with the egg either stale bread crumbs or biscuits. I don't think it matters much which it is. I have used both with equal success. For instance, one of my hens, which was very successful on the show-bench, winning eight firsts and three seconds (only times shown), was reared on egg and arrowroot biscuit—two biscuits to one egg—whilst on the other hand, the eye-marked yellow, which has been so successful this season (winning five firsts, two seconds, and a third, only times out), was reared on egg and bread crumbs. So I don't think it matters much which we use; give them whicever the hens will feed best on.

Now a word on green-food, for it is very important that it should be given to them—either lettuce, dandelion, or watercress. Some swear by one, and some by the other. I swear by lettuce. Watercress I have never used, and I have had far better results from lettuce than from dandelion. Chickweed, too, is very good, especially when full of seed. But I should certainly advise the use of lettuce, and I have bred Canaries now for at least seventeen years.

It is very important that green-food, like all other food, should be given fresh and clean. I like to pull it from the plant, and give it straight to the birds. I manage thus:—For the early part of the breeding season I raise it in a frame, and in heat it grows "like anything." Anyone with a back-yard or a bit of waste ground, where the sun strikes on at some time in the day, could soon fit up a bit of a frame. Get a window-sash for a light, and there you are—always with a plentiful supply to go to, fresh and clean, which is far better than one can get in shops.

As regards seeds, give a good supply of hemp. Some fanciers crush it; I give it whole. But remember they must have it in abundance. German rape, too, is good, and some hens feed well on this, and of course the Canary seed must be left on.

As the Young Get Older.

After the young are a few days old, you must introduce the cock bird, when he will, if he is a good father, take to feeding the young ones. But it is better to watch him a little, and see that he does not molest them, unless you, of course, know beforehand that he is trustworthy.

The quickest and best way to watch your birds for the purpose of finding out if they are feeding and attending to their young in a satisfactory manner, is to do so outside your room, if it can be managed, through the crack in the door, or you can make a peep-hole somewhere, so that you can get a view of the cages, without the birds knowing you are there. This is very necessary when introducing a young cock bird, but once you see him start to feed them, depend upon it the chances that the brood will be successfully reared are increased a thousand-fold. A good feeding cock bird to a fancier that has valuable stock is worth his weight in gold.

Now, while it is very important that your birds while feeding young should be interfered with as little as possible, it is policy to keep your eye on the nest and its contents, to make sure that all is going well, for there is a possibility of a young bird dying in the nest, through no neglect of the hen in the way of feeding. If this dead one is not removed it will soon create a state of affairs that will lead the hen to forsake the nest, and instead of one dead you will have a nest full of dead ones; whereas if it had been removed in time the others would have gone on alright.

Another important item is to cast your eye along the bottom of the cage to see there is no young one lying there, as sometimes they are apt to get pulled out when the hen leaves the nest. If you see it in time (in fact, if you see it at all) it is wise to put it back. For, sometimes, although to all appearances it is dead, it is not so, and with heat will recover.

Plucking and Its Cure.

When the young are about to leave the nest, and just after they have left it, some old birds have a tendency to pluck them, and some cock birds are as bad as the hens, and even worse. Even the best feeders will do it. When such is the case (and it is very annoying as well as very detrimental to the growth of the youngsters), and if we are breeding a bird where size is of the greatest importance, such as the Norwich, it is a serious matter, for, bear in mind, it is during the first six weeks of the bird's life that he is made or marred, and we cannot afford to let anything, however insignificant it may appear, come in the way if we can possibly avoid it. And not only is plucking detrimental to the growth of young birds, but they will, if you intend colour feeding them, come patchy in their first moult, and so spoil their chances as exhibition birds for the first year.

The plucking business is hard to stop. The plan I adopt is to transfer the young to a nursery cage, which I hang in front of the breeding cage; the old ones then feed them through the wires. But I hang it so that the young ones will have to stretch up a bit to be fed, so that when not being fed the old ones cannot get at them. By doing this you will stop their little game to a great extent at least.

ORNITHOLOGICAL ODDMENTS.

By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S.

Bracing Bulbuls.

Apropos of the subject of keeping Bulbuls braced, with which I concluded my last notes, it may be of interest to readers of CAGE BIRDS to describe the way in which these birds are braced in India, as the method is different from what we use over here. The bird's body is encircled between wings and thighs by a simple band of soft string, loose enough to be easily pulled round from front to back, but not enough to slip over the hips; to this is attached a cord terminating in a bead. Round this is looped another cord, which is fastened to the perch; the bead keeps the bird's end of the cord taut, and the loop acts as a swivel. Thus the braced bird has a good length of cord to play with, and yet this cannot get tangled up. The perch is T-shaped, and made of iron, with which the bird sits, padded by having cloth wound round it. It may either be stuck in the ground or into a crack in a wall, the Bulbul being a bird which has sense enough, if it falls off the perch and hangs by the cord, to catch the latter with its feet, and, aided by this purchase, to fly up and regain the perch.

Bulbul's brace, cords and perch.

A Popular Pet.

I always used to wonder, however, why Bulbuls pegged out on the ground did not fall a prey to kites or cats; but in such cases their owners were always close by. Often one would see a youthful Bulbul fancier dispensing with bead, second looped cord, and perch, and simply having the end of his bird's brace-cord tied to his small dusky finger, while his pet gaily skipped about on his bare shoulders. This shows how tame and steady these braced birds get, and indeed they are usually in perfect condition. The way they are made to fight is by letting the intended combatants get hungry, and then giving one some food just out of reach of the other's cord. Bulbuls are greedy birds, and when the disappointed bird's cord is slacked the row begins!

The procedure does not sound very humane, but the birds do not seem to be damaged, and are usually released at the end of the Bulbul-fighting season, for the sport is not carried on all the year round. Some are sold in the Bazaar, and I have bought such birds and cut the brace off them myself; that is how I know exactly how it is put on. Weavers are the only other Indian birds I have seen braced, and perhaps the method would not suit the figure of our Britishers; but I should think such a bird as a Shrike, for instance, would be much better braced as I have described for a Bulbul, than kept caged.

A Namesake of the Nightingale.

There is a very old-standing confusion between the birds nowadays always called Bulbuls both by natives and Europeans, and the true Nightingales, which are known as Bulbuls in Persian and Arabic. The birds to which the name now belongs are, as I have tried to show by the rough sketch appended, quite unlike Nightingales in build, being short on the legs, and have a tendency to a crest, which is well marked in most species. In habits they are not in the least like Nightingales, they are lively and rather sociable, cheerful-voiced, but not highly musical as a rule, and great fruit-eaters, though they also feed much on insects. The species sketched is a brown bird with a yellow patch under the tail, and it invades the haunts of the true Nightingale, being found in Western Asia and some of the islands of the Greek Archipelago. It so happens that it is really a fine songster, rivalling the Nightingale in many of its notes, and this is probably how the confusion began; and then, as all Bulbuls have a strong family likeness, the name of one kind would easily get transferred to others.

The Palestine Bulbul.

The Persian Nightingale.

The true Nightingale of the East is distinguished by the Indian natives as Bulbul bosta; it closely resembles our Nightingales, and still more the large Russian Nightingale or Sprosser, but has a longer tail than either of these birds. I did not know there were any of this species in England till a few days ago, when I was shown two which had been imported as private pets a few months back. They are expensive birds even in India, and the fact that they are bought and kept, when so fine a songster as the Shama—a much easier bird to keep—is available, shows that the Indian fancier knows how to value a good bird when he gets it. These Persian birds, like the Sprosser, are louder singers than the British Nightingale, and they seem to bear captivity better, following what seems to be the usual rule, that the further west you go, the worse the birds bear captivity, at least in this hemisphere, for the birds of America are more easily kept than ours again.

The Military Macaw.

I find there is a good deal of confusion abroad among the bird trade about this species; most people—red being our British uniform—naturally think the Military Macaw must be a red species, and so imagine it is one of the common red Macaws. This is, however, not the case; the true Military Macaw (Ara militaris) is a green bird, and would be better known as the great green Macaw, none of the other large Macaws being green, though there are several small green species of Macaws not bigger than a grey Parrot.

No doubt the big green bird was called "militaris" by some foreign scientist whose national uniform was green, and translating this title into literal English is just the typical result of the silliness of slavishly following scientists instead of thinking for one's self. The name "Military Macaw" ought, I think, to be dropped altogether, for it is not even applicable to the red birds, since there are two red species, so that more confusion would be caused. Of these, one is the Red and Blue, and the other the Red and Yellow; the latter would best be called the Tricolour, for it has just as much blue as the other, the yellow, which forms a patch on the wing, occupying the place of a green patch in the Red and Blue, which is also bigger, darker red, and has the face streaked with lines of feathers. Both of these are well known, but the big green bird abovementioned is scarce; I do not remember ever having seen one for sale, though I have heard of one or two in the trade lately, and the Zoo have a specimen also.

Under the White Rose.

THE new cage-bird society formed at Bankfoot is making good progress. On Tuesday evening, July 27th, the inaugural meeting was held, there being a very good attendance, a total number of 44 members being enrolled. Three shows have been arranged, and a cup is to be offered for competition; this is to be held by the winner until the following show. A curious item is that not one of the members is a champion exhibitor; therefore, as the novice is the backbone of the Fancy, this society has a very good backbone.

OPEN Norwich Plainhead Club and the old original "Yorkshire Canary Club" each held a committee meeting on Saturday evening last, the business of both being identical, i.e., the arranging of competitions and the allotment of patronage. The Norwich men had first call, and their secretary, Mr. O. Mitchell, had everything in apple pie order, their business being got through in quick time. Next the Yorkshire chaps had a go. And my word! application had come in from north, south, east, and west, and what with dates clashing and judges clashing, the business took quite two hours to get through. Really the Y.C.C. could have done with half-a-dozen competitions to satisfy all the societies that they got applications from. However, all was at last gone through, and the Y.C.C. are very sorry to have to disappoint so many societies; but in consequence of the rules which state, firstly, "that one judge shall not officiate at more than one show in each competition," and secondly, that a certain number shall be given inside and ditto to outside—makes things very awkward to fix up, but they did their level best.

EACH of these specialist clubs has fixed up some splendid prizes and competitions, and it behoves all fanciers to join and assist the officials in their endeavours to forward the interests of their respective varieties.

WHEN canvassing for members of the specialist clubs the principal cry is, "Nay, I've nowt much to put dahn, it's no use me joining, it'll nobbut be brass thrown away." Then explanations of indirect advantages that the Fancy in general reap from the work of these clubs has to follow, viz., the upholding of the prices paid for birds. Where would the big prices be if the club's provided no competitions? Without a doubt they would soon be down to half the price obtainable to-day for either breeding or show birds. The more competitors and competitions there are, the better it will be for the fanciers all round.

Colour-Feeding Made Easy

BY

FOX'S

A COMBINATION OF OUR RENOWNED "EGG & BISCUIT" WITH THE FINEST RED TASTELESS PEPPER IT IS POSSIBLE TO OBTAIN.

Advantages:—

READY FOR IMMEDIATE USE.

No mixing of the pepper with oil, or sugar, or egg and biscuit. Consequently no worry for the fancier. All he has to do is to mix our "Egg, Biscuit, and Colour Food" with a few drops of water, and give it to the birds. THE FOOD DOES THE REST. Canaries (and other kinds of birds) will come out with that lovely rich, bright, orange-red colour, so essential to success.

A PERFECT FOOD.

Our "Egg, Biscuit, and Colour Food" is a perfect food. It contains all the nutrient properties of home-made egg food, with the advantage of having them in an easily assimilable form. Birds may have this food without affecting their livers, or causing them to go "soft."

IT IS CHEAP.

The complaint of the average fancier is: "Colour feeding is very expensive." Our "Egg, Biscuit and Colour Food" MAKES COLOUR-FEEDING CHEAP. A one-pound tin costs but one shilling, and there is no waste, remember, and no fear of its turning sour and so endangering the lives of the birds.

Ask your corn or seed merchant for a tin of

Fox's "Egg, Biscuit & Colour Food."

Can be obtained from all leading traders in the United Kingdom at 6d. and 1s. per tin; post paid 9d. and 1s. 4d. There is a saving in the larger size.

Wild Bird Life.

The Approaching Moult.

We are just entering the month that sees many changes in the wild bird life of the country. Many species have finished their nesting duties, some of them having already shed a few feathers, and will soon be in a heavy moult. The commencement of this trying period in the life of a bird is influenced much by the state of the weather. A sudden change to cool, wet days after a long time of heat and sunshine, will at once cause a shedding of the old worn-out plumage, the growth of the new being aided considerably by moisture. Old birds renew the whole of the feathers, young ones growing new body feathers only, and retaining the flights and tail until the following autumn. Wild birds feel more or less the strain upon the system, and like all sick wild creatures, hide themselves in the depths of the woods or in lonely desolate places where they are fairly free from disturbance. No doubt at this time they feel, in consequence of the loss of certain feathers, somewhat bereft of their powers, and therefore at a disadvantage. Generally speaking, birds shed their quill feathers in pairs, so that although their powers of flight must be weakened, they are still evenly balanced, and able to progress in the usual manner; but this regularity of the removal of the old plumage can be noticed in the remainder of the plumage. For instance, the breast feathers will be reproduced upon each side simultaneously. In wild birds we have many variations from the foregoing. In Ducks and Geese the whole of the flight feathers are discarded at once, so that these birds are left in a crippled condition, and are obliged to seek the shelter of the reeds and flags and tall herbage so common in their haunts. But, as a further protection, they lose the sheen and brightness of colouring, which make them so conspicuous during the breeding season. They are now as dowdy in plumage as their partners. Many of our Warblers and summer visitors have an additional moult which is only partial as the quills and tail feathers are not renewed. One of the most interesting cases of additional moult is that of the Ptarmigan, which puts on a grey suit directly after the breeding season, and later, when chill autumn comes, gradually changes it to one of snowy whiteness, again changing it in the following spring. In all these variations the quills and tail feathers are not affected.

The Last of the Ravens.

This interesting bird is now having a most harrassing time of it. The so-called naturalist is eager to secure his skin, and the egg collector is braving everything to add one more clutch of eggs to his already full cabinet. All this is done in spite of the Wild Birds Protection Act. The value of the skin and eggs is more than the amount of the fine that is generally imposed. More stringent measures are necessary if our rarer birds are to be saved.

Hawking with Merlins.

Merlins are the smallest but not the least interesting of our Hawks. They prey generally upon the smaller birds, such as Larks, Meadows Pipits, Wheatears, Snipe, etc., although occasionally they will master much larger game. A few trained birds are still used in the ancient sport of falconry, and are mostly flown at Larks in large open places, such as Salisbury plain. These birds afford good sport as they are strong and swift upon the wing, and the Merlins do not always come off successfully.

Concerning Swallows & Martins.

It is said that Swallows and Martins were so rare last year, that many Irish villages were not visited by the birds, although they have done so since the inhabitants could remember. These birds are the least shy and suspicious of all our migrants, and take no heed of an observer watching them while feeding the young. This is quite contrary to the practice of most of our wild birds, many of which will hop round with food in beak for quite a long time before visiting the nest, if they think they are observed.

A Wild Bird Diet.

The inhabitants of St. Kilda live upon sea birds during about nine months of the year. Of the vast number of birds frequenting these romantic rocks the Fulmar forms the principal food. During August the St. Kildans begin to collect the young birds from the cliffs; these are taken to the village, where the women and children pluck, clean, salt and pack them away for future use. It is estimated that between 300 and 400 birds are consumed by every inhabitant. During the early summer month the eggs of sea birds are collected and used for food.

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insistedupon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases this depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 12 words, 4d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

SAMUEL YOUNG & SON,

Practical Net and Trap Manufacturers, Bird Catchers, CREWKERNE, SOMERSET.

Net Traps.

Important Notice.—To those catchers who require a cheaper class of clap net or spring net trap. Being actual manufacturers, and not dealers, we are in a position to supply any particular style, size, quality, and specification, at a cost of 10 per cent. less than can be obtained elsewhere. Fullest enquiries invited.—Young and Son.

REMEMBER THIS.

When you buy catching appliances from me you get things that are of real service to you. For years past I have publicly invited anyone to have appliances on approval from me, test them side by side with others costing more money from other dealers, and if mine were not better value at less prices, to smash them up and I would refund their money in full. Could I afford to make this astounding offer unless I knew full well that it is impossible to get better articles than I sell? Clap nets, made from genuine ½in. mesh thread netting, 3 yards long, 5½ft. deep, 4ft. fly, 4/- pair; ditto 4 yards, 5/-; ditto 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-, 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-, 10 yards, 11/- per pair. All clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, are fitted complete with stave poles, pegs, and hemp lines, ready for immediate use. Hundreds of other sizes stocked. Batfolding Sparrow nets, fitted on 15ft. bamboo poles, 5/6; ditto on 17ft. poles, 6/-; ditto on 19ft. poles, 6/6; Lark nets, 1¼in. mesh, 15 yards by 10ft., 12/-; 18 yards, 15/-; 20 yards, 17/-; 25 yards, 21/-; 30 yards, 24/-; all geared and lined ready for use. Self-acting spring net traps, 24in. long 18in. wide, 1/-; ditto, 18in. long, 9d. each. These net traps are entirely different to any others on the market, are by far the largest and can be baited for Hard and Softbills at same time. The only net traps used by Mr. Jeffreys, who is probably largest Nightingale catcher in England. Single trap cages 6d. each; double ditto 1/- each; treble ditto 1/3 each, all with separate compartment for call bird. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages (Registered Number 23927), 1/6 each. These traps are guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught. Round topped call cages, all wire tops, 3d. each, 2/6 dozen; square topped ditto, all wire tops and every wire soldered, 4d. each, 3/- dozen. Real Japanese birdlime, guaranteed absolutely the strongest lime made, hold in all weathers, ½lb. 6d., ¼lb. 10d., 1lb. 1/6; sample, 3d., all post free. Kindly note: This is the genuine Japanese lime, not merely name copied from others, and I give written guarantee that it will hold any Hawk or Rook that flies, and at any time of year. Loose netting, made from genuine 60 S thread, ½in. mesh, 7ft. deep, 3d. yard; 9ft. deep, 4d. yard; 12ft. deep, 5d. yard, post free. Lark netting, 1¼in. mash, 10ft. deep, 4d. yard post free. This netting is specially made for bird netting and must not be confused with the thick American cotton fishing netting often sold for bird netting for sake of extra profit. Every description of catching appliances in stock; send stamp for full printed list and hints on making bird nets; all nets sold by me are properly geared up so that they hang level and work true, not merely lines run through the netting, which allows wind to blow it all to one end. The men employed by me are not only practical net makers, but thoroughly experienced catchers as well, and so know exactly what is required for successful catching. Nothing is spared to make nets as durable as possible, and every pair guaranteed to wear 20 years. (Imitators please copy, as usual.) All sent on approval and money refunded in full if every satisfaction not given. See following unsolicited testimonials: "Cooperage House, Riverside, Goole. July 17th.—Sir,—I want another pair nets. I had a pair from you three years ago and they gave every satisfaction.—Yours, C. Chesney." "2, Hollingdrake Yard, Doncaster. July 19th.—Sir, —Please send following. I had two pairs nets from you before and was perfectly satisfied.—Yours, A. Clayton." "6, Jockey-street, Swansea. July 26th.—Sir,—Please send ¼lb. lime, same as last. I would not wish for better lime.—Yours, W. Rowe." "25, Cromwell-road, Rushden. July 27th.—Sir,—Please send following netting. A friend had some from you four years ago and it is as good as ever.—Yours, H. Kirby" "Ashover Rectory, nr. Chesterfield. July 31st. Sir,—Please send following. I have bought a good deal of birdlime and many birds from you, and always been satisfied.—Yours, F. Nodder." "24, Low Pleasance, Larkhall, July 31st. Sir,—Please send 1lb. lime. I have used yours since I started, and never yet lost a bird.—Yours, Geo. Alexander." "32, Wormgate, Boston. Sir,—Received nets safe and am well satisfied. You give good value for money.—Yours, J. Dring." "13, Church Walk, Kempston. Sir,—Netting to hand and it is best I ever bought.—Yours, W. Fearn." "Hill-street, Raunds. Sir,—I have had nets out and they give every satisfaction.—Yours, E. Haxley." "12, Bantling Old-row, Annfield Plain. Sir,—I have tried the birdlime and find it best I ever had or have seen.—Yours, B. McKenna." "Rufford-road, Crossens. Sir,—Please send ¼lb. lime. It is best I ever used, a certain catch every time. I only wish I had got it from you before instead of the rubbish I have used.—Yours, H. Jackson." "15, North-street, Exeter. Sir,—Clap nets I had from you are very satisfactory and work very well.—Yours, E. Bond." "Chancery-lane, Thrapston. Sir,—Please send another net trap. I set first one this morning and caught four birds.—Yours, A. Sutcliffe." "Clifton Cottage, Brownstown, Ireland. Sir,—I am delighted with clap nets. They are a very nice pair and work like the wind and are a pleasure to pull over.—Yours, F. Hales." I have thousands of similar letters to above, which prove to you who is the best man to supply catching appliances. I believe in giving everyone the utmost value at lowest prices, and serving them so well that not only will they buy from me again, but recommend their friends to do so also. Send stamp for full list and compare prices with others. See British bird column for other advert.

HARRY ALLEN.
I SOLD 6 LINNETS FOR £25

for quality singing during last Whitsuntide holidays, I also sold the Linnet that won 1st prize at the King's Head on Whit-Monday last, known as the English Derby; he has won over 20 1st prizes under seven different judges, and his young owner is very proud of him. I caught this Linnet myself, in the same field as the Champion Linnet of the world; there was also money deposited with the Editor for other nine birds, and the last bird was 12/6, and not one bird has been returned, and with all the money that has been deposited with the Editor of this paper for 12 months, not one single bird has been returned, which I claim as a record, and which clearly shows my good judgment and my honest dealing. Ladies and Gentlemen, I have the following for sale: Grand, large, fine, healthy cock Linnets, from the same place as the above, without a doubt they are the finest Linnets under the sun for quality singing and time singing; you should hear the voices they have for running and turning, they are like German Canaries. Now, to meet all purchasers, these Linnets are at working men's prices, they are only 1/-, while they last; all Linnet clubs order at once. Linnets from the same place as the Champion Linnet of the World, singing grand, with new cage, with my book of secrets, 2/6; a few extra picked birds, make sure winners, with new polished cage, and my book of secrets, and a packet of my special mixture, 3/6 the lot, they make the best-voiced bird ever heard. I have two grand house-moulted show Linnets, they are very large and steady, good colour and beautifully pencilled, can win, 15/- each; two grand house-moulted Goldfinches, lately moulted, one a Peathroat, they both have very good blazes, and will pick from your finger, in show condition, 16/6 each, singing hard. I have hundreds in stock, no waiting, post card sent before birds. The original book of secrets, which tells you how to train Linnets for contests, how to make them sing at one another with their wings down; how to moult them, the cause of the soft moult, and the only cure, the rules of Linnet clubs, the time they sing, how to save Goldfinches and Greypates from dying when wild-caught; this is the original Linnet book, and the best book published, price 9d. I only believe in honest dealing; all my birds are on seven days' approval; send your order with confidence to the largest British bird dealer in the world.—Harry Allen, The Original Linnet King, City Aviaries, 46, Beckett-st., Leeds.

AFTER YOU'VE READ

the many unsolicited testimonials I publish week after week, can you wonder at the enormous trade I do? I believe in serving all customers so well that not only will they send again, but recommend their friends to do so, and for that reason I not only guarantee the description of my birds to be accurate, but also send them on approval on receipt cash or deposit system (of this paper) at my own risk, and unless in every way satisfactory, birds have only to be returned and back comes the whole of your money without question or comment. These conditions I faithfully carry out in every instance, so no one need fear not getting what he wants from me. I have a splendid selection of genuine Worcestershire netted cock Goldfinches, in perfect health and condition at 1/6 each, three 4/-, six 7/-, twelve 12/-; specially selected large cocks to moult for show or muling, and guaranteed now in song, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, twelve 16/-; two-year-old cock Goldfinch, splendid call bird, 2/6; two-year-old cage-moulted cock Goldfinch, used regularly as call bird, 5/-; cock Goldfinch Mule, 1908 bird, pure Finch notes, 5/-; hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/6, twelve 7/-; grand lot cock brown Linnets, all with nut brown backs, in perfect health, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; specially picked, larger cocks, for show, muling or contest singing, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6, twelve 6/-; two-year-old cock Linnet, call bird, 2/-. Dealers please send stamp for trade price list of cages, sizes, and price will surprise and the workmanship will delight you. Thousands of testimonials from dealers throughout the country. See following letters: "29, Handel-street, Halifax. August 7th. Sir,—Please send young Lark. Send one like the one you sent ten years ago and it will do well. The old bird has died this winter. He was one of the best birds in this town.—Yours, B. Holmes." "Crossgates, Scotland. August 8th. Sir, —Received bird all safe and am highly pleased with same.—Yours, Geo. Hutton." "45, Verc-street, Cadoxton, Barry. August 7th. Sir,—Birds arrived quite safe. I am quite satisfied with them. They look fine birds and well worth the money.—D. Jones." "8, Kirkwhite-avenue, Long Eaton. August 10th. Sir,—Goldfinches arrived safe and in good condition. I am quite satisfied.—Yours, C. Kirkby." "10, Steps-road, Stenhousemuir. Sir,—Please send following. The Linnet I had last year is singing splendidly.—Yours, C. Godfrey." "27, Farie-street, Rutherglen. Sir,—Please send another Lark. I am exceedingly pleased with last. It is a perfect gem, and as you say, worth going a long journey to hear.—Yours, G. Dick." "235, Firs-lane, Leigh, Lancashire. Sir,—Received Linnet alright and it is a grand one. People round here say it looks strange that you can turn out better birds than they get from other dealers. I tell them to trade with you as they know that every bird I have had from you has been good.—Yours, J. Cowburn." Kindly note! I do not sell Irish lime-caught birds as Worcestershire-caught, but every bird I sell is warranted to have been properly netted in the County of Worcester, and none are sent out until thoroughly on hard seed. As the wording of my advertisements is being copied by others, I beg to state that I have no connection with any other person or persons in the trade, and that my only name and address is

6 MONTHS' APPROVAL

1909 NORWICH COCKS.—Singing, and will make champions; now to prove this I offer to give this approval with these birds—i.e., to refund money in full or exchange same for a cock on full song. Particulars free. This is New, Novel, and Genuine. Copyists Note. All other birds usual approval terms.

YORKSHIRES.—Cocks, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-. Pairs matched for Breeding, 9/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-. Hens, 2/6, 3/6, 4/6.

1909 COCKS, 3/9

It is easy to copy the price, but not so the quality. Hence, Beware of German Hens, stained and sold as young Norwich Cocks.

Better quality and colour, at 4/3, 4/6, and 5/6 upwards. Hens, 2/-, 2/6, and 3/6 each. Pairs, 5/6, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, all bearing my stamp as a guarantee of sex, and any bird proving not to be a cock bearing such stamp is exchanged, the lapse of time being no object. Hence, here is a security never offered by anyone else, and a safeguard against the now well-known "hen trick."

Travelling Cages, 3d. extra.

Samples of Hot and Tasteless colour foods, best extant, with pamphlet on Colour Feeding for Amateurs, one stamp; colour foods from 8d. per lb.

DAWLEY (Salop).

Held in connection with the Horticultural Show in the beautiful vicarage ground kindly lent hy the Rev. T. R. J. Fawkes. Cage birds turned up fairly well considering the time of year, and were nicely staged at the end of tbo tent on the tier system. Tbe special staging was supplied by that ardent local fancier, Mr. G. Campbell, and made a very pleasing display. The committee would be well advised another year to engage a specialist cage hird judge. This section of the show is, we may say, very strong in tbe district, and we feel sure this would conduce to a better entry. Mr. Urban Callear, with a willing band of stewards, bad charge of our section, and left no stone unturned in order to add to the comfort of exhibits and exhibitors. Mr. Proud judged. OPEN NOR. BORDER CITY (Carlisle) O.S.

The Young Canary and British and Foreign Bird Show took place at headquarters, James-st., on August Bank Holiday. The entry was well up in numbers, altbougb in tbe Canary section many members had to withhold birds owing to tbeir being well on in the moult. The birds shewn were as nice a lot as anyone wonld wish to see, and keen competition took place both in Borders and Norwich. British were well staged, and their variety would do credit to any open show. Foreign were also a splendid lot, ten Parrots being staged, and the small Foreigners were very attractive, heing in grand plumage and colonr. Mr. J. Dolan judged, and his awards gave the greatest satisfaction.

RUNCORN.

Young Bird Show held August 7th in connection with the Runcorn and District H. and O.S., in the Plantation Pleasure Grounds in brilliant weather. The birds were staged in a spacious canvas tent, which suited admirably. About 70 exhibits turned up; good for so late a young show. Some very neat Yorkshires were staged, also some grand young Norwich, and the winning Yellow Nor. and winning Yellow Yorks. fonght a hard battle for the handsome silver challenge cup, the Norwich getting the verdict eventually. Wbichever had won there was no room to grumble, as both are exceptionally good. The selling and the British and Foreign classes made a very good display. A few classes were cancelled through birds having gone into moult. Tbe well-known committee of management carried out all the arrangements in their usual exeellent style. Mr. C. Henlton judged, and only, perhaps, in a single instance were any adverse remarks passed.

COVENTRY (Go diva) C.B.S.

Annual young stock show held July 24th at the Chequer's Hotel, Little Park Street, Coventry. Mr. Needbam, of Leicester, judged, and gave every satisfaction. Tbe entries did not come up to expectation, as tbe members have done so badly this breeding season, but the birds showed grand quality throughout. The principal winners were Messrs. Symonds, Lucas, and Wright, and tbey have some promising youngsters if they come through the moult alright. The British bird section came up well, and no doubt some of them will be heard of later on in the show season.

FALMOUTH AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual First Feather Show held in the recreation ground on August 2nd in glorious weather. It was well supported, and, considering the recent climatic conditions, proved in every way a great success. Considering how late it is, there was a good number of birds staged, 83 in 13 classes. Keen competition has always been the feature for the society's silver and bronze medals. The special for best bird was captured by Mr. Medlyn with a typical Yellow cinnamon, good size and colour; second best by Mr. Richards, with a buff Scotch Fancy, a grand bird. The Norwich classes made a good display, and the A.O.V. class was exceptional, there being some grand Scotch Fancies in it. Mr. Medlyn once more proved himself an able secretary, and having excellent support from a good, hard-working committee, the show proved a great success. Mr. F. Collins (Camborne) judged, and gave entire satisfaction.

OAKENGATES (Salop).

Held in connection with the Horticultural Show on August 9th. This was the first year of a live stock section being added to the show, and judging from the interest being evinced by the numerous visitors who thronged the tent, it was a decided attraction. Chief interest seemed to be centered on the cage birds, which were admirably staged at one end of the tent. Although small in numbers, the quality was of a very high order. Mr. A. C. Brotherhood staged a nice team, and made a clean sweep of the open classes. The local class was won by Mr. Potter with a very fine, lightly-marked Goldie-Canary-Mule, shown in its nest feather. The birds received every attention from the stewards (fanciers of the right stamp), and it is quite apparent that if a few shillings were spent in advertising in the "fancy" Press, this section would be considerably increased. Messrs. Ward and Brotherhood made two efficient secretaries, being splendidly adapted for tbeir post. Mr. A. J. Gladwin judged.

OPEN CLASSES.—NOR. (7): 1, spl, 2, Brotherhood, leader variegated Buff of grand quality and type, followed by a lightly-marked Bnff, rare feather and substance, both in fine condition; 3, Callear, clear Buff, fails a little in substance and condition to leaders, hnt good; vhc Campbell, Edwards; hc (2), Williams. YORKS. (4): 1, 2, Brotherhood, two fine youngsters, good in shape and quality, will he heard of again; 3, Hyde, yell., well drawn, nice pose, might he a little better in skull; vhc, Campbell, buff, good length and feather, just a trifle strong in bnild. BRIT. A.S. (4): 1, spl, Brotherhood, the noted Waxwing, in grand form, scores his 30th first to-day; 2, vhc, Bell, Hawfinch, grand size and shape, well defined markings, slightly damaged tail; vhc, very nice Goldie; 3, Callear, nice Waxwing, small, but neat, will improve with a moult. MULE OR HYB. (5): 1, spl, Brotherhood, Goldie-Bullie ben of immense size, not quite through moult; 2, Williams, heavily variegated Goldie-Can., nice flush, hut decidedly fortunate in getting in front of 3, Callear, a lightly wing-marked buff Goldie-Can., nice shape and quality; we rather fancied this bird for first and the Goldie-Bullie for second; vhc, Callear, Tonks. LOCAL CLASS.—A.V. CAGE BIRD (5): 1, sp, Potter, very fine lightly-marked Goldie-Can., rare size, a very promising youngster, should moult out a beauty; 2, Callear, variegated buff of the same persuasion, little bare on right cheek; 3, Williams, splendid Goldie, rare size, nice face hars and buttons; vhc, Winsor, Tonks.

Club Reports.

STAMFORD AND DISTRICT F.A.

At a meeting of the Stamford and Dis. F.A. last week it was decided to hold this year's show on November 25th (as originally fixed), at the Oddfellows' Hall, which is considered very suitable for the purpose, being larger, loftier, and more comfortable than last year's venue. We are desirous of greatly increasing the number of entries, and with that object have increased the prize money. We are also guaranteed some good specials, a list of which will appear in the schedules in due course. From the letters we received from most of the exhibitors last year (such well-known names as Dykes, Weston, Linsey, Mountain, Mays, Popple, Cocks, Shaddock, etc.), birds were received home in grand condition, and prize money was paid within 14 days of show. We also arranged for a members' show on October 9th, Mr. W. P. Barnes to judge.—A. W. LUDLOW, Hon. Sec.

OPEN NORWICH P.C.

Meeting of the committee held July 31st at the Market Tavern, Bradford; Mr. F. Hammond in the chair. Mr. Ramsden's offer of two cruets for competition was accepted with thanks. Patronage of the O.N.P.C. granted to the following societies:—Oct. 1st and 2nd, Burnley and District; Oct. 16th, Bradford (City); Oct. 22nd and 23rd, Newcastle; Oct. 29th and 30th, York; Nov. 6th, Bradford (West); Nov. 13th, Huddersfield; Nov. 19th and 20th, Sunderland; Nov. 26th and 27th, Ecclesfield; Dec. 10th and 11th, Gateshead; Dec. 16th and 17th, Halifax. Resolved that the first prize in the champion section be one given by the O.N.P.C. to the value of £3 3s.; and first prize in novice section be to the value of £2 2s. Other prizes to be allotted at next meeting. Decided that money specials be again given for each show. Tenders for year book to be invited. The secretary was instructed to write for terms for loan of block of Norwich Plainhead for insertion in year book. The following new members were accepted:—Messrs. R. J. Jones and W. H. Shackleton, Bradford; A. Stephenson, Morpeth; T. C. Crawhall, Newcastle; E. R. Ridley, J. Calam, Geo. Harland, W. Pepper, and R. Barwick, Hull; H. Shorny and A. Humphries, York; J. T. Ambler, Thorn. Next meeting, August 14th.—O. MITCHELL, hon. sec.

CINNAMON-MARKED YORKS. C.C.

Committee meeting held July 24th, at the Market Tavern, Bradford. Mr. W. Richmond presided over a good attendance. Mr. L. Hodgson's tender for the printing of year books was accepted, subject to certain conditions. It was decided that the gold medal kindly offered by Messrs. R. Sutcliffe and Sons be given as fourth prize in novice competition, the fourth prize previously announced to be given as fifth prize. The meeting then proceeded to allot patronage, the following 11 shows being successful:—1909—October 2nd, Sandy Lane and District; October 8th-9th, Accrington and District; October 16th, Bradford City; October 23rd, Shipley O.S.; October 30th, Laisterdyke; November 6th, Bradford West; November 26th-27th, Eccleshill B.F.A.; December 4th, Great Horton O.S.; December 11th, Windhill, Shipley and Dis. O.S.; December 17th-18th, Halifax O.S. 1910—January 1st, Bradford East; the twelfth show will be decided later. The following have been added to our membership: Messrs. H. Dewhirst (London), J. W. Dewhirst (Manningham), E. W. Johnson (Wibsey), J. Butler (Farsley), G. Pedford (Bradford), W. Walker (Bradford), and O. Morrison (Brighouse), bringing the total number of new members up to 96. We are now very near the 100th. Who will be able to claim that distinction? We have received a promise of 5s. to the specials fund by Mr. W. Gledhill (late Chairman).—GARNETT AND TOWERS, Hon. Secs.

YORKSHIRE CANARY CLUB.

Special meeting held at the Market Tavern, Bradford, July 31st, to allot the club's patronage. There were more applications than ever, and the following were the successful societies, viz.:—Bailey Trophy and Sandiford Cup competition: Sandy Lane, October 2nd, judge, P. Mason; Bradford City, October 16th, A. Hirst; Rochdale, October 22nd, 23rd, C. A. House; Manchester, October 29th and 30th, H. W. Battye; Bradford (West), November 6th, W. Mundell; Huddersfield, November 13th, R. Carr; Gateshead, December 10th and 11th, R. Halliday; Halifax, December 17th and 18th, W. A. Cowgill; Scottish National, December 31st and January 1st, J. Robson; Crystal Palace, W. Mundell and Heath. Ramsden Cup, money specials, intermediate and novice competition: Accrington, October 8th and 9th, judge, J. H. Roe; Dulwich O.S., October 12th and 13th, W. Mundell; Shipley, October 28rd, W. H. Shackleton; Sunderland, November 19th and 20th, T. Heath; Eccleshill, November 26th and 27th, J. Greaves; Great Horton, December 4th, H. W. Battye; Windhill, December 11th, J. C. Barnes; Bradford (East), January 1st, E. Radley; City of Wakefield, January 8th, J. L. Broadley; Crystal Palace, February —, W. Mundell and Heath. Medals were granted to Gloucester, Newcastle, Liverpool, and Pendleton. The following gentlemen were made members of the club:—Messrs. W. Watmough, Whitby; A. Radley, Skelmanthorp; P. Shaw, W. Suggitt, F. Weston, and C. Ross, Bradford; and C. E. Hall, Leeds.—J. GREAVES, hon. sec.

CRESTED C.C.

The following gentlemen have been elected members of the C.C.C.:—Messrs. W. R. Miles (Chichester), W. Shepherd, C. Brunt, and H. W. Cook (London), Jones and Crest (Teddington), Thomas Almond (Gateshead), R. S. Berwicke (Newfield), C. E. Offord and H. H. Belsey (London). As the result of the committee's voting, the following Societies have been selected to receive C.C.C. support at their annual fixtures:—Plymouth, Nottingham, L.C.B.A., Manchester, Cheltenham, Bristol, Norwich, Newcastle, Cambridge, Sunderland, and Bournemouth. These in the order named, and if funds permit, and providing they give a classification of not less than eight classes in accordance with Mr. Ley's scheme promulgated at the last annual general meeting, whereby all Societies, in addition to receiving the club's specials, will be guaranteed against loss exceeding one guinea on the entire section. It may be necessary to curtail this list. The classes to be as follows:—Class 1, any variety of Buff Crest, cock; class 2, ditto, hen; class 3, ditto C.B., cock; class 4, ditto C.B., hen; class 5, ditto Yellow Crest; class 6, ditto Yellow C.B.; class 7, ditto Crest (young birds current year bred); class 8, ditto C.B. (young birds current-year bred). I would impress upon members of the C.C.C. the magnitude of this undertaking, and would ask them to do their utmost in providing new members and in subscribing to the special prize fund. Will the secretaries of the Societies mentioned lay the matter before their committees for acceptance at the earliest possible moment, letting me know the result without delay?—J. S. CLARKE, hon. sec.

CITY OF BELFAST NORWICH OREST AND YORKSHIRE O.C.

Usual monthly meeting held in the Avenue Hall, Ossfield-street, on 7th inst, Mr. James Adams in the chair. This being a summoned meeting under penalty of a fine, according to rule, a number of members absent will have to pay the piper. The chief business was to receive reports of members who had British birds in their possession, as per rule. Any member not reporting at this meeting will be debarred from exhibiting at annual show. New country members are to be notified to that effect and allowed one month's grace. The following reported Goldfinches: Messrs. Carson, Scott, McCann, and Seacock; Linnets: Messrs. Carson, Scott, Trueman, Gray.

DERWENT VALLEY O.B.S

Meeting held August 7th, in Church Hall, Mr. Geo. Barkas in the chair. The schedule for our open show was gone into. A splendid classification is to be given, with five open novice classes, and two natural colour classes, one for Norwich and one for Yorks. It was also decided to again have a grand prize drawing this year, for which we have got 19 prizes. British birds have a good lot for themselves this year, with ten or twelve classes. It was also decided to give members the same prize money as the open this year, but all prize money to be paid out first. We would be pleased to hear from anyone wishing to become members; fee, 2/6, with 1/- on election.—J. BROWN, Sec.

[Kindly note that your letter came unstamped, and so cost us twopence.—ED.]

SOUTHALL AND DIST. C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held August 7th at St. John's Schools. Mr. Hireson occupied the chair, in the absence of Mr. Argyle. The Secretary asked the chairman to present Mr. Phipps with the special (a rose bowl) for most points gained at the young bird show. Mr. Hireson, in a few well-chosen words, handed the bowl to Mr. Phipps, who said he was very proud to receive the first special offered by the Society, and also thanked the donors of same for their kindness. After this the classification for our open show, to be held on October 14th next, received a very lengthy discussion. It was eventually decided to have 28 open and 9 members' classes; prize money to be 10s., 5s., 3s., 1s. 6d., with an entry fee of 1s. 6d. Specials to be allotted at next meeting, and in the meantime members agreed to do all in their power to get as many as possible.—T. G. JEFFERY, hon. sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Fortnightly meeting held August 7th at the Fawcett Street Cafe. There was a very good attendance, presided over by Mr. W. F. Swan. There was a good deal of correspondence relating to our annual show, November 19th and 20th, and communications were read from the secretaries of the Open Norwich P.C. and the Northern Yorkshire C.C., to the effect that we had been granted their patronage. It was decided that we add a class for Yellow Crests to the Crest section. We will thus be giving ten classes for Crests and C.B., as follows: Norwich, dark-crested buff cock, crest hen, yellow crest-bred, yellow Crest, any colour, C.B. ck., buff, C.B. hen, any colour, pairs for Crest breeding, Crest, bred 1909, C.B., bred 1909, Crest, A.O.V. Mr. Birchley, unfortunately, could not attend. After the business was concluded we had a very nice discussion, which was greatly enjoyed by all.—W. REID, hon. sec.

BORDER CITY (Carlisle) O.S.

The general meeting of the Society took place at headquarters, on August 4th, when a good muster of members turned up. One new member was proposed, bringing the roll up to fifty as the result of seven months' work. The prizes for young bird show were next distributed, and consisted of division between winners of the full entrance money received, cup and medal for most points, and special prizes for sections (Canaries, British and Foreign). All were thoroughly satisfied, and the enthusiasm augurs well for the success of our annual show on October 27th and 28th. Correspondence having been dealt with, the members were asked by the Chairman to procure specials for annual show, and he also proposed that another ramble take place. This was enthusiastically received, seeing the successful outings the Society has already had, and the date was fixed for August 29th. The destination again was left in the hands of Mr. Davidson, and will be published in due course.—JOHN BELL, Sec.

NORTHERN CREST CLUB.

Mr. Swan presided over a meeting of the Northern Crest Club, held at Sunderland, August 4th. It was resolved that the following societies receive our patronage for their forthcoming shows:—Newcastle, Blaydon, Sunderland, Gateshead, and the Scottish National. Mr. Thomas Taylor was elected to our list of judges. It was decided to withdraw the money prizes at the club show for this season. Mr. Taylor proffered to give two medals to the Gateshead and Scottish National Shows for the best old Crest and best old Crestbred; he also said that he would bear the loss, if there should be any, on a class for yellow Orests at our club show, if Sunderland will add the class to their schedule. There will be six medals for competition at Newcastle—one for best old Crest, one for best old Crestbred, one for best young Crest, one for best young Crestbred, one for best young Crest shown by a novice member, and one for best young Crestbred shown by a novice member. There will be four medals for competition at Blaydon, Gateshead, and Scottish National, and the full amount of medals and cups will be given to our club show at Sunderland. There will also be two medals for novices. I trust members will show their appreciation by making a good entry at above shows.—J. G. HUTCHINSON, Hon. Sec.

NATIONAL BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

Committee meeting held at headquarters, The Feathers, Gt. Chapel-street, Westminster, July 29th. Present: Mr. Robson in the chair, Messrs. Maxwell, Trower, Cooper, Dewhurst, Askew, Wyse, Weston, Crabb, Plumbridge, and Carr. Minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed. Minutes of special meeting were read and it was proposed by Mr. Dewhurst, seconded by Mr. Cooper, that they be signed as read. Letters were read from Messrs. A. W. Watson and A. Baldry. Mr. A. Goodall, 73, Corporation-street, St. Helens, was elected a member. The committee granted medals to the following shows: Battersea, Newcastle, Clapham, Manchester, Norwich, Liverpool, Cambridge, Preston, Nottingham, Wimbledon, Birmingham, Leicester, and Gateshead. It was decided to again hold the club show in conjunction with the L.C.B.A., on November 26th, and that a gold, silver, and bronze medal be allotted to each section, viz., Hardbill, Softbill, and Hybrid. Mr. Trower very kindly promised a silver medal in each section for most points gained by a member who has never won a medal. Mr. Crabb very kindly offered a silver medal for the first Siskin-Bullfinch Hybrid exhibited by a member of the N.B.B. and M.C. A hearty vote of thanks to the Chairman concluded the meeting.—PLUMBRIDGE AND CARR, Hon. Secs.

A Seed Saver.

Sent from 21, Graig Street, Pontygwaith, Rhondda, Glam.

[Sender has omitted his name.—EDITOR.]

Enclosed is a sketch for seed saving, as some birds waste more than half the seed that is placed in their food vessels. I have several birds, and at first I wondered what to do; they used to waste such a deal of seed. The article I hit upon is made of tin in the same shape as a letter V, and has two pieces of wire soldered to it. Anyone can make it; and as large as he likes. It is placed inside the cage under the seed glass, so that when the bird goes to eat and throws some of its food out, it falls into this little trough. I have found it very useful, and I hope others will, too.

A Yorkshire Show-cage Holder.

Sent by Mr. A. E. Duke, 336, South Frederick Street, South Shields.

These sketches are of a very simple and handy Yorkshire show-cage holder. All that is needed are two pieces of wire, each about 9in. long. With the aid of a pair of pincers a very useful holder is easily made, which can be fixed or removed in a second, and which when fixed holds the cage firmly. "A" goes round the wire next to the door, and then "B" is pressed on to the bottom of the cage. It is necessary to have two (made exactly alike) to every cage, and when fitted the cage can be shifted about as one wishes. It fits on to the breeding cages exactly like a seed box.—ARTHUR E. DUKE.

"CAGE BIRDS," 154, Fleet St., London, E.C.

Under the White Rose.

BIRDY matters last week were rather quiet. A few societies have been holding members' shows, but as the season is so far advanced no great entries were expected. None of the specialist clubs were holding meetings, making time hang somewhat heavily on the hands of the enthusiasts, who are generally to be seen at these affairs. After a somewhat prolonged spell of bad weather, dull, damp, cold—in fact, as bad as could be from the bird breeder's point of view, who wants good light, at least, to hope for good results from his stock—we have had a week of glorious sunshine, which has made itself felt in the attics usually at the disposal of the breeders in Yorkshire. A jump of quite 20 degrees has been noted in less than three days. This has had at least one good result: birds that did not show any signs of dropping into a good moult have rid themselves of quite a shower of feathers. Given a continuation for a few weeks, fanciers can rest assured of a quick and healthy moult, and to make show birds or good breeding birds, this is what is required. Feathers, feathers everywhere is what breeders like to see, as this points to a sharp and successful termination to a very trying time for both birds and owners.

BIRDS are often somewhat neglected during this part of the season. Holiday making is rampant, and fanciers are apt to forget the little things that go to ensure success. The frequent use of the bath is very necessary, particularly during these hot spells, and to see the birds enjoy their "splash" is recompense for the trouble involved, not to speak of the general smartening-up of the stock which comes from its frequent use.

YORKSHIRE Union holds a delegates' meeting to-day (Saturday), as also does the O.N.P.C., this latter club having a few items to settle up in connection with their special prize list.

SHIPLEY Society having lost the services of their secretary have had to appoint a successor, and have been very fortunate to secure a very enterprising and enthusiastic fancier to take his place, i.e., Mr. H. Martin, who will doubtless make things "hum" in this district. I hear that already he has been trotting some of the old fanciers round in search of new members for his society, and, what is more to the point, has been successful. At their members' shows this fancier, though in his novice-ship, has made it exceedingly warm for the champions, and it will take them all their time to keep the pace with him.

MR. H. HILL, the Y.U. Secretary, has changed his address (15, Settle Terrace, Thornton Lane, Bradford), and those who have correspondence with him had better make a note of it to avoid miscarriage of their letters. Have you had to "flit," Horatio, to make room for the Y.U. correspondence, eh?

"STRAIGHT-'UN."

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

*Birds of Distinction.

A Crow and a Bird of Paradise were talking about fame. "Why, you are only known to the farmers," sneered the latter; "whereas I am so beautiful, that I have my feathers on the hats of society women." The Crow laughed sardonically and said with a chuckle, "That may be so, my friend, but I have my feet under their eyes."—Cutting from "London Opinion," sent by Emily Carter (age 13), 45, Beech Avenue, Nottingham.

*The Doves' New Baby.

Last Saturday morning, August 7th, I found a young Sparrow. I took it home and gave it something to eat, and in the evening I threw it up to see if it could fly, but it could not, so I put it in a cage where two Doves are, one sitting on two eggs. They came and fetched it into the nest, and they were nursing it and feeding it, and it was there all night. But in the morning, sad to say, a cat in the yard got hold of it and killed it.—Gertrude Newstead (age 12), 7, Duncombe Street, St. Ann's Well Road, Nottingham.

Starling Saves Its Neck.

A barber once owned a Starling. He kept saying: "I wish you could talk." To his surprise the Starling one day said: "I wish you could talk." After that he took great pains to make it talk. Sometimes he would say to his customers. "No one could have done it better." The Starling took a fancy to this saying. One day the bird flew away and joined some others. They caught sight of some corn. They flew down and were caught in a net. The farmer started to wring their necks, when the bird called out, "No one could have done it better." Hearing this he took it back to the barber.—Sent by Sidney Borner (age 11), 4, Glen Street, Cumberland Market, Regent's Park, N.W.

NORWICH CANARIES

By C. A. House.

The young fancier is told all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder, and as an exhibitor on the Show Bench. This work, which has been written in a plain, practical manner, contains much of untold value to lovers of the Norwich Canary.

The chapters on "Forming A Stud" and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book many times over.

Twitterings.

I have moved from Lakehall Road, Thornton Heath, to 58, Windsor Road, Thornton Heath, Surrey, writes Mr. E. J. Clark.

We are informed that the prize money for Hawarden Show, held August 2nd, was paid out to the winners on August 6th.

Secretaries please note my address for the future will be 38, Watcombe Road, South Norwood, instead of London Road, Thornton Heath, writes Mr. C. Young.

Will secretaries please note that my address for the future will be 75, Osborne Street, Stonyfield, Rochdale, writes Mr. Thos. Holt (late of Larkfield Aviaries).

From one advertisement costing fourpence I sold over 200 quarts of snails! Shall advertise in no other as long as your paper, CAGE BIRDS, lasts.—G. E. SMITH (Highworth, Wilts).

The photo of my Crestbred Canary in last week's CAGE BIRDS is very good indeed, writes Mr. Robert Holmes. I have taken CAGE BIRDS from its commencement, and I always shall take it.

I went out catching on Bank Holiday Monday, writes Mr. G. Sawyer (Alfreton), and as I was walking to the place my Linnet was singing in the basket all the time I was going through the town.

I must say your paper seems very popular, writes Mr. G. Fitzpatrick (Tottenham). I had over 50 applicants for my pup. CAGE BIRDS is far better than the other Fancy papers which I have been in the habit of using.

Can anyone inform me, writes Mr. J. W. Philpott, the secretary, what has become of the major portion of the Accrington and Dis. C.B.S. members? Are they in the land of the living? If so, let's see them at our next meeting, August 19th.

I always get good results when I advertise in CAGE BIRDS. Indeed, I find it unnecessary to continually advertise (this may be bad news for you!). I am thoroughly satisfied with the results of the last insertions.—F. P. DYMOND (Cardiff).

Kindly thank all those who replied to my advertisement last week of Red-crested Cardinal. They were too numerous to answer singly. I had replies from all over the country and wish your paper every success.—J. H. BARTON (Hulme).

Wakefield Roller C.C.'s open show is fixed for December 10th and 11th, and the judges are Mr. F. A. Lester (open classes), Mr. J. B. Hesling (amateur and novice classes), and Mr. F. Oldroyd the £2 limit, writes Mr. J. Netherwood, the secretary.

Owing to Mr. Widdowfield (our late secretary) leaving the district, I have been appointed to the secretaryship of the Houghton-le-Spring C.B.S., writes Mr. D. Hann (8, Brickyard. Bankhead, Fencehouses, Durham). Will brother fanciers and secretaries please note?

In the anecdote published last week about the Mealy Rosella, which was at a recent City and Suburban Show, the owner's name should have been given as Mrs. Morrison. For this confusion of names we must apologise to the ladies concerned. Mrs. Vincent is not a member.

I have much pleasure in writing to ask you to withdraw my advertisement, as I have been successful. I find your paper very valuable when I have advertised, and I am very well satisfied with my exchange. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.—CHAS. BROWN (The Fall, Wakefield).

We have received from Mr. J. A. Recee, of the Jockey Wire Works, Colston Yard, Bristol, a very comprehensive and well-illustrated price list of show cages, which we can recommend all fanciers to see. The designs are thoroughly up-to-date, and the prices very reasonable indeed.

I am away on my holidays, writes Mr. V. H. Deacon, and did not receive my CAGE BIRDS till Sunday morning's post, when I was agreeably surprised to see my Norwich green yellow hen on the front cover. Kindly convey my best thanks to Mr. Norman for his work. I wish "C. B." all success.

At the monthly meeting of the Blaydon-on-Tyne and Dis. C.B.S., held on August 7th, there was a large turn-out of members, and we had a letter from the secretary of the N.Y.C.C. agreeing to give us their patronage on certain conditions, to which our members unanimously agreed, writes Mr. G. Havver, the secretary.

Leeds C.B.S. gives a hearty invitation to fanciers in the district to come on Saturday, August 14th, to hear Mr. H. J. Mennard (the well-known breeder of Norwich and Cinnamons) lecture on "Moulting and Colour-feeding," writes Mr. J. Chambers, the hon. secretary. Mr. M. is a practical man, so we are sure to get a few good wrinkles.

Bird-keepers who have not as yet seen that most wonderful sixpennyworth of birdy literature, CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL for 1909, have a splendid chance of acquiring a bargain this week, and probably their last chance. All the ordinary issue has been sold right out, with the exception of a few score copies which have the covers either soiled or a little torn (condition otherwise good), and those we offer to readers of CAGE BIRDS at the reduced price of 5d. per copy, post free. Orders should be sent at once to our Manager, at 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., as, of course, they can only be filled for so long as the limited supply lasts. The ANNUAL contains a lovely coloured plate of an exhibition Linnet, which alone is worth the cost, and much grand information on bird-keeping and breeding (both Canaries, Hybrids, and Foreign). Send at once, or we cannot guarantee to fill your order.

Will the sender of a deposit, on August 8th, of 4s. in favour of Mr. Freeman (Nottingham) please let us know his name and address?

From our advertisements in CAGE BIRDS hundreds are sending for free catalogues, write Messrs. Young and Son, net manufacturers, Crewkerne. A good many, we find, write a letter and enclose it in an envelope, do not seal it, and affix ½d. stamp. These are charged another 1d. here on delivery, and, if refused, are returned to senders, thus causing delay. It is much better to use a postcard.

OBITUARY.

Mr. H. McDOUGALL (Edinburgh).

Mr. T. Smith (Glasgow) writes: At the ripe age of seventy-nine, Mr. H. McDougall, of Edinburgh, passed away on August 1st. A large company paid their last respects to the deceased on the 4th inst., when he was interred in North Merchiston Cemetery. Mr. McDougall was a man of strong personality, and followed his hobby to the end, having bred birds this summer. If all fanciers were of his stamp, there would never be occasion to put the question: Is the fancy on the decline? He did his level best to keep it on the up grade. He bred excellent stock, and many persons were established by him in the fancy. As an instance, he sold a buff cock for the modest sum of two pounds, which, with a Belgian hen, founded a famous strain of winning Scotch Fancy Canaries. He was for about fifty years in the employment of the Caledonian Railway Company. He was a staunch and a noble friend, beloved by all who had the privilege of his acquaintance. The fancy was well represented at the graveside, striking evidence of the respect in which he was held. Readers will extend their sympathy to his sorrowing family, especially to his daughter, who so faithfully nursed him.

Welsh Bird Names.

The Wren is commonly called "Cutty" in South Wales. "Cwtta" is a Welsh word, meaning little, or stumpy, of which "Cutty" is a corruption. Its applicability to the Wren or other small bird is obvious.

The C.B.U. Executive Council.

The following is the result of the election of the Executive Council of the Cage Bird Union for the coming year:—District No. 1, G. W. Macpartling (Newcastle); No. 2, F. Wynn (Barrow); No. 3, J. Naden (Rochdale); No. 4, G. W. F. Lythgoe (Manchester); No. 5, S. Hadwin (Liverpool); No. 6, H. Stubbs (Grimsby); No. 7, R. Rhodes (Nottingham); No. 8, W. Freestone (Norwich); No. 9, T. Pope (Plymouth); No. 9A, A. Treasure (Cheltenham); No. 10, D. A. Longden (Swansea); No. 11, J. W. Ramsden (Brixton); No. 12, G. Warley (Brixton).—J. RAYNES, secretary.

A Schoolboy's Story.

A schoolboy at Ripon Grammar School relates that: "While sitting on a wall last night (August 5th), about 8.45, with a gun beside me, watching for some rabbits coming out of their holes, I suddenly felt something sitting on my arm, and looking up I saw a Hawk hovering quite near my head, and a poor little Thrush was sitting on my hand, so terrified that it was nearly dead. I waited till the Hawk flew away with fright at me. The little Thrush soon revived, and flew away unhurt."

Old Age.

In a contemporary the Duchess of Bedford is giving many interesting instances of longevity among her birds. In her possession is a Barbary Dove, which she has had for fifteen years. She received it from an old woman who had also possessed it for fifteen years, and she said it was an old bird when she got it. At present it does not seem to show any signs of age except that of becoming sterile. A Chinese Goose has been in the possession of the Bedford family for fifty-seven years, and Her Grace has a Pintail Drake, which she bought twenty years ago as an adult bird.

The Motor Parrot.

The latest fad among New York motorists, according to the "Manchester Dispatch," is a live Parrot perched on top of the tonneau door. The followers of this fad have stationary cages affixed to the machine, and in these cages are carried along at a rapid rate Parrots which utter all sorts of curious comments upon those who get in the way of the speeding machines. Some of these Parrots are taught to warn pedestrians with such remarks as "Clear the road" and "Get out of the way." These trained Parrots are very watchful, and in some instances relieve the chauffeurs of the necessity of ringing a bell or tooting a horn when crossing the streets.

Wild Birds in Norfolk.

The "London Gazette" contains an Order, made by the Home Secretary, upon application by the Norfolk County Council, to be known as "The Wild Birds Protection (County of Norfolk) Order, 1909." The period during which the killing or taking of wild birds is prohibited by the Wild Birds Protection Act, 1880, is extended throughout Norfolk under the Order, so as to be between March 1st and September 1st, so far as regards all birds mentioned in the schedule to that Act. The Order also provides that the Act shall apply within Norfolk to the following species of wild birds, in the same manner as if those species were included in the schedule to the Act:—Great Bustard, Crossbill, Sand Martin, Bearded Tit (reedling or reed Pheasant). During the period between Aug. 31st and March 2nd following, the killing or taking of the Bittern, Little Bittern, Great Bustard, Goldfinch, Kingfisher, Owl (all species), and Bearded Tit, is prohibited throughout the county. All birds are protected on Sundays in certain areas.

Glasgow's Baby Swan.

A cygnet was hatched three or four weeks ago in Camphill Park, Glasgow. A lively interest is being manifested in the youngster, which is carefully watched by the mother bird.

The Influx of Crossbills.

Concerning the presence of flocks of Crossbills in the South of England, a correspondent writes to "The Times," from Beedings, Pulborough, Sussex:—"The flock of about 50 which Mr. A. P. Blathwyt has reported to have visited him at Northwood is probably part of a little cloud of these birds—some 200 to 300 in close flight—which very regularly visited the precincts of this house, between 6 and 7 in the evening, continuously for about nine days, and which left us a week ago. On the only occasion when I noticed the Crossbills after settling down, I found them busily employed in feeding among the close branches of the fir trees. A young orchard did not escape their notice, but except the remnants of fruit on the cherry trees, they found very little there to attract them."

FANCIERS AT CRICKET.

City and Suburban A.C.B. v. the "Early Birds" C.C.

The annual cricket match of the City and Suburban A.C.B. took place on Saturday last, August 7th, on the St. Quintin's Park Ground, London, W. They once again had as opponents the members of the "Early Birds" C.C., who are not fanciers, though they rejoice in a name with such a pronounced birdy flavour. Anyway, they are rattling good sportsmen, and excellent cricketers to boot, rather too "hot stuff" in that direction for the City and Sub-ites, to whom they once again administered a sound beating. However, although the latter were knocked temporarily "off song," they hope to moult out in better form for next season. They were unfortunate in having two or three of their best men away through holidaying and other causes. Nevertheless, they put up a better fight than was anticipated, scoring 103 runs, mainly as the result of a grand first-wicket partnership between Mr. J. Pooley and Mr. F. Prior. The former, well known as a Crest fancier, compiled 65, as the result of clean and vigorous hitting (a seven, all run, being included), while his partner (a brother of Mr. C. Prior, the well-known British bird enthusiast) put together 24 by skilful and graceful cricket. The rest of the side collapsed before the admirably varied bowling of Mr. Collier, who took 7 wickets for 27 runs, including the "hat trick." The "Early Birds," who had a regular "test team" in the field, hit up 145 for 6 wickets (two "retired") before the close. At the time for the pulling of stumps the match was a draw, but the City and Sub. played on an extra half-hour, and so lost. Altogether a highly enjoyable afternoon was spent, the weather being brilliantly fine, and the pity is that more spectators did not put in an appearance to enjoy the fun.

The scores were:—CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.—J. Pooley, b George, 65; F. Prior, c Chin, b Collier, 24; C. Head, b Collier, 0; V. Wynn, b Collier, 3; J. Burton, b George, 0; C. Prior, b George, 0; J. Marley, b Collier, 0; G. E. Weston, b Collier, 0; H. Lowe, b Collier, 0; W. Barnard, c Radcliffe, b Collier, 3; J. Burton, jun., not out, 2; byes, 6—total, 103. THE "EARLY BIRDS" C.C.—Hunt, retired, 35; Chinn, b Head, 25; George, retired, 43; Collier, b Pooley, 0; Darragh, b Pooley, 0; Cory, not out, 21; Radcliffe, b Wynn, 9; byes, 10; leg-byes, 1; wides, 1—total, 145.

By C. A. House.

This is a thorough and practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, written by a well-known expert and judge. It contains chapters dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, and an illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman, reproduced in the finest art style. There are also exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge approached by no other book of its kind at the price.

American Advice on the Feeding of Canaries.

I am very interested in Canaries (I am feeding for my father 46 young ones at the present time), I noticed the following paragraph in our home paper. I was amused at the advice given therein, and so am sending it to you for your perusal. It will, no doubt, amuse other readers of CAGE BIRDS. The paragraph is headed: "How to take care of your Canary," and is worded as follows:—

(MISS) E. CLEAVES.

Always give fresh water once a day to Canaries, and twice on hot days. Feed eggs boiled for one half-hour until the yoke is mealy, and give plenty of green parsley; also sweet apples, bananas, hard-boiled potatoes, crackers, bread dipped in sweet milk. Give them all the rape and Canary seed they want. A good food for young birds is ground hemp seed, young and tender cabbage leaves, and pieces of red pepper pod containing the seeds. Do not give a Canary sugar or sweetmeats of any kind. The cage must not be moved while the eggs are in the nest, but the slide door should be removed and the floor cleaned and covered with several thicknesses of newspaper cut to fit the cage; then cover the paper with a little fine gravel. When the top sheet becomes soiled remove it and put in more gravel on the clean sheet of paper. Birds rearing young are often covered with lice unless great care is taken to keep the cage perfectly clean. Hang a small bag of sulphur in the corner of the cage, as it prevents vermin. Offer the bird a bath of tepid water every morning. The cage should never be placed in a draught of air, for the little occupant may contract a cold which is difficult to cure, and generally ends in a severe case of gapes. Many have lost their pets through such carelessness. Songsters troubled with diarrhoea may be relieved by adding a couple of drops of tincture of iron to their drinking water. To cure a cold, give, in addition to the regular diet, a paste made from a hard-boiled egg grated and mixed with pulverised cracker; add a tiny pinch of cayenne pepper. This generally effects a speedy cure.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following Conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of poper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must stole grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Injured Hind Claw.

Leek.—It is quite probable that the claw was injured, perhaps dislocated, in the fall out of the nest, but in a case of dislocation you should be able to see the misplacement of a joint in such a position clearly enough. If there appears no signs of this being the case, try the effect of immersing the whole foot in a saucer of fairly hot water for a minute or so, then at once transfer it to a saucer of cold water for a similar length of time. Repeat the process three or four times in succession, and be careful to finish in the cold water. Dry the foot, and gently massage it with a drop of olive oil, and finally wipe off any surplus oil before finally returning bird to cage. Repeat this treatment three or four times in a fortnight. Give the bird one fair-sized perch of a flattened, oval shape, and make all the others rather small—about the size of a lead pencil—and almost round in shape. Should there appear signs of a dislocated joint, I would not advise you to interfere with it yourself, especially after the lapse of such a length of time since the injury took place. Better get your medical man or a veterinary surgeon to do it for you.

The Old, Old Story.

M.T.W.—It appears quite palpable to me that your birds are exposed to constant draughts in some way, and until this cause is removed no sort of treatment will be of any avail. Perhaps your room itself is draughty, or maybe damp, or so placed as to be subject to striking fluctuations of temperature; or it may be only the position of the cages which is faulty, and exposes the birds to draughts. But whatever the cause, it must be removed, and the birds kept in a position where draughts are quite excluded, and also violent fluctuations of heat avoided as much as possible. Having attended to this, feed the birds on the Canary and rape staple as now, and give a teaspoonful per three birds of maw twice or three times a week until they are well broken in moult; a few grains of hemp, or a pinch of some seed mixture twice a week; a little egg food, varied occasionally with a little bread and milk, once or twice a week, and a scrap of green food daily. You should not now be giving egg food daily to either young or old birds, except in cases where the former are on colour food and moulting, and the latter are in like circumstances or feeding a late brood of young. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills, and glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a fortnight.

A Trio.

R.M.X.—(1) If you mean is it harmful to have oilcloth on the floor of a flight cage, I should say certainly not, especially if you wash it clean about every week or fortnight, and also use a covering of sand or sawdust to assist in keeping the floor clean, which, of course, must be removed and burnt at least once a week. If you mean covering the floor of a room in which the birds were flying loose, I should still say it would not be at all detrimental, but again must advise you to also put over it a good layer of sand or sawdust to assist in keeping it sweet and clean. (2) This is really too vague. The cause of the gaping may be simply nervousness, or it may be due to fatness or disease. You may try a rather modified form of the treatment for the next, and if that does not do good write again in a fortnight, and give a few leading symptoms as a guide, and say how and where you keep the birds. (3) Here, again, it would have been a great help had you said how you fed the birds, and what condition they are in. Put this hen on a diet of plain Canary seed only for a week, with a liberal supply of green food daily, and two days during the week give a small piece of bread and milk sprinkled with maw seed. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence two days in every three. At the end of the week add a pinch of summer rape to the diet daily, and every second day give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion and four of sherry mixed in it. Reduce the supply of green food a little, and give in the drinking water every second day twenty drops of whisky, ten of glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together. Continue this for a week or fortnight, as may appear necessary. See that the birds are not exposed to draughts at any time.

A Passive Resister.

"Hockley."—It is certainly a little curious that your bird should sing so well when caged by itself, and yet becomes so silent and consistently refuse to mate with any hen when it is introduced to them. I should be rather inclined to doubt its sex, notwithstanding its singing proclivities, and would advise you to get some experienced breeder to see it, and tell you whether it is a cock. In any case, it is too late now to think of trying to mate it again this season, so you had better run it in a flight for a few weeks in company with a few others for moulting, at the end of which process you may again cage him separately if you wish him to come in song again, and sing through the winter. In the latter case you should hang him beside, or in full view of the hen you want him to mate with from the end of January next onwards, until it is time to mate them. Feed liberally for a week or two before mating, and give him a liberal supply of dandelion leaves each day for a fortnight or so, and do not introduce him to the company of the hen until you hear him calling her vigorously, and trying to get to her to feed her, and she also appears desirous for his attentions. There is little wrong with your feeding, save that you should give green food daily now, and in greater variety.

Canary Querists should send to our publisher for "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d.; "House's Canary Manual," 1/2; and "Yorkshire Canaries," 1/-, post free.

Falls off its Perch.

G.H.O.—Feed the bird on a staple mixture of three parts Canary to one part rape. Occasionally give a few grains only of a mixture of hemp, inga, maw, and linseed, and for the next month give three times a week half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of port wine and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it. After this time discontinue the oil and wine, and give the sponge cake only once or twice a week, or you may then vary it occasionally with a small piece of bread soaked in milk, pressed nearly dry, and sprinkled with sort sugar. Give a little fresh green food daily. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts for one day, and afterwards give four drops each of tincture of steel and tincture of gentian every second day for a week. You may also bathe the feet for a minute or two in very warm water, transfer them at once to another saucer of cold water for the same length of time, wipe dry, and brush them over with a small feather dipped in tincture of benzoin. See that the perches are of a proper size and shape—a flattened oval, about five-eighths of an inch by three-eighths of an inch.

Varied.

Stock.—(1) It is quite natural for the crested cock that is moulting to be out of song, but it does not by any means follow that sending a bird a long journey should throw it into moult. Indeed, provided the bird was in good condition and proper care taken in packing, it ought not to have done so. Keep it in a comfortable place, quite free from draughts, allow it free opportunities for bathing, feed liberally, and thus try to get it through the moult in good condition, and without a break, when it will undoubtedly come in song again in the course of a few weeks after the moult is over. (2) The cause of the two young dying was probably that they had an attack of diarrhœa, and through getting too weak to push forward for feeding were passed over by the hen, who would mainly devote her attention to the strongest bird, with the result that this one rapidly jumped away from the rest in size, and strength and not only deprived them of food, but helped to crush them to death. It is not uncommon for some hens to specially favour certain youngsters and neglect the rest. Had you noticed she was doing this in time, you might have transferred them to foster parents, and saved them. She may prove a much better feeder next year, and is certainly worth giving another chance, but you have done quite right to stop her breeding for this season. Keep her over the winter in a large flight, where she gets plenty of good exercise. Better luck next time.

How to Economise.

F. Cook.—With only one pair of birds there is, as you say, a considerable amount of waste of egg. Instead of running only one pair of better birds next year, have at the very least one cock and two hens, and run the cock alternately with both hens. This would only entail the initial extra outlay of one hen, and as one egg a day would still be more than is necessary when they are breeding, I should advise you to go a little further still and keep a pair of your own common birds, and breed with them next season, in order to have them available to use as feeders for the better class birds, in case the latter should prove bad feeders. If they were not required for this purpose you would still have the young to dispose of as singers or feeders. With the four hens breeding one egg each day would just about be sufficient to keep them going nicely with little or no waste at all, save, perhaps, a little of the white, and they could, therefore, be run on practically the same number of eggs which you would require for a single pair. To keep the egg fresh all day you should boil the egg in the morning, when cold carefully peel off rather more than half the shell, cut the peeled half off with a keen knife, so as to make a clean cut, and turn the other half face downwards on a clean plate, place a cup over it, and keep it thus in a cold place until required in the afternoon. When using it to prepare the afternoon supply of food, peel off and discard any portion that has not been fully protected from air by the shell. You may, of course, use the prepared yolk, as advised in the book you have, but in using any proprietary article of food always obtain it direct from the maker, to ensure the greatest amount of freshness. If you use the puppy biscuits it is not necessary to grind them. Put the required quantity on a plate, pour over them just as much hot water as they will absorb, allow to stand until quite soft all through, then pour off surplus water, press as dry as possible, stir into a crumbly mass, and—well, there you are.

Airy Nothings.

J.S.—I can only surmise that what you describe as "wind eggs" are simply shellless eggs, and as they have been so persistent, there can be no doubt that the hen is either a weakly one generally, or suffers from some weakness of the lower portion of the oviduct. Do not allow her to go to nest again this year. Turn her into a good, large flight cage, where she can get plenty of vigorous exercise throughout the winter. After the moulting is over, feed her on a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape as a staple, and give separately a pinch of hemp, among the bulk of which you have mixed just a sprinkling of inga and linseed, twice a week. On two other days give a small piece of sponge cake which may be varied now and again with a scrap of bread and milk, or a little egg food. Place a small cube of hard, common salt in the wires for her to peck at when "so disposed," and keep a flake of cuttlefish suspended in the cage, and the floor strewn with gritty sand. Keep her on this treatment throughout the winter, and when she begins to moult see that she goes through with it. Remove her to a warm and equable room, if necessary, to bring about the completion of the moult without any interruption, and quickly. About once a week give twenty drops of chemical food in the water, and for a fortnight before mating her next spring give the chemical food twice each week, and add to it five drops of tincture of myrrh.

An Aviary.

Novice, Dalston.—You will certainly find yourself rather cramped, I think, in running six pairs in cages in the suggested aviary. The best way I can see for you to manage it is to wire off a portion of the north side about two feet deep, with a division midway between ceiling and floor, to form two large flights for the young birds, and then arranging the breeding cages on the back wall between the flights and the south side. The floor itself should be well concreted to help keep out rats and mice. The window in the south side might be rather smaller than you suggest, say, two feet by two feet six inches—with a panel in the centre to open inwards on a ratchet similar to a greenhouse "light." The two front windows should also be made to open on this principle, and some egress holes for ventilation should be made in each end at the highest point near the roof, or, better still, you might stop the real roof two inches short of the back wall, and superimpose a second cover board over this about six inches wide, and one inch above the actual roof. Whether the structure would be warm enough in winter without heating depends solely upon the locality and the surroundings. If in a fairly well sheltered place, any hardy variety of Canary should succeed without heat, if you are careful to exclude damp, but as the birds will be in cages, I would not advise you to try the first experiment with valuable specimens. You should also be careful to procure only birds which have been cold-room reared. In any case, I will not advise you to use an oil stove in such a small place—the risk is altogether too great for my liking. If you desire to heat it, make a little separate wooden structure outside to contain the stove, and lead pipes from it into and around the house, and out again at the roof, thereby doing away with any fumes, smoke, or smell, within the house.

Stuck in Moult.

H.M.—If, as I read your letter to mean, the bird has stopped moulting, and is not now dropping any feathers, it is almost certain to have contracted a chill by some means, even though you say your room is free from draughts. Keep the bird now in a fairly warm place, where the temperature is fairly regular and steady day and night, and see that draught or chills from any source are rigorously avoided. Give a liberal supply of maw seed daily for a week or so, and add to its drinking water daily twenty drops of whisky and a few shreds of saffron for a week, during which time also add a slight dusting of flower of sulphur to its egg food on two occasions, with an interval of two days between each dose. If this does not re-start the moult in the course of a week, give it a vapour bath at the end of that time by placing its cage on a table with a mug of very hot water standing in front in such a position that the bird cannot dip its beak in, and cover cage and mug all over with a thick wool shawl or wrap, so as to confine the steam in the cage. After about ten minutes remove the mug, but leave the cover over the cage for another twenty minutes. Be careful not to expose the bird to a chill for a day or two after this. It is best to keep a light linen cover over the cage for a day or two.

Cause of Young Dying.

J. Wood.—Your query is too vague for me to found any definite opinion upon. Young dying at ten days' old may be due to quite a large variety of causes, which may be the fault of the birds, or the food, or your own management generally. As you only mention giving eggs and Canary seed as the birds' food I am inclined to think that the fault really does lie with your method of feeding and management. If you have any more young about hatching now, I would advise you to add a little summer rape to the staple diet of Canary seed, and do not begin to give egg food until the young are due to hatch. Then give it only in small quantities—a teaspoonful per pair each day is quite sufficient for the first two or three days—and after the first day add at least an equal bulk of moist bread crumbs, or crushed biscuit, or sponge cake, to the egg. After the third day give a supply of green food freshly gathered twice a day, and a week or so later add a supply of cracked hemp. Keep all food and water vessels scrupulously clear, cages ditto, and never give any stale food, or allow any such to remain in cages. By observing these few simple rules you should rear every chick that is hatched, provided the parents are healthy and good feeders. If you have no eggs now being sat upon, do not encourage the birds to go to nest again.

Young Dying.

C. Walker.—If you still have birds die after putting them on the following treatment, I should certainly advise you to send one for post-mortem, to set any doubt as to the nature of the disease at rest. But be sure you despatch it as quickly as possible after death. Any birds that are now ill put on a diet of plain Canary seed only, as a staple, with a fairly liberal supply of seedy chickweed, shepherd's purse, or plantain stalks, and every second day give about the equivalent of half a teaspoonful per bird of sponge cake slightly moistened with sherry. Continue this for a week, and give nothing else in the way of food. In the drinking water during the same time give six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for three consecutive days, and every alternate day for the rest of the week, and on the alternate days during the latter period give four drops of aromatic sulphuric acid. After this time add about a fifth part of the bulk of summer rape to the Canary seed for staple diet, and every third day give a pinch of mixture of hemp, inga, maw, and towards the end of the moulting season a few grains of linseed amongst it. Every second day give a little green food, and twice a week only a little plain egg food, or sponge cake (not with sherry), or a scrap of bread and milk. In the drinking water for the second week give six drops of tincture or gentian and two of tincture of steel. Keep the cages scrupulously clean, strewn with gritty sand, out of reach of draughts, and allow the birds to bathe freely. I would not advise you to move the birds to any outdoor shed whilst the moult is pending, and so near. In many cases it is already well in progress. After it is over, and the weather favourable, the change would probably prove beneficial, provided the shed is free from draughts and damp, and properly ventilated. The samples of hemp and rape are both very good, the latter especially. The former contains a few rancid grains, but the bulk is of very good quality. Certainly, old rape seed, within reason, and provided it is properly stored and kept, is much preferable to new seed.

Brevities.

What Is It? (N.B.).—Judging from your description I should say the bird is a Cinnamon, though without seeing the bird I would not say so definitely. It is just possible it may be a Norwich Green. In either case, the white feather in tail would be a detriment to the value of the bird. Glad to know you now recognise the value of the deposit system.

Hen Plucking Young (South Devon).—Sorry I cannot give you more helpful advice, but there is really no remedy for a hen which plucks the quills off her chicks as fast as they appear. Prevention is the only practical thing, and if the young have left the nest this is easy enough by placing them in a nursery cage and hanging the latter on the front of the breeder so that the parents can feed the youngsters through the wires. If the young are not old enough to leave the nest, the only thing to do is to transfer them to a more careful hen or hens which have young about the same age. Tie a bit of thick ravelled string on the wires, and stick in a cube of rind of boiled bacon, and see if this will act.

Those Draughts Again (Novice).—Perhaps the chief reason the medicine you have used has not removed the effects of the bird being placed in a draught is that you have not taken proper precautions to prevent a repetition of this cause. See reply to "M. T. W.," and give the bird the medicine therein advised two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another week. Above all, see that the cause is removed. I should advise you to feed on a staple of three parts Canary seed to one part summer rape during moult in preference to the more elaborate mixture you are using, and reserve this mixture to give a little as an extra two or three times a week.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Young Goldfinches.

E. E.—If you take the young Goldies out of the nest you will, of course, have to hand-feed them until they can "pick" for themselves (I presume you are aware of this). They do not need anything in the way of "chemicals"; good food is far better than medicine. You should experience no difficulty in getting them on to seed. They do not require any "getting," in fact, strictly speaking, for like young Mules and young Canaries, they naturally begin to pick up for themselves when at the right age. When they are hopping about, the food should be given in a shallow, good-sized pan placed on the cage floor, and should consist of lightly cracked Canary, hemp, and summer rape seeds, with some maw seed and a few cracked groats (or very coarse oatmeal), and these seeds should be mixed among egg food. The proportion of seed should not be too high at first; but gradually increase it in quantity. When you see the young taking the seed freely, stop cracking the hemp. Of course, you will gradually reduce the quantity of soft food, until you can leave it out altogether. I also give seeding tops of shepherd's purse, and chickweed freely; they are the first things young birds will "nibble" at.

Young Linnet Mules.

Novice.—The young Linnet Mules (the cocks) will come a brighter colour with the moult. If intended for exhibition, then they ought certainly to be colour-fed. Don't take them away from the hen so long as they "call" to be fed (a wired slide may be between them, if desirable). Note the reply given "E.E." this week. Further, after separation from the hen, feed them on the lines advised this querist. As they get well on to seed, they should be fed more plainly than when just leaving "mother." At the same time they want to have a good proportion of seeds rich in frame-building elements. It is not necessary to give soft food of any kind if colour feeding is not being indulged in; a little once or twice a week does no harm, however. A few sunflower seeds daily (cracked only if necessary) are real good for growing Mules; likewise a few groats. They can be thrown on the sand-tray. The stock seed mixture should be: Canary and teazle two parts each, summer rape one part, hemp and linseed a half-part each, by measure. A little of the other seeds occasionally as "tit-bits" (especially maw). Seeding green food (not coarse leaves), such as shepherd's purse, chickweed, and groundsel tops, is excellent. I use them freely.

British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hard-bills" and "Soft-bills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

An Exhibition Redpoll.

J. S.—The "standard" of points for the Redpoll, as given in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, is as follows: Size, 20; shape, fairly stout, and to stand as erect as possible, 15; markings, all the markings to be clear and well-defined: those on the breast to be as plentiful as possible; the wings to be well carried, showing a distinct bar, 30; condition and colour deep and rich as possible, 25; steadiness, 10; total, 100. Replying to your questions, it does not necessarily follow that the largest bird will win. Personally, I think that in the "Lesser" Redpoll, size is quite a secondary consideration. I should imagine that the bird you have and describe, would be a very likely prize-winner; the dense, well-defined "bib" is a very good point in its favour. When house-moulted, the red on head and breast is lost, and judges do not "go for" birds showing this red in preference to others; just the contrary, in fact, though a good bird in field plumage stands an excellent chance of getting into the prize list. The correct, up-to-date show cage is the No. I size, N.B.B. and M.C. pattern Finch show cage, which any maker of repute will supply. The wires and inside woodwork should be very dark (holly) green; outside woodwork black.

Six about Waxwings.

W. S. Junr.—1. The Waxwing is, roughly speaking, about the size of the Song Thrush. They are difficult to sex; this was dealt with at length the other week by Mr. Finn in his "Ornithological Oddments" column. 2. Waxwings are "born tame," and no trouble to steady. They are not more generally kept because they are hard to get. The supply is very uncertain (most are imported from the continent), and this last year or two they have been very scarce. In my opinion they are very beautiful and attractive. 3. They are not seed-eaters at all, but insectivorous birds, requiring a good soft food mixture, with live-food, ripe, sweet fruit (such as bananas), and berries in season. You cannot have read recent CAGE BIRDS very closely, for there has been an article dealing with these birds; and I have myself in this column gone fully into their feeding. 4. They are thoroughly hardy, and there is a chance of breeding them in an outdoor aviary 8 ft. long by 8 ft. wide by 6 ft. high. 5. The price varies according to the supply. I do not know of any at all in the market at present. There were a few selling a month or two back at about 30s. each; extra good, well-caged specimens would cost you more. You cannot get a "nest of young"; they do not breed in England. 6. They are very harmless birds, I find; but have never tried keeping them with Zebra Finches, etc. I feel certain they would not hurt them; but big and little birds are best kept separate.

The Blackcap Warbler.

Mrs. Fane.—A healthy house-moulted Blackcap Warbler will certainly sing through the winter months, and you ought to get some music from the bird just purchased. They do not want keeping too warm; just protected from feeling the extreme cold of winter. The stock food should be that I recommend for small insectivorous birds, viz., powdered Osborne biscuit, four parts; best ants' eggs, two parts, dried flies and powdered silkworm pupæ, one part each; meat meal, half part, by measure. Take the quantity required of this, and mix it just crumbly moist with grated raw carrot, or finely chopped lettuce, watercress, or chickweed (use young leaves only), or cold boiled potato, varying it frequently. It is necessary, of course, to give, in addition, all the live insect food (flies, spiders, wood-lice, earwigs, small beetles, smooth caterpillars, green fly, ants' eggs, etc.) one can possibly obtain as in season. To the above stock mixture I frequently add, after damping, a teaspoonful or two of preserved egg-flake, or, more generally, part of a hard-boiled fresh egg, finely minced, and, occasionally, a little finely scraped raw lean mutton or beef. Good cream cheese is a splendid food, too; give a little, finely chopped and mixed, of course, with the above biscuit food, or just laid on top of it. Ripe fruit should also enter largely into the menu; banana, very ripe pear and apple, strawberries, grapes, elderberries, blackberries, raspberries, garden currants, etc., are all more or less appreciated—you will soon find out your bird's likes and dislikes. Remember that the Blackcap is passionately fond of fruit, either mixed with the soft food or, preferably, hung up in the cage, or wires, or, better still, given in a separate dish.

Concerning Mules.

Stocher.—1. You should ask some experienced fancier to show you how to distinguish buff Mules from yellows. It is the only practical way to acquire the knowledge; and even then only length of experience can help you to tell for certain. I can say this: If you have a young light Mule a "pale yellow colour" (vide your description), it is most certainly a yellow (or jonque, as it is termed). Buff light Mules (when young and non-fed) are more the colour of white notepaper than anything else. Of the dark Mules, you may have two buffs and one yellow, or two hens and one cock. I couldn't say for certain without seeing them; more probably, however, the former. 2. Goldie Mules do not show any "blaze" until they moult, which is in the back-end of the season in which they are born. Linnet Mules (and all others) also acquire their adult colours at this moult. The Linnet Mules you mention are "light" Mules, strictly speaking; but "spoilt dark Mules" would better describe them. 3. When the young are put into the "nursery" (when the hen is about to build again) she must certainly be given food as usual with which to continue feeding the young through the wires. The young Mules can be caged singly as soon as they can properly feed themselves. My own, however, I run into flight cages, so that they may have exercise. 4. I cannot tell the cause of the death of the Goldfinch; only a post-mortem examination could have revealed it. Maybe he ruptured some vital organ; say, broke a blood-vessel. I think this highly likely, seeing that the eggs were fertile; had he been ailing they would most likely have proved clear. Pleased to hear you have had a good season, and found our advice so useful.

Bullfinches and Tunes.

H. M. P.—As I have said in the past, I regret I have had no personal experience of teaching Bullfinches tunes. Have never had the time to devote to it. I have read of several fanciers (mostly lady bird-lovers) who have tried their hand at it, and the result has seldom been completely satisfactory. Only a small percentage, in fact, of the Bullfinches one tries to teach can be expected to become proficient. That fact is confirmed by the number of "broken pipers" (failures, to put it bluntly) annually sent over to the English market from Germany. The Germans (I believe I am correct in so terming them) are great at teaching these birds to pipe tunes. There are regular "schools" where they are taught, and large numbers of nestling (or hand-reared) Bullies are located therein. The birds are taught over a period of some months. A bird-organ or bird-flute (stocked by many English dealers), or ordinary flute or clarionet, are used to repeat the tune it is desired the birds should acquire. They should hear no other sound while the lesson is in progress, and the tune should always be played without variation and in the same time. Even when once thoroughly learned, it is advisable to play it over to them occasionally, and their memory should always be refreshed during the moulting period. The very early morning before the bird has had anything to eat, is the best time to give a lesson, during which he should be kept in the dark (say covered by a cloth). There is really no stated time each lesson must last—that is bounded more or less by the patience of the teacher—but a quarter of an hour is the minimum. The bird, of course, should be covered up several times during the day, and, when all is quiet and the bird settled down, the lesson be repeated. Some birds learn much more quickly than others (many, of course, not at all), and a tit-bit of some kind should always reward any attempt on the scholar's part to repeat his "lesson." Hand-reared Bullies are essential. If the pupil were not taken from the nest, he would have acquired the usual Bullfinch ditty. Hen Bullies, by the way, make just as good pipers as the male birds.

Brevities.

Young Lark Ailing (Coatbridge).—Your note is too brief to be of much help to me. Are you feeding the bird correctly, giving live food, chopped green stuff, and a really good insectivorous mixture? If it is any throat or mouth trouble, then giving for a few days drinking water coloured light red by the addition of a few drops of Condy's Fluid would be excellent. If it is weakness, then the need of better feeding is indicated.

A Swelling (Thrush).—You should get half-ounce of colourless tincture of iodine from a chemist and paint the swelling lightly with this twice daily, using a tiny camel-hair brush to do it with. Keep the iodine off the surrounding parts.

Two Items (E.J.D.).—1. The seed-mixture is good, but contains no teazle seed—a serious omission. Add half as much teazle as there is Canary seed. 2. The room would hold about 40 birds, but it is always best to keep well under the limit, especially so if breeding results are desired. Glad to know you like CAGE BIRDS so much.

In an Aviary (Marple).—In your four-foot indoor aviary a Canary, Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Linnet, and Redpoll should agree very well; the Greenfinch is doubtful. A Siskin would be better. Don't try to keep pairs. A Green Singing Finch and a Grey Singing Finch (foreign birds, these) would make an excellent addition; quite the best you could choose to meet your requirements.

Stopped Singing (Novice).—You have nothing to be alarmed at. It is safe to say that your birds have stopped singing because they are on the verge of moulting. This is quite natural, as the moulting season is now here; the sooner they moult the better, in fact, it is for them. Keep them in an equable temperature and out of all draughts. They will not sing again until the moult is over. Do not give too much hemp, but add a little teazle and summer rape seeds to their mixture.

A Thrush (Rellen, S.W.).—1. Treat the lump as advised "Thrush" this week. Are you feeding the bird aright, giving chopped green food, or grated raw carrot amongst its stock food daily? This may be the cause, inducing "over-heated blood." 2. Lack of vegetable ingredient may also be the cause of this. If there is pronounced straining when voiding the excreta, dissolve in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water as much sulphate of soda as will cover a shilling.

A Redpoll-Greenfinch Hybrid (A. Penman).—The Redpoll-Greenfinch Hybrid is far from being rare. Two or three were exhibited at the last Crystal Palace Show, but stood no chance against more attractive-looking crosses, such as the Siskin-Goldfinch, Redpoll-Goldfinch, etc. A large number of Redpoll-Greenfinch Hybrids have been bred from time to time.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S. M.B.N.H.S., etc.

Will Foreigners Eat Plantain.

Crystal.—I have seen Foreign Buntings eat these seeds, but cannot call to mind having seen the Ornamental Finches and Waxbills do so—groundsel beats, chickweed and more especially seeding grass being the green food most favoured. Plantain costs nothing save the trouble of gathering, and even if they do not eat it, it should give them beneficial exercise in picking it over. Plantain cannot compare with spray millet for Waxbills, etc. Plantain is ready for gathering when fully ripe, but before being dried up, it appears to be rather late this year. All Foreign Finches and Waxbills are, more or less, fond of ripe fruit, such as apple, pear, banana or orange—consult their taste.

Budgerigars Not Breeding.

F. J. Cockerton.—(1) I always prefer a box cage to any other type; it gives the birds a certain amount of privacy, and also makes them fairly secure against draught. (2) It will not be necessary to board up the front; fix a husk at each end of the cage. (3) Yes, considering that I have seen them breeding in an open cage, only 1½ ft. cube, in a crowded dealer's shop, they should succeed well enough in your room; it is, however, good practice not to pry into their domestic arrangements too much. (4) It is quite true that when a number of pairs are kept together they stimulate one another, and breeding results are quicker and better, but a single pair in your cage will ultimately settle down and breed freely. You will, however, have to exercise a little more patience than you would do if they were loose in a room, or roomy outdoor aviary. There is no royal road to breeding Foreign birds, however freely a species breeds; you cannot do with them as you do with Canaries—times and seasons are so very variable, birds have to get accustomed to climatic conditions. However, if you thoughtfully carry out the instructions given in booklet, your birds should ultimately rear you a fairly numerous progeny.

Mules and Hybrids.

Pharos.—(1) Many crosses have already been raised between various Finches, etc., such as Spice, Finch and Bengalese, Bronzewing and Magpie Mannikin, Grey and Green Singing Finches, Zebra Finch and Diamond Finch, Zebra Finch and Silverbill, and also others. I cannot call to mind any case in which the Java Sparrow has crossed with other species; you could try it with the Red-headed Finch. The Alario Finch, St. Helena Seed-eater, Grey and Green Singing Finches, have all crossed with the Canary. Almost any species of Serinus would cross with the Canary. I should say conditions, difficulty, etc., would be about the same as when crossing various British Finches with one another and also with Canaries; the element of uncertainty looms very large in such cases, yet successes are fairly numerous. Many people are very fond of an abnormality, and they certainly would have a value, provided the supply did not become too large, which is hardly likely. Note: When attempting such crosses do not overcrowd, it is almost inviting failure.

Foreign Bird Queriists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

Java Sparrows, etc.

H. C. White.—(1) The white hen, which is slightly splashed, will do well enough for crossing with a Grey Java, and should breed in any outdoor aviary unless it is very overcrowded. (2) Some individuals are very erratic with their first broods, but afterwards settle down all right. There may be two possible causes, parasites or mice; if neither of these probable causes exist, simply leave the birds to themselves and they will settle down a little later. It is quite true that naturally they commence to sit with the first egg. No, I should not mix clutch, neither should I be very curious. (3) I should say the yellow hen is very weak, and that the weakness is probably congenital. She will probably lay, but if things are as I suspect her progeny are not worth rearing; either keep her as a cage pet or turn her loose to take her chance. (4) In hot weather birds gape or yawn a good deal, and also when suffering from indigestion. Try Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water (one teaspoonful to each ounce of water) every third day for a fortnight. (5) Keep one or two turfs of grass handy, and put one of these in the aviary (it can be changed daily), after saturating it with water through a rose, the birds will come out at intervals and roll in this, and thus mitigate the effects of too dry heat; otherwise you are doing all you can to keep it cool. Under such conditions drop the husks from six to twelve inches from the roof.

Breeding Pairs for Aviary.

Beginner.—You do not give size of aviary, and I have not your previous query by me. Waxbills and Avadavats, while not hopeless, are very uncertain breeders save in large natural aviaries; they are, however, very handsome, and owing to their minuteness occupy scarcely any space, and do not interfere with the breeding arrangement of other birds. I cannot say how many you have room for, but Zebra Finches, White Java Sparrows, Long and Rufous-tailed Grassfinches are all fairly ready breeders in captivity. From your list, the Cut-throats, Silverbills, and Bengalese are those most likely to breed. Have plenty of twiggy branches on the back and sides of your aviary and fix your nesting husks, baskets, and boxes behind these. You would find "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1s. 1d. post free from this office) very helpful, several useful types of nest boxes are figured therein.

Budgerigar Holding up Foot.

Donald.—Many species of birds—in fact, almost all—when resting use first one foot and then the other, but if your bird does this when pausing in the midst of activity, feeding, etc., then I should certainly say either there is some sore or it is slightly strained; in the latter case it will be best to leave nature to do its own work, if the former it must be caught up and caged separately and its foot held in quite warm water, well cleansed, and any humour removed by gentle pressure, afterwards anointing with a little healing ointment. It will certainly do no harm with this bird to make its drinking water (glass or crock drinking vessel) just saline with Epsom salts, repeating this after an interval of three days. Let it have a small turf to play about with and supply seeding grass ad lib.

What Parrot?

Grove House.—It is an Alexandrine Parrakeet. You should always ascertain how it has been fed when purchasing it, and if the dietary is unsuitable then wean it gradually from same, as sudden changes are very harmful. However, diet it as follows:—Seed mixture, Canary, white millet, hemp, oats, wheat, sunflower and small maize in about equal parts; well mix and keep a supply continually in the cage. Also give ripe fruit (consult its taste), nuts, plain biscuit, and a little green food, lettuce, etc. Do not on any account give tea, coffee or milk slops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish in its cage and supply grit and water for drinking and bathing regularly. Give the bird, say, three doses of Dinneford's Magnesia (one teaspoonful to each ounce of the drinking water), with three days between each dose. When not giving the magnesia, and continue it for a month or more, make the drinking water the colour of pale port wine with Parrish's Chemical Food.

Finches and Budgerigars, etc.

Novice, Leeds.—Provided you can eliminate draught and damp, it will do well enough to keep the birds in; to mitigate extremes of temperature I should advise the covering of nearly the whole of the roof with felt. The Canaries and Waxbills, with Zebra Finches, Cutthroats, White Java Sparrows, Bengalese, Bronze-wing Mannikins, Long and Rufous-tailed Grassfinches, Grey and Green Singing Finches, Silverbills, Diamond Finches, and Red and Green Avadavats, will all agree together. You must have two enclosures, one each for the Finches and Budgerigars, the Finches' enclosure to be one-third larger than that for the Budgies. In the Finches' enclosure supply Canary, white and spray millet, and in small quantities hemp and sunflower seed, a few oats, and a little paddy rice also daily; green food, ripe fruit, and if they have young to feed a saucer of some good soft food mixture daily. For the Budgies supply Canary, white and spray millet, oats, green food (grass in flower, lettuce, etc.). Confine British birds to Gold and Bullfinches, Siskins, Redpolls, Twites, and Grey Linnets, only one pair of each. You must apply to our Mr. G. E. Weston for the dietary of the latter.

GENERAL.

Answered by the Editor.

Catching Mice (R. Hunter).—We have already utilised this idea.

A Letter (W. Reid).—The letter has been duly addressed and posted.

A Correction (F. Vincent).—We have duly made the correction, and regret the error should have been a "very annoying" one to you.

A Letter (H. A. Shelbourn).—The letter has been addressed and forwarded. Mr. J. Raynes is the secretary of the Cage Bird Union, and his address is 9, Richmond-road, Chorlton-cum-Hardy, Manchester.

With Bird-Lime (G. S. Alfreton).—We have frequently stated that there is no law which prevents bird-lime being used in the catching of birds at the proper season. The police (or other persons) can only take action if they can prove unnecessary cruelty on the part of the user.

Close Time in Warwickshire (Nuneaton).—The close season in Warwickshire extends from March 1st to August 1st. The open season, of course, will be subject to certain restrictions contained in the local bye-laws, particulars of which can be obtained at any Town Hall or the chief police stations.

"Cage Birds" Breeding Cage Labels are a

BOON TO BREEDERS.

Neatly printed in sets of twelve, on perforated gummed paper. They can be torn off, and affixed to the cage in a moment, and prevent all confusion in the breeding room. Useful alike to both small and large breeders.

A COLUMN FOR FANCIERS.

Appended are brief particulars of some of "Cage Birds" SPECIAL PUBLICATIONS for keepers and lovers of birds, with post free prices.

"THE HYGIENE OF BIRD-KEEPING." - 1/1
By W. GEO. CRESWELL, M.D.
A most useful manual, thoroughly treating of modern hygiene in bird-keeping, by the most eminent living authority on the subject.

"SEPTIC FEVER OR CANARY PLAGUE." - 7d.
By R. H. CLARKE, M.D.,
A very useful booklet concerning this dread disease. It is the only one published, and should be found in every bird-lover's library. Dr. Clarke has given the subject very special study.

"THE NORWICH PLAINHEAD CANARY." 1½d
By J. H. PAYNE.
A Lecture reprinted from CAGE BIRDS, delivered by this leading judge and expert before the London and Provincial Ornithological Society, and pronounced by all experts to be a most valuable pamphlet concerning the breeding of the variety.

BREEDING CAGE LABELS, 1d. doz., 7 doz. 6d
A boon to all breeders. Neatly printed in sets of twelve, on perforated gummed paper. They can be torn off, and affixed to the breeding cage in a moment, and prevent all confusion. Useful alike to both small and large breeders of birds.

CARD BREEDING REGISTERS, 1d. each, 4 for 3d., 9 for 6d.
For hanging up in the birdroom. Printed on suitable stiff card, they are ruled to hold a complete record of the breeding results of six pairs of birds; invaluable for future reference, to ensure that knowledge of one's stock essential to accurate breeding.

LIVE BIRD LABELS, 24, 3d.; 50, 6d.; 100, 1/-
For use when despatching live birds on journeys by rail, or to the shows, etc. Printed in red ink and gummed on back. The simplest, neatest, and best on the market.

NOTE PAPER & POSTCARDS, 250 for 2/-; 500 for 2/6.
Until further notice we have decided to supply below cost price artistic Memorandum Forms and stout postcards, with name, address, twelve words of particulars, and blocks of any special variety of bird at half cost for cash. Carriage paid to any address in the U.K. Our latest style of note-head and postcard has been universally admired, and we will gladly send specimens to anyone enclosing stamped addressed envelope.

BLOCKS OF BIRDS, 1/6 each, 5 for 6/-, or 9 for 10/-.
For inserting in advertisements and for printing memorandums blocks of all kinds of birds at above low prices can be supplied. Larger blocks to order at cheapest possible rates. These dainty little blocks immensely enhance the appearance of note paper, postcards, and advertisements.

PICTURE POSTCARDS, 1d. each; set of six, 6d.
The most delightful and appropriate postcards of Canaries, British Birds, and Hybrids on the market, executed in colours by Mr. H. Norman. Ideal for Fanciers' correspondence. All represent exact and correct show types and have accompanying descriptions. State which bird or birds are required, or whether a mixed selection is preferred.
The latest set is entitled, "Pairs Matched for Breeding"; very educational art postcards. Price 3d. set of 8.

ORNAMENTAL PLATES, 1/- & 1/6 each.
The following coloured plates of Cage Birds can be obtained mounted on stiff card and gelatined. This process makes them washable and gives them the handsome appearance and all the durability of framed plates under glass:—Bullfinch, Blackbird and Robin, Border Fancy Canary, Bullfinch Hybrids, Cinnamon Canary, Cinnamon Marked Yorkshires, Foreign Finches, Goldfinch and Bullfinch, Hybrids (popular), Lancashire and Lizards, Mules (popular), Norwich (Yellow), Parrakeets, Yorkshires. Price 1s. each. Crests, Desirable Aliens (Foreign Birds), Larks and Pipits, Norwich (Blaze of Colour), Wagtails and Stonechat. Price 1s. 6d. each.
Also a padded plate of KINGFISHER having all the appearance of a hand painting executed on ivory. A most charming ornament for brackets, occasional tables, etc. Price 1s. All are post free.
Why spend large sums on decorating the house with other pictures?

FANCIERS' PRINTING.

The Feeding and Keeping of Linnets in Health.

SIR,—Could any of your readers inform me of the best way to keep a Linnet? I have been much interested re the arguments in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, concerning Linnet singing in the north and south; but if these Linnet fanciers would give me their mode of feeding and keeping a Linnet in good health I would be much obliged.

SPARTIE.

A Question for Users of Long Clap Nets.

SIR,—Would any kind reader having experience in the working of clap nets, measuring from 15 to 20 yards long, kindly inform me, through your columns, how to prevent the "sag" or "belly" in the long top gearing lines of these nets? Do they need an additional pair of poles in the centre to keep them tight and well stretched out? If I pull the top lines extremely tight in setting them, the strain, in pulling the nets over, is very great indeed, and their speed is, I believe, lessened. If I set them in the ordinary way, everything works satisfactorily, except that they fail to lap over each other properly in the centre. Allowing a good overlap of 18 inches is one partial remedy, but the "sag" in the centre is an eye-sore under these conditions.

The Language of a Parrot.

Polly and the Shirts.

SIR,—Just a few lines re the letters on "The Language of a Parrot," which have appeared in CAGE BIRDS for the last two weeks. This is quite an old experience, not only of mine, but of every soldier who has had any experience of India. May I be allowed to offer a few more? "Pretty Polly dressed in green, going to 'Blyte' to see the Queen." "Blyte" in Hindocstani means England. Another is "Pretty Polly, pretty dear, all the way from far Cashmere." But how many of them see it (Cashmere)? These sayings of the Indian Parrot from the plains bring to memory the following tale:—Soldiers, as a rule, have "kit" inspection every month or so, the same being inspected generally by the officer in charge of the company, battery, or squadron. The captain who was inspecting this time happened to pass a man's bed with all his kit laid on it, and, of course, everything was in apple-pie order. But, just for curiosity, I suppose, he thought he would look at the shirts to see if they were in good order. He went to pick one up, but before he could do so Polly shouted out: "Shake 'em up, Captain; they're all rags." He wondered wherever the advice came from, as this particular man was away from his bed at the time. So he told the sergeant-major to find out who had said it so as to haul the man over the coals. You should have seen his face when the sergeant-major told him it was the Parrot; he nearly had a fit. Ever after that Polly was minus at "kit" inspection. In all my experience with Parrots I have never come up to one to beat the Indian "Plains" Parrot, and the reason is not far to seek, as soldiers teach them in their unlimited spare time during the summer and monsoon weather, when they may be procured as fledgelings, even building in one's own house as the Sparrows do in England.

The Yellow Bunting and its Haunts.

SIR,—The Yellow Bunting, or Yellowhammer as it is commonly called, is one of the handsomest of the Bunting family. It has but little song, and this is commonly translated into "a little bit of bread and no cheese." It is most plentiful in the agricultural districts, as it is particularly fond of oats and especially white oats. In the winter it can be seen in flocks in fields where there is stock feeding on hay, as they feed a great deal in frosty weather on the different kinds of grass seeds. They also like a little insect food, such as spiders, flies, and other small insects. It is a rather shy bird and is not often seen in the villages, except in very severe weather. It may be seen in the farmyards with other small birds. The Yellow Buntings are most commonly found in by-roads and lanes leading to fields where they generally choose their breeding places. The nest is built on banks under a hedge in some rough grass, and consists of dry grass, being lined with small fibres and horse hair. The hen lays about four eggs of a good size and rather heavily marked with streaks and spots, the ground colour being a dirty white. The birds commence breeding about the middle of May and continue until late in the summer. The Yellowhammers can be easily kept in confinement. They are very hardy and very clean in cages when they get accustomed to cage life. They are rather small eaters and their staple diet should be some good Spanish Canary seed (which they prefer to any other seed), with a few good white oats and a few sunflower seeds occasionally slightly crushed. They are also very fond of mealworms, flies, and spiders; those are the best tit-bits for taming the Bunting. They also make a very attractive addition to the aviary, as they are not at all quarrelsome; they may be kept with any other small birds. Their sex differences may be easily distinguished when the birds are in their adult plumage, the males showing the yellow markings on the heads. In the breeding season their heads are almost yellow, the females only showing faint markings on the head, not discernible except under close observation. The young resemble the females in their nest feather. It is a difficult job to get a good show specimen, as they differ so much in head markings, and this plays a prominent part. I prefer a bird with a good stout body and full neck and head. The back should be of a rich chestnut colour showing the dark lacing distinctly, the wings showing two distinct yellowish bars. The head should be a very deep yellow with good black markings running from the base of the top mandible well back over the head; there should be another running from the eye, and yet another from the base of the lower mandible well back round the head almost meeting the other markings at the back of the head. The yellow should be as clear and as bright as possible between the markings, and it should be well cut round the throat. The under part of the body should be of a rich yellowish brown, showing distinct markings down the sides. The birds can be much improved by being given a little colour-food; it brightens the yellow and gives them a good finish.

OLD FANCIER.

Prize-money at Dulwich O.S. Annual Show.

SIR,—Mr. Woolhouse's letter makes a lot of reading, though it has nothing to do with my letter, which was entirely concerning the statements emanating from this society. I was glad to see that I was not alone in my way of thinking. I should not have answered Mr. Woolhouse's effusion, only he asks for "assistance." He states that the unforeseen circumstance (weather) and, incidentally, the gate, was the cause of the deficit of £30. Did he anticipate an influx of visitors to the extent of 2,000 or more? My advice to this gentleman (and, I see, chairman of committee) is: "Learn to crawl before you walk, and learn to walk before you run." Take this as a motto for the ensuing year. If you can't pay the winners the money they are entitled to, write and tell them so. They will think more of you for that. Don't let them write and write without even a reply, and then, as a last resource, make you the cynosure of all eyes. I can distinguish between "grit" and "bluff," which is just where we differ. Fanciers generally only resort to the Press when all other measures fail. Don't guarantee anything without you are sure of meeting your liabilities. Most shows would be a success if they did not pay out. Don't let some have their winnings and some none at all. Don't brag, but be consistent. And don't threaten when you cannot pay the winning exhibitors the money you have owed them almost a year. Above all:—Play the game.

J. HALLIDAY.

SIR,—In reply to Messrs. Rodgers and Woolhouse, I learn from them that the special which Mr. Langley claims, has been won by Mr. Cory, of Birkenhead, so I see no reason to continue this controversy longer. I think that enough has appeared in your columns to convince the Fancy generally that it has been an oversight, which cannot always be avoided by the most careful. I am pleased that Dulwich O.S. have got the better of their difficulties, and hope their next show will prove a success. In conclusion, allow me to thank you for the way you have allowed us, in the columns of CAGE BIRDS, to clear up this error.

An Irish Fancier's Successful Commencement.

SIR,—In looking over your interesting paper, CAGE BIRDS, I came across letters by fanciers giving their success in breeding Canaries this year, and venture to let you know of mine. This is my first season, and I commenced with two pairs of Norwich Plainheads. In the first round I got one nest of three and one of six, and in the second round one nest of each six and seven (six cocks and one hen), making the total 22. Not bad for two rounds by a beginner, I think, and I have some nice birds in the third round. I must admit that I owe much of my success to the valuable information I have got from CAGE BIRDS, and I wish the paper the success in future that has attended it in the past.

LAWRENCE TAYLOR.

The Song of the Linnet North and South.

SIR,—Kindly allow me to thank Mr. George Rostron, and also "London Fancier," for replying to my letter re quality song versus racing in Linnets. Mr. Rostron's letter is extremely interesting, but he made one little mistake—i.e., he says: "Linnet Fancier" wants to know if the birds in the North have their own song, or whether they are trained under a Roller Canary or artificial instrument, etc. It was "London Fancier" asked this question, not me. Mr. Rostron also seems to think London racing and London time singing is one and the same style. They are entirely different, for racing is a style in which the birds have to sing what the Londoners call good notes, and get as many chalks for good songs as possible in the 10 minutes, while the time singers sing anything, good, bad, or indifferent—mostly the latter two—and the bird stopping first is "out," or, in other words, loses. All the other part of Mr. Rostron's letter is strictly true and very interesting. Re "London Fancier's" letter, he says he don't want any telling as to what part of the country I come from. I presume he thinks from the North. If so, he is mistaken. Now have a try, "London Fancier," and say just what part I do hail from, as you think it is so easy. With the exception of this, I agree with the greater part of "London Fancier's" last and interesting letter, and thank him for giving particulars of the London style. He says that the best London Linnets he heard about 30 years ago, and adds that they were trained under the Skylark, Titlark, or Woodlark, but the old fanciers dying, this strain was lost. Of course, I believe all "London Fancier" says, but I should like to ask, why could not Linnets be kept and trained under Titlarks, Skylarks, and Woodlarks now as well as then, and thus get the best song back, even if there was only one or two good birds out of twenty? "Linnet Fancier" seems to agree with the Northern men in one thing, i.e., he admits the Linnet is a mocking bird and takes its song from other birds (principally from the Skylark), but Mr. H. W. Barnard boldly comes out in last issue with the assertion that the Linnet is not a mocking bird, and has its own song from the nest. Somebody must be wrong; who is it? One thing I know is, that where the Leeds and Blackburn men get one "crack," the Londoners get a score. So if scarcity counts for anything, then the Northern men have the best song birds; for even if Mr. Rostron does have his fresh caught birds from the South, I dare say he only gets an occasional good bird out of several dozen. Is it not so, Mr. Rostron? Was sorry to hear Mr. Barnard say that if Northern style of quality singing was introduced to London he for one would stop singing. Not if it was found to be superior to your own style, surely, Mr. Barnard, for I presume that even in Linnet singing you would sooner go forward than stand still? Mr. Barnard claims the Northern birds are only fit for bird catching. But further on in his letter he claims that his own birds, with a totally different song, are just as good for catching as the Leeds birds are. I don't think so. I have heard it said that any song will do for bird catching. If so, how is it that a good catcher is worth more pounds than an ordinary bird is worth shillings, or even pence? I have caught thousands of Linnets in my time, and I find one good bird is worth a hundred ordinary birds. I claim that any bird that can "sing down" a flock of Linnets and keep them down, or twist them about as he pleases, must have some good notes.

LINNET FANCIER.

SIR,—Kindly correct a printer's error respecting the Linnet song North and South. It should be "widdle," "widdle," in place of "biddle," etc.

H. W. BARNARD.

My Cockatoo.

A Young Fancier's Quaint Pet.

SIR,—I think perhaps your readers might like to hear of my Cockatoo. He is a Solomon Island Cockatoo. He is my own, and loves me so much. I carry him about, and sometimes he sits on my shoulder and arranges my hair, and kisses my face in his way. He will follow me about, and runs fast after me if I pretend to run away. Sometimes I sit on the floor and read, and he will turn the pages of my book and try to do as I do. If I have a newspaper he gets under it and rolls on his back and plays about just like a kitten. People are so surprised to see how clever he is and how much he loves me. He talks well, too. When he sees a stranger he says, "Hullo, hullo!" He also says, "Good old Polly," "What's the matter, then," and a lot of other things; also some naughty words when he's angry. People scarcely believe it till they hear him. I saved my money and bought him such a lovely, big, square cage. I thought he would be afraid of it, but when he saw it, he went in and shut the door! Sometimes we shut him in, and then when I am ready to play with him I let him out, and we have such fun. He rolls on my lap, and I tickle him and pretend to arrange his feathers. When I go out he shouts a horrid sound, "Raa-raa"; that's because he doesn't want me to go. And isn't he pleased when I come back. One day I will paint his picture and send you. He does look so funny. He puts one wing right in front of him and lays his head on it. Sometimes he dances, and throws his funny little crest forward and looks so quaint that everyone laughs to see his funny ways. I cannot tell you half what a clever bird he is. Mother has some nice birds, too, a lovely green Polly with a long tail and red shoulders. She is very clever, too: whistles well, says "Wake up, Mary," "What's up," "Give Polly a kiss," "Polly won't bite," etc. Mother has green and yellow Budgerigars, and Love Birds, too. I shall have lots of birds when I grow up. She also has a nice Thrush, Black Game Fowls and Pigeons. But I love Cockie; he is best of all. Cockie is a beautiful soft white, with lovely pink under his crest, and at the bottom of his feathers and by his beak. I hope my letter is not too long; I could go on writing heaps about all the birds. We like to read CAGE BIRDS so much.

Goldfinches Rear their Young in a Bird-room.

SIR,—As we have been on our holidays, I am sorry I could not write further last week about the Goldfinches mentioned in the letter published in CAGE BIRDS of July 31. I have seen my friend, Mr. Skinner, again. The Goldfinches are now doing well for themselves, and the old ones are nesting again. The flight in which they were bred is 4ft. long by 3ft. wide by 3ft. high, wire-netted at front. They have been fed on egg and biscuit three times a day with dandelion seed, thistle heads, niga seed and hemp daily. We would like to know if your readers have known of any other Goldfinches being bred in a flight.

G. BACKHOUSE.

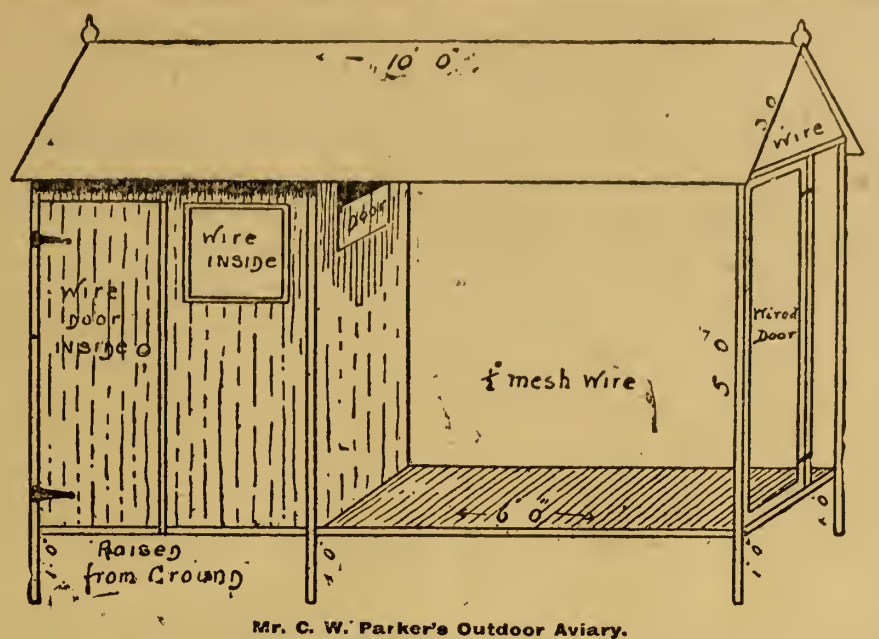
The Sensational Scottish Disqualification Case.

SIR,—Kindly allow me to make a reply to the letter of "A Scotchman to the Heel," which appeared in last week's issue. I beg to state that it is Mr. McQuiston's case we are interested in at present, and are only anxious to see the "mystery" explained properly. Perhaps, if the truth were known, "Scotchman" ought to say as little on the subject of borrowed birds as anyone. I don't understand what he means as to the Bullfinch being shown under a different name, and "shelved" for the same reason at a local show the Saturday previous to Dalmellington. It wasn't shown at Dalmellington show in Mr. Gemmell's name, as he wasn't allowed to enter any birds. But it was entered along with others in his mother-in-law's name. It was well enough known, however, who the birds belonged to. But would any sane man show a stained bird two Saturday's running under the same judge? "Scotchman" refers to the Battle of Bannockburn, but would it ever have been won if Robert Bruce had been as wanting in pluck as Mr. McQuiston? I should be sorry if any one thought of me as McQuiston's enemy. But why doesn't he come forward and explain his very conflicting statements and satisfy everyone? I am like a great many more when I say that I think everything is very unsatisfactory. It takes some people a long while to get "out of the wood," but both Mr. Gemmell and Mr. McQuiston seem determined to "lie low and say nuffin'." Is there more in this than meets the eye?

LOCH DOON.

The Cuckoo in Confinement.

A Bird that Withstood the Winter.



SIR,—I have read with much interest your correspondent's account of his tame Cuckoo. I am quite a novice in bird-rearing, never having had anything whatever to do with them till last year, when, amongst other birds, I had a young Cuckoo brought me in a Sparrow's nest. His eyes were not yet open. I fed him on milk and egg beaten up, out of a teaspoon first, and afterwards on chopped raw beef, hard-boiled egg, boiled greens and other scraps, much as your correspondent does (I do not give any live things, such as grubs, worms, and flies), and then an occasional caterpillar when I can get it (first killing it). When I first had it I was often told it was a Hawk, and that if it was a Cuckoo I should certainly not rear it through the winter, the young birds leaving the country usually in October. I took the bird to a well-known bird stuffer in Worcester to settle the point as to its species. He at once pointed out that a Hawk has quite a different beak, being curved, though the plumage of a young Cuckoo is somewhat similar. To-day I have carried him the half-mile on my finger to ask him to substantiate the fact for me that the bird is now about 15 months old and most intelligent and healthy. I also have a young one, I suppose about the same age as your correspondent's. Cuckoos have a great deal said about them that is not true. It would make you laugh to hear how even educated people fancy they only change their note and plumage and turn into a Hawk during the winter. I entered my Cuckoo in the November bird show here in Worcester. He attracted a good deal of attention. I am also interested in your other correspondent re his Thrushes, as I had one which I often let out with a couple more, as they all appeared to want to nest. In the end the female bird laid two eggs on the 9th of June on my back kitchen table. I moved them carefully into some hay, but the cock bird stocked them. Then I had a Thrush of last year's rearing also, that mothered two Cuckoo nestlings till they turned round and fought it for the tit-bits, when I removed them and gave it three more to rear; two it pecked on the top of the head and killed; and it had also pulled all the feathers from the top of the other one's head by the morning. I at once took it out, and whilst deciding where to put it opened a little Chaffinch's cage. To my astonishment the Chaffinch at once began to feed it. She has brought it up, and they are still in the same cage—the little mother and her big baby. They know their names. Of course, I had to help feed that one, but not those reared by the Thrush, which I have called "it," as I always thought it a hen, but lately it has been singing quite fine. The Chaffinch would crush hemp seeds about a dozen at a time, laying them out in a straight row; then she would pick them up one after the other very quickly, and in some mysterious way lodge them all on the outside of her beak, then stand on tip-toe to reach her big baby's mouth. I was often afraid during the winter that the Cuckoo would die. I sat up several nights with him at different times. I kept his cage covered with a blanket at night, and had a little oil stove burning slightly, so that no frost should get to him. He was often on a clothes line that runs across my little kitchen, and is at this present moment casting an inquisitive eye at me from his favourite perch. I find a difficulty in getting his wings and tail properly feathered; they are very brittle, and so soon as one or two grow nicely he breaks them off, and they bleed. The rest of his plumage is in good condition, and I am hoping that as he gets on in his second year he will be all right in these points, too. I sincerely hope your correspondent will be successful with his Cuckoo. One does not like to get fond of anything and then lose it. I love my birds, and I am quite sure they love me in return—even the Cuckoos. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success, which that interesting and useful paper deserves.

E. M. SARGEANT.

Mr. T. Jones, taxidermist, Worcester, also writes to say that Mrs. Sargeant brought the tame Cuckoo to him the early part of last summer, and that he has seen it on several occasions since. On Saturday, July 31st, she carried it on her finger quite half a mile to show him; also a young one taken this season locally and given to her. They are both lively and healthy. The faulty plumage, says Mr. Jones, is probably due to the limited space in the small cottage—living room—where other birds are also free and in cages, and the food it may require, which is the present study, as the plumage of the young Cuckoo is not quite so good as when taken from the nest a few weeks ago. The very careful nursing and feeding, and no doubt the company of the other birds, tended to the keeping of the Cuckoo through last winter. Although exposed a little at the bird show in November it came to no harm.

SIR,—It gives me much pleasure to corroborate the letter of Mrs. Sargeant regarding the young Cuckoo which she has successfully reared and kept through the past winter. To-day she has carried the bird, perched on her finger, some distance through the somewhat crowded streets of our city from her home to the museum. It is, I should say, about fifteen months old, having assumed adult plumage. It is exceptionally tame (flying readily on to my shoulder and perching on my hand), and it appears quite lively and healthy, with the exception of the loss of some of its tail feathers, as mentioned by Mrs Sargeant. It would be interesting to know if any of your readers could give records of any Cuckoos that may have been kept alive in England during the winter months. I have myself tried on one or two occasions, but could never keep them alive longer than November.

Mr. C. W. Parker's Outdoor Aviary.

Mule and Hybrid Breeding in an Outdoor Aviary.

An Interesting Account from Boston (Lincs.).

SIR,—Seeing several very interesting articles in CAGE BIRDS on Mules and Hybrids, I thought perhaps this letter might interest some of my fellow-fanciers. In the spring of this year I built an outdoor aviary and stocked it with three Greenfinches (hens), one Siskin hen, three Canary hens, one Bullie hen, one Goldfinch cock, one Linnet cock, and one Redpoll cock. In the early summer I noticed with pleasure that the Redpoll had paired with a hen Greenie, but the eggs, when laid, were unfertile. The Redpoll then took a fancy to one of the Canaries, and put her to nest. One of the eggs hatched, but the young one died when two days old. In the meantime the Redpoll had put the Greenie to nest again. She laid five eggs, two of which hatched, one two days after the other. The elder one seemed to receive no attention after this, and died, but the other got on beautifully until the second day, when to my dismay the mother had a fit and died. I was in quite a predicament, as in my birdroom I had not a single hen under which I could put the young one. As a last resort I tried hand-rearing. The bird is now three weeks old, and getting on admirably. I might mention it came out of the nest feathered when twelve days old, and seemed quite independent of my feeding; but occasionally it takes feed even now. All the birds in the aviary were caught during last winter, and I notice to-day (July 24th) the Bullie has laid two eggs in her nest, built in a bush of teazel. She is paired to the Goldie, who pays every possible attention to her. In my birdroom, from a fresh-caught Linnet paired to a hen Canary I got three Mules, one almost clear, but this died the second day after hatching. Two seasons ago I bred a clear Goldie-Canary-Mule except for a blaze mark. This lived to be eight weeks old, and then died suddenly. I have now got this preserved. May I wish you every success with your valuable paper, which I have found of very great assistance since first I started taking it some few years ago, it having in this time given hints on everything necessary in our interesting hobby. I have been very successful breeding mealworms according to the Editor's instructions. Should I have more success I will write you at some future date. I enclose herewith a sketch of my aviary.

C. W. PARKER.

Y.C.C. of Ireland Matters.

SIR,—In your issue of last week a letter appears from Mr. M. J. Mulligan accusing me of having received specials 14 and 16, and with not paying the same to the winner. I wrote to Mr. C. J. Mulligan, the winner of above specials, and told him I had not received one of them, and I gave him the donor's name and told him to write to him; the other special was paid by a contra claim against Mr. C. J. Mulligan for a special of similar amount promised by him to the club! Now might I suggest to Mr. C. J. Mulligan that when he next writes to the Press, he ought to sign his own name to the letter, and not put Mickey's name to it. The lad (?) says he shall teach me my business. Well, in birdy matters the Dublin fanciers would not learn anything to their advantage from the Sligo clique. By the way, has Sligo paid the special, etc., appearing in the schedule last year? One thing I can promise C.J.M., that when such is entrusted to me, I don't hold on to it for 15 months.

R. F. DUIGENAN.

The Testimonial to the Late Secretary of the Crested C.C.

SIR,—It has been represented that this presentation should take place at the next annual general meeting of the C.C.C., when Mr. Tyson will be surrounded by old friends from all parts. If no objection is taken to such a course, I propose holding the fund (which amounts to within one or two shillings of £11) until such time.

J. S. CLARKE, Hon. Sec.

A Remedy Wanted for a Fatal Disease.

SIR,—I hope this letter will give "Old Breeder" and "Cymric" a little insight as to why they are losing their birds, myself being only just in time to stop two of my best Linnets from dying of the same complaint. If their water utensils are of brass, let them do away with them and use glass instead. My two birds that I nearly lost had water vessels of brass, and those of all my other birds were made of glass. I noticed the former used to do the same as "Old Breeder's", etc., birds. But I took their brass water vessels away and put glass ones in instead, and now the birds are in full song again, and will sing with anyone's bird.

G. B.

SIR,—This applies to the "Remedy wanted" for the following correspondents: "Cymree" and "F. W. Balls," as I suspect bird fever and kiln-dried seeds. Scour all cages, thoroughly disinfect with crude carbolic, and change all seeds; also scour and disinfect all food vessels.

BERT.

SIR,—I can sympathise with those who are seeking a remedy for the "fatal disease." I have had a most disastrous season regarding breeding. I started with over 60 birds, and at present have 21 old ones. I also got 78 on the sticks, young ones; now I have about 50. I have lost birds that I gave all sorts of prices for, from 5s. to 30s., besides what I bred myself, and I had some good stock birds. I lost a lot of hens during incubation, and also with young ones. They only seemed to be a few days from beginning to end. They would puff out and eat fairly well, and then snuff it. They seem to be in good condition, for I have operated on several, and all the organs seem to be healthy but the lungs, and they seemed a bit shrivelled and spotted. I sent one to Mr. North to be examined, and his opinion was pneumonia, brought on by the bad weather we have been experiencing. I have tried all remedies, and all ways I could think about. I removed them into a fresh room, and gave it a good clean, cages and room also, from top to bottom. I thought sometimes it was septic fever. If it had been, they would have gone faster, for I only lost one out of 15 in a flight cage. With the bowels, etc., being all right I think that proves it was not. I put them back in the attic again this week, and put ½ lb. rock sulphur on some fire at night and let it burn. I went up to have a look about two hours after, but one smell was enough. I fully expected finding all dead in the morning, but not one. So that I am hoping that I shall get good results from it. I got the idea from some old fanciers who had done it and did not lose any more birds that season. The attic I keep them in is a big roomy place, with plenty of light and height, and not draughty, so what was doing it is a mystery. If I am lucky enough to have a few left I shall have another try next season. It has not been a good breeding season upon the whole. A lot round here have not done anything like well, with a lot of clear eggs and young ones dead in the shell; also a lot of old ones have died. I know one fancier who has not bred one young one, and I believe he had 10 hens. The average seems to be from 20 to 50 from 12 hens. Still, this does not dishearten

An Amateur's Experience with Lizard Canaries.

By G. J. WESTGATE.

I was first attracted to the Lizard variety of Canaries through noticing a report of some show where an exhibitor was disqualified for exhibiting a Lizard Canary which was alleged to have been faked or stained. I followed the case, reading the statements on both sides, which appeared in the Fancy Press, and afterwards (when treating myself to attendance at cage bird shows) gave the Lizard classes (if there happened to be any) particular attention, and so got a real liking for this beautiful spangled variety.

Only a One-year Show Bird.

I knew lots of "birdy" men, and remembered with surprise that none of them kept Lizards, and I asked one of these fanciers the reason why. He replied that the Lizard was only a one-year show bird, and as he was a large exhibitor of other varieties, winning prizes season after season, sometimes with the same team of birds, from his point of view the Lizard would not pay.

As I never exhibit any birds, however good they may be, his views had no weight with me, and I determined to keep and rear Lizards if I possibly could. I now carefully scanned the lists of Canaries advertised in CAGE BIRDS, and bought one Lizard here, another there, and so on, until I had apparently a nice lot, considering the haphazard way in which they were bought.

I soon saw the reason why they are only one-year show birds, for at the second moult the feathers come tipped with grey, and this spoils them for exhibiting, though they are alright for breeding.

When I was buying my stock each bird was always of the year before last; that is, a two-year-old bird, but I swear I had some "patriarchs" amongst mine. Anyhow, as everybody gets "done" at some time or other, I intended to make the best of them. I had purchased both gold and silver Lizards, and was not sure how they should be mated, so I wrote to the query expert of CAGE BIRDS for advice, and received a reply in the very next issue, which I followed when the breeding season commenced.

Results of the First Season.

The results of the first season were poor. I was breeding from four pairs only, having sold the rest of the birds. Number one pair had four nests, but only one fertile egg in each, and I only reared two birds from these. Number two pair reared four in the first nest, and beauties they were, all clear capped; but the parents refused to feed the next two nests of young, and as I had no feeders I lost them all. Number three pair reared two, then three, and again three, eight in all.

Number four pair was my extra choice pair; I had given quite a high price for the cock bird, as he was from the strain of a noted exhibitor who had won innumerable prizes; and I had great hopes of this pair. The first nest contained all clear eggs. The next nest of eggs the hen began to sit on after laying three only, and before these were hatched the cock bird died.

I eagerly waited for the hatching day. If I obtained three or four Crystal Palace winners (from the eggs) all would still be well, but the result was one bird, strong, and healthy, and looking just like a Linnet, as it had no cap. I was greatly disappointed, for "on paper" this was my best bird.

In my dismay I wrote again to CAGE BIRDS, and received a reply to on no account be downhearted or despise this bird, as uncapped Lizards generally excelled in spangling, and I am glad to say this was the case with mine. This finished my first year's experience, and I sold off all my "ancients," keeping my fifteen young ones for the next season's breeding.

Better Results, Better Hopes.

I will not weary you with details of my next year's results, but simply state that I did well, yea, extra well—plenty of eggs, almost all hatching out into strong and well capped birds, commanding a ready sale at good prices.

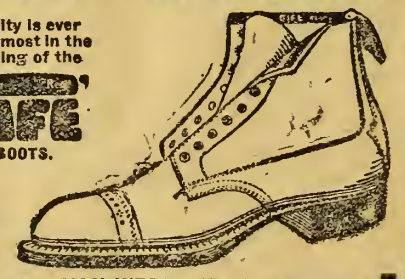
When you take an interest in your birds and are with them much, how you get to know each bird and notice their little peculiarities! One hen will not feed her young if you are watching. Another, although she had the choice of three or four kinds of food, will feed her young exclusively on crushed hemp seed; some never quite get over their shyness, and flutter a little if you go near them; others are just as unconcerned (I had one so quiet that I have often taken the cage front off and cleaned the cage while she was sitting).

I have never had a hen which refused a bath in hot weather, but I had a cock bird which hated "tubbing" as a tramp does, never voluntarily having a bathe, and the few times I sprayed him he always moped for the rest of the day.

At a bird show in the north, I once came across an old man looking at the Lizards. We got into conversation, and he appeared to know a lot about Lizard faking, for he told me some strange tales—how birds could have their feather tips darkened, their moons touched up, and a five-year-old bird made to pass muster for a young one. I jokingly asked him if they could put new heads on them. He said he wasn't sure about heads, but he knew for certain they could put new tails on. However, this was years ago, he said, and such things were not done now, though personally he saw no harm in it, for didn't they dress and trim poultry and dogs for exhibition? Then why not Canaries?

Some of the Lessons Learned.

One of the few lessons I have learned is, not to sell too many of one's stock birds, even if tempted with a fair price. Sell them if you can spare them, but not otherwise. I once sent five hens on approval to a buyer who wanted only two. He kept the five, and paid me promptly for the lot, but it crippled me for that season's breeding, and I had to buy new stock myself.



Another good thing is to have a pair or two or feeders. Lizards sit, and rear their young just as well as other varieties, but a pair may possibly refuse these duties just when you specially want a nest, and it is here that the value of feeders comes in. I use Seifert Rollers, and when they are not rearing Lizards, they are rearing their own young, which come in useful when one's friends want a nice yellow singing Canary for the drawing-room cage.

In conclusion I may say that this variety (not being overdone) pays well. An advertisement in CAGE BIRDS always brought me more enquiries than I had birds to sell, and my last word is, if you are in doubt about anything pertaining to birds write straight away to CAGE BIRDS and rush to get the next issue for your reply.

ORNITHOLOGICAL ODDMENTS.

By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S.

Author of "The World's Birds."

The Sulphury Tyrant.

This name sounds like a journalistic paraphrase for Beelzebub himself, but it is really the book-name of one of the most interesting and widely-spread of South American birds, and I am mentioning its owner here because I was told the other day that people who had lived in its own country often expressed a wish to keep their old friend over here. This surprised me, for it used to be easy enough to get these birds a few years ago, and I always thought they had gone out of the trade because not sufficiently in demand. Almost the last I saw, about 1903, were offered to me for five shillings each by the dealer who had them, and they were all—five of them—in perfect condition except one which had a broken tail; now it would be hard to get a single one for the twenty-five shillings.

Unjustly Neglected.

The Sulphury Tyrant is a bird which is a great deal more worth keeping than a good many which are much more freely imported; he is a striking-looking bird, as big as a Thrush, brown above and yellow below, with a black-and-white head, which bears a golden crest, usually concealed. He has the general shape and habits of a large powerful fly-catcher, but is a bit of a Jack-of-all-trades! He does not despise mice and young birds if they come in his way, and will even trespass on the Kingfisher's preserves, and snap up small fish when he gets a chance, while fruit is freely partaken of in season. He is conspicuous wherever found, and his loud three-syllabled call has given him many popular names, "Bien-te-ves" (I see you well) in Spanish, and "Qu'est ce qu'il dit" (What does he say?) in French, while English people have contented themselves by simply imitating the note without trying to translate it, and call him the "Kiskadee," at any rate in Demerara, where it is the commonest bird. His recommendations as a pet are that he is exceedingly easy to keep, showy, and very knowing; the specimen at the Zoo, which has been there for years, although not strong when received, has been known to fly at and pinch his keeper's ear when the accustomed mealworm was not forthcoming, and his tameness greatly endears him to the public.

The Kiskadee.

Public Favourites.

There is no doubt that for aviaries which are to attract general attention not enough has been done with the big foreign Soft-bills, such as these birds, Troupials, Mynahs, Barbets, Jay-Thrushes, and the like; they are so lively and showy, and are not so very much more difficult to keep than seed-eaters, as they are not delicate feeders. Room, of course, is what they chiefly want, and given that, they can be relied upon to be of much more interest, both popular and scientific, than the collections of Finches, Doves, Quails, and the other monotonous types of birds, which so many people are contented with. Of course, we must cut one's coat according to one's cloth, and the last-mentioned birds are suitable for small spaces, which is a great consideration; but then they are so often kept where both space and means would justify a better collection.

American Robins in England.

As an example of the way in which aviculturists stick to the old familiar ruts may be quoted the attempt which is now being made to acclimatise the fine Thrush known as the American Robin in Surrey. I would welcome foreign birds of almost any sort over here, but really I think if anyone is going to spend money on this sort of thing they might try something rather more striking than another sort of Thrush; we are so well off for Thrushes here as it is, and a very monotonous family they are, as far as appearance and habits go. The best American bird to acclimatize would be, I think, the lovely Red Cardinal; it is a Finch, it is true, but of an utterly different type from any of our own, and could not fail to be popular. However, I wish the Robin enthusiast good luck, and, in order to enable readers to recognise any of these new Robins they may see, I may mention that the bird is about the size of our hen Blackbird, grey above and brick-red below, with a black head marked with white about the eyes and throat. The hen is very like the cock, but the young are quite different, looking like dark-coloured young Song-Thrushes.

British Foster-parents.

A good many of these American Robins have been reared in the open by placing eggs laid by birds confined in aviaries in the nests of our Thrushes and Blackbirds, and this is by far the best method of introducing a foreign bird when circumstances render it practicable. The eggs of the American Robin, by the way, are of a bright unspotted blue; but anyone finding such eggs in a Thrush-like nest must not too hastily assume that they have been produced by these new introductions, as the Song-Thrush and Blackbird both occasionally produce clutches of eggs of this unspotted type.

A Nesting Note Correction.

By the way, I have a correction to make in the note on Indian Mynahs nesting at the Zoo which was published recently in this column. I spoke of these as the common or House-Mynah (Acridotheres tristis) of India; but I misunderstood what the keeper told me; the birds are really the Indian Bank Mynah (Acridotheres ginginianus), and their nesting is a record for this species in this country. The Bank Mynah, sometimes called Red-eyed Mynah by dealers, is a grey bird with buff markings on wings and tail, and orange-red bare skin round the eyes. In the House-Mynah, which is larger, the body-colour is brown, the wing and tail markings white, and the skin round the eye yellow. This bird has the nesting habits of our Starling, while the Bank Mynah burrows in banks like a Sand-Martin. Young of the small grey-headed or Malabar Mynah (Temenuchus pagodarum) have also been reared successfully at the Zoo this year, to a great extent on artificial food. Some young greywinged Ouzels (Merula boulboul) have also been reared, and in this case also the supply of live food given was not enough to rear the young entirely. It must be remembered, however, that Zoo birds have the advantage of being kept in very large aviaries, and being very "steady" through seeing so many people, so that everything is in their favour.

Country Rambles

Guisborough and District "Priory" C.B.S.

Having nothing of interest to relate concerning our recent ramble owing to the wet weather, I enclose the following verses, sent to me by my brother-in-law, who, being our guest at the time, joined the ramble.—G. ATKINSON, hon. secretary.

Of all the rambles e'er I went,
Conducive to impiety,
Commend me to the one I spent
With Guisborough Bird Society.

The morning opened dull but fine,
At noon it rained a touch;
But I felt glad when, brother mine,
You said, "It won't be much."

But you're no weather prophet, George,
They'll never make you clerk;
The thought struck me when in the gorge,
He's meant it for a Lark.

Water was very wet that day,
But you got wet, too; so
Altho' you'd had me for a Jay,
You'd not much caws to Crow.

Yours was a (Water) Wag tale, lad,
Which nearly I did Swallow;
Was it on nest, was't not too bad,
Eggs-pecked-in me to follow?

If you Wood pecker day like that,
Our feelings gay to harrow;
Next time you do, I tell you flat,
With me you'll have to Spar, oh!

Now may I beg you e'er I end,
Behave with all propriety;
May friendship and good luck attend

Yorkshire C.C. of Scotland.

The first annual picnic of the above club took place on August 7th to Lochwinnock. The ideal weather conditions brought out a good number of members and friends. Friend Braidy was out in full war paint, "a pistol in each pocket," and, needless to say, the company didn't feel altogether comfortable until these were discharged. The party arrived at Lochside Station shortly after three o'clock, from which a walk of about 15 minutes brought us to Lochwinnock, one of the prettiest little villages in the West of Scotland. After a short time spent in looking round, a march was made for the Glen, where a good two hours were spent in go-as-you-please fashion, when suddenly the bracing air seemed to remind the company of the two-mile walk back to tea. However, this was accomplished in good time, and after the inner man had been replenished by an excellent tea, the rest of the evening was spent in the usual harmonious manner, and came to an end all too soon. The party arrived back in Glasgow shortly before ten p.m. after a most pleasant and enjoyable outing, which was voted by everyone a complete success, and will certainly not be the last of its kind held under the auspices of the club.—FRED BOWMAN, hon. secretary.

The African Firefinch is not a difficult gentleman to cater for. He prefers a plain diet of millet. He is inordinately fond of fresh ants' eggs and flowering grass, and all the aphides you can gather for him. When people buy Firefinches out of a dealer's box cage, take them home and turn them straight out into a big, and by comparison, chilly bird-room, they are solely to blame if the birds die. Such people remind me of the man who murdered his father and mother and then invoked the mercy of the Court on the ground that "he was an orphan."

My Firefinches showed their appreciation of my humble and humane methods, by doing what no African Firefinch had ever done before—they went to nest. They selected a cocoanut husk about a foot from the ground for their future nursery, and warmly lined it with feathers. They grew quite fierce in the defence of their home; though I don't think the other birds took them very seriously. Who would fear an African Firefinch? My great dread was that some other birds would appropriate their shell and drive them away. Birds have a nasty habit of doing this, especially in a mixed collection. Maybe their humility saved them, for most birds like to nest as high as possible.

I cannot tell you what the eggs were like—white I expect—as I am never so silly as to look at my nests, but the little hen sat excellently, and after thirteen days I saw the cock begin to visit the shell, and so I hoped there might be youngsters about. I did not like to expect too much of African Firefinches, and I have had so many disappointments that I never allow my hopes to mount too high.

Presently I was cheered by hearing little sibilant sounds from the shell; so that all was clearly going on well. Many people would have gone stamping about and looking at the nest, and would thereby have lost a brood. I did nothing of the sort, but maintained a supreme unconsciousness, and I had my reward. Virtue always does. One morning on entering the bird-room I heard a great commotion; all the little birds were gathered round the husk, and looking more closely, I was delighted to see two strange little creatures sitting on a bough, the centre of all this "street crowd." They were tiny little things, snuff-coloured, with just a dash of red on the rump, and little black beaks. They evidently caused as much surprise to the bird community as they did to myself, and as I gazed upon my little treasures I was reminded of the interview between Madame de Stael and Mr. Bowles, the writer of sonnets, when stopping at Bowood. When she complimented him on having come to see her, although he had sprained his shoulder, he said, "Oh! Ma'am, say no more, for I would have done a great deal more to see so great a curiosity!"

The breeding of African Firefinches secured me a medal, but I took care to have witnesses, who could testify that they had actually seen the birds, for some people are so "skebdikel," as Hans Breitmann used to say; I felt there was a danger lest some should say of me what a graceless undergraduate did of the late Dean Farrar. In his exam. paper he wrote, in reply to a question about the life of our Lord, "These facts are not recorded in the Gospels, and there is no allusion to them in the Fathers, but they are fully detailed by Dean Farrar."

Candidly I should not say that the African Firefinch is a delicate bird, if treated sensibly; if treated in any other way, no bird is more so. This, of course, is only my opinion, and I may be mistaken, as Mr. Gladstone once said. I am quite sure that if only people would treat Firefinches sensibly, they would be rewarded amply by the way in which the price would go up. Birds are only three-and-sixpence a pair so long as they die off like flies.

The colour of an adult cock Firefinch is a brilliant crimson; the back a little brownish in shade; down the sides of the breast are some tiny white spots like pin heads. The beak is red, and the legs flesh colour. The hen is a sober little snuff-coloured bird with a patch of scarlet under the tail and a few white spots on the sides. The young resemble the hen, but have black beaks at first. All have white eye circles, giving them the appearance of wearing little glasses. Dr. Greene says that these little birds will breed with the most perfect confidence. This is not so. I don't suppose half-a-dozen Firefinches have ever been bred in England. I know mine were the first, and I do not remember to have read of any since.

To keep Firefinches in health remember that they are very largely insectivorous, therefore supply them with ants' eggs, maggots, and aphides. Also bear in mind that they need something to sleep in. A cocoanut husk will do as well as anything. When acclimatised they need no heat other than that of an ordinary unheated room. I kept mine for several years in such a place, and they were always in perfect feather. Everything depends on gradual hardening off. Festina lente is the motto for Firefinches. Don't be in too great a hurry. More haste, less speed.

I know I never felt prouder than on the day when I saw my first home-reared Firefinches, and pride is a fine comrade sometimes. A friend who came to see me, looked at my treasures, and, putting up his eyeglass, asked for the name of those "common-looking little brown birds"; but there, some people haven't got the feelings of a broomstick!

Chapter XXXIII.—My Crimson Wings.

It is no small undertaking to embark on an untried ship, upon unknown waters, in the teeth of opposing gales. And yet that is the position of the aviculturist as often as he takes up some hitherto untried specimen. This was my case, at any rate, when, many years ago, I determined to keep Crimson Wings. A friend of mine, who then lived at Southport, had a particularly fine pair, and as he was moving into a new house down south, he wrote and asked me if I would buy them, as he felt sure they would have a good home. Needless to say, I joyfully accepted the offer. The price asked was, I consider, very moderate for acclimatised birds; so far as I remember it was £4 10s. for the pair.

I received them about the end of July, and my friend told me that they had tried to nest, but that the young had been forsaken when half grown, as the birds had fallen into moult. Of course I knew that hope, so far as breeding was concerned, was dead for that year; so I did not trouble much about them beyond putting them into an aviary by themselves, where they soon made themselves quite at home. It is not safe to put big Parrakeets with them, as at the breeding season they are excessively spiteful, and their great size and strong cruel beaks would prove exceedingly formidable in battle. The hen once bit me, so I know what it feels like from actual experience.

Things happen slowly at Micklefield, from the grasping of an idea to the pace of the church choir over hymns. Life here is no vulgar learning step, but the stately measure of the minuet. Delights are deliberate and have lingering ends. A hen would scorn to hatch a chicken with the indecent haste of her sister in the next parish. My Crimson Wings were the exception to the general rule; they were what Mrs. Hackett would have spoken of as "stocky" birds, dull and apathetic except just towards evening. Most of the day they spent in dozing, with occasional rousing up for a meal. Now and again they would give utterance to loud discordant notes for a few seconds, and then once more lapse into gloomy silence.

I may say in passing that Crimson Wings, if put out at the right season, are perfectly hardy, and can stand any sort of weather; so that their owners need have no anxiety on the score of health.

Wild Bird Life.

Notes on the Sedge Birds.

After a few days of sunshine the water in the wheel ruts, and small pools on the farm roads become dried up, and the birds of the fields have to seek other places at which to slake their thirst. Where a tidal river is within easy distance the larger birds appear to prefer to drink at the pools of water left upon the marshes by the receding tide to drinking the fresh water of the stream. There is much to interest near the river about noon upon hot days. Birds drink frequently, and journey from the fields and woods many times during the day to their selected drinking-place. Partly hidden by the sea wall, we have a grand place for observation. Upon one side is the wide stretch of salt marsh-land, through which runs the river; on the other are the fresh marshes, well watered by springs, which keep the dykes and waterways ever full. Here and there patches of reeds fringe the borders, occasionally expanding into big clumps where the gaps widen; here the reed birds are for ever alert, passing from stem to stem into the centre of the beds, their course marked by the swaying of the feathery tops as they progress. If the watcher remains quite still, they soon return to the edge again, in a half-shy, distrustful manner; or if pressed too closely they will flit along the stream, flying low, half hidden by the tall growth. Among the reed birds the Sedge Warbler is the most interesting. His pointed beak and head, his beautifully-mottled back, and his long legs make identification easy. This beautiful little warbler is for ever clinging to the reeds and coarse herbage of the marshes, for doing which his long, strong legs are well adapted. Here we have an example of the perfect way in which the bird is fitted for his mode of existence. Compare him with the Spotted Flycatcher, a bird whose habit is almost the opposite; the latter is either sitting contentedly upon a post or rail, or is using his long, strong wings in catching his prey. The legs of the Reed bird are nearly twice as long as those of the Flycatcher, although the Warbler is rather the smaller bird of the two. The wings, again, are quite the opposite, the Flycatcher's measuring quite an inch more in length. In bird-life we have many examples of the adaptation of structure to habit. Who among us, unless we had been clutched by a lusty Magpie, would think his ordinary-looking legs and feet could hold so tightly?

A Bird that Swims.

Although the Corn Crake is a land bird, and frequents grass meadows, it is able to swim when it likes to do so.

The Dipper's Home.

The Water Ouzel or Dipper is essentially a water bird. It seems to be a part of the stream it inhabits. It sings loudest where the rushing waters make most noise, and where the spray dashes over the rocks it builds its mossy home. And so securely is the nest fastened, and so well does it blend with the surroundings, that only a trained eye can detect it. It is round in outline, with a neat hole in the side it is fresh and green, and wholly composed of the choicest mosses. It is one of the marvels of bird architecture.

Danger to Young Waders.

The parents of water fowl have an anxious time of it after the young are safely hatched. For pike, trout, big eels and predatory birds are on the look-out for them. When they run over the half-submerged water plants, the fierce fish watch them eagerly, and if they slip off the leaves the pike have them at once. Two or three of a brood will disappear before the mother bird is aware of it. Rats are great destroyers of young water fowl, and where these are at all plentiful, a whole season will pass without a single bird arriving at maturity.

The Eerie Swifts.

During the long summer evenings the screaming Swifts gambol in the air. There is something eerie in the way these long-winged creatures fly and screech round the dark barns and buildings that they haunt. Their bullet-shaped bodies, weak legs, and long wings testify to their great powers of flight. From daylight until after sundown, they are on the wing, they are always full of energy, restless and excitable. Swifts are the last of the Swallows to arrive, and the first to leave. They never appear to increase nor to diminish; two white eggs as a rule form a clutch, and they rear only one brood in a season.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard.

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 12 words, 4d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

REMEMBER THIS.

When you buy catching appliances from me you get things that are of real service to you. For years past I have publicly invited anyone to have appliances on approval from me, test them side by side with others costing more money from other dealers, and if mine were not better value at less prices, to smash them up and I would refund their money in full. Could I afford to make this astounding offer unless I knew full well that it is impossible to get better articles than I sell? Clap nets, made from genuine ½in. mesh thread netting, 3 yards long, 5½ft. deep, 4ft. fly, 4/- pair; ditto 4 yards, 5/-; ditto 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-, 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-, 10 yards, 11/- per pair. All clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, are fitted complete with stave poles, pegs, and hemp lines, ready for immediate use. Hundreds of other sizes stocked. Bat-folding Sparrow nets, fitted on 15ft. bamboo poles, 5/6; ditto on 17ft. poles, 6/-; ditto on 19ft. poles, 6/6; Lark nets, 1½in. mesh, 15 yards by 10ft., 12/-; 18 yards, 15/-; 20 yards, 17/-; 25 yards, 21/-; 30 yards, 24/-; all geared and lined ready for use. Self-acting spring net traps, 24in. long 18in. wide, 1/-; ditto, 18in. long, 9d. each. These net traps are entirely different to any others on the market, are by far the largest and can be baited for Hard and Softbills at same time. The only net traps used by Mr. Jeffreys, who is probably largest Nightingale catcher in England. Single trap cages 6d. each; double ditto 1/- each; treble ditto 1/3 each, all with separate compartment for call bird. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages (Registered Number 23927), 1/6 each. These traps are guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught. Round topped call cages, all wire tops, 3d. each, 2/6 dozen; square topped ditto, all wire tops and every wire soldered, 4d. each, 3/- dozen. Real Japanese birdlime, guaranteed absolutely the strongest lime made, hold in all weathers, ¼lb. 6d., ½lb. 10d., 1lb. 1/6; sample, 3d., all post free. Kindly note: This is the genuine Japanese lime, not merely name copied from others, and I give written guarantee that it will hold any Hawk or Rook that flies, and at any time of year. Loose netting, made from genuine 60 S thread, ½in. mesh, 7ft. deep, 3d. yard; 9ft. deep, 4d. yard; 12ft. deep, 5d. yard, post free. Lark netting, 1½in. mash, 10ft. deep, 4d. yard post free. This netting is specially made for bird netting and must not be confused with the thick American cotton fishing netting often sold for bird netting for sake of extra profit. Every description of catching appliances in stock; send stamp for full printed list and hints on making bird nets; all nets sold by me are properly geared up so that they hang level and work true, not merely lines run through the netting, which allows wind to blow it all to one end. The men employed by me are not only practical net makers, but thoroughly experienced catchers as well, and so know exactly what is required for successful catching. Nothing is spared to make nets as durable as possible, and every pair guaranteed to wear 20 years. (Imitators please copy, as usual.) All sent on approval and money refunded in full if every satisfaction not given. See following unsolicited testimonials: "Cooperage House, Riverside, Goole. July 17th.—Sir,—I want another pair nets. I had a pair from you three years ago and they gave every satisfaction.—Yours, C. Chesney." "2, Hollingdrake Yard, Doncaster. July 19th.—Sir, —Please send following. I had two pairs nets from you before and was perfectly satisfied.—Yours, A. Clayton." "6, Jockey-street, Swansea. July 26th.—Sir,—Please send ¼lb. lime, same as last. I would not wish for better lime.—Yours, W. Rowe." "25, Cromwell-road, Rushden. July 27th.—Sir,—Please send following netting. A friend had some from you four years ago and it is as good as ever.—Yours, H. Kirby" "Ashover Rectory, nr. Chesterfield. July 31st. Sir,—Please send following. I have bought a good deal of birdlime and many birds from you, and always been satisfied.—Yours, F. Nodder." "24, Low Pleasance, Larkhall, July 31st. Sir,—Please send 1lb. lime. I have used yours since I started, and never yet lost a bird.—Yours, Geo. Alexander." "32, Wormgate, Boston. Sir,—Received nets safe and am well satisfied. You give good value for money.—Yours, J. Dring." "13, Church Walk, Kempston. Sir,—Netting to hand and it is best I ever bought. —Yours, W. Fearn." "Hill-street, Rannds. Sir,—I have had nets out and they give every satisfaction. —Yours, E. Haxley." "12, Bantling Old-row, Annfield Plain. Sir,—I have tried the birdlime and find it best I ever had or have seen.—Yours, B. McKenna.' "Rufford-road, Crossens. Sir,—Please send ½lb. lime. It is best I ever used, a certain catch every time. I only wish I had got it from you before instead of the rubbish I have used.—Yours, H. Jackson." "15, North-street, Exeter. Sir,—Clap nets I had from you are very satisfactory and work very well.—Yours, E. Bond." "Chancery-lane, Thrapston. Sir,—Please send another net trap. I set first one this morning and caught four birds.—Yours, A. Sutcliffe." "Clifton Cottage, Brownstoun, Ireland. Sir,—I am delighted with clap nets. They are a very nice pair and work like the wind and are a pleasure to pull over.—Yours, F. Hales." I have thousands of similar letters to above, which prove to you who is the best man to supply catching appliances. I believe in giving everyone the utmost value at lowest prices, and serving them so well that not only will they buy from me again, but recommend their friends to do so also. Send stamp for full list and compare prices with others. See British bird column for other advert.

HARRY ALLEN.
THE MAN WHO DEALS FAIR & HONEST

Last week's advert clearly shows I pay attention to my business and give true honest value for money; let it be large or small, it is always the same with me. I examine every bird myself before I send it out. Ladies and gentlemen, I have the following for sale:—Grand large healthy cock Linnets from same place as the champion Linnet of the world; without a doubt they are the finest singing Linnets ever heard for quality singing and time singing; you should hear the voices they have for running and turning; they are like German Canaries, they make the gamest Linnets I ever carried to a contest. Now, to meet all purchasers, these Linnets are at working men's prices; they are only 1/- each while they last. All Linnet clubs order at once Linnets taught by the world's champion, with new cage and my new book of secrets, 2/6; they are singing grand; a few extra picked birds, make sure winners, with a new polished cage and my new book of secrets and a packet of my special mixture, 3/6 the lot, they make the best voiced bird ever heard. I defy any dealer in the world to supply the same for the money. Deposit your money with the Editor of this paper, or send direct to me. My new Linnet book of secrets, 9d.; six packets of my special mixture, 1/-. Please read what others say:—"1, Office-row, Barrington Coll, Bedlington, Northumberland. Dear Sir,—I received birds all right and am highly pleased with them; they are a most satisfactory bargain. I have written to 'C.B.' to forward your money, which I hope you will receive quite safe.—Yours truly, Robert Harrison to H. Allen." 'Station-road, Mathersage, nr. Sheffield. Dear Sir,—I received Linnet safe and I am highly satisfied; other orders will follow.—I remain, yours truly, A. Wilson to H. Allen." So those who want real honest value for their money send with confidence to the largest British bird dealer in the world.—Harry Allen, bird specialist and judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

AFTER YOU'VE READ

the many unsolicited testimonials I publish week after week, can you wonder at the enormous trade I do? I believe in serving all customers so well that not only will they send again, but recommend their friends to do so, and for that reason I not only guarantee the description of my birds to be accurate, but also send them on approval on receipt cash or deposit system (of this paper) at my own risk, and unless in every way satisfactory, birds have only to be returned and back comes the whole of your money without question or comment. These conditions I faithfully carry out in every instance, so no one need fear not getting what he wants from me. I have a splendid selection of genuine Worcestershire netted cock Goldfinches, in perfect health and condition at 1/6 each, three 4/-, six 7/-, twelve 12/-; specially selected large cocks to moult for show or muling, and guaranteed now in song, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, twelve 16/-; two-year-old cock Goldfinch, splendid call bird, 2/6; two-year-old cage-moulted cock Goldfinch, used regularly as call bird, 5/-; cock Goldfinch Mule, 1908 bird, pure Finch notes, 5/-; hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/6, twelve 7/-; grand lot cock brown Linnets, all with nut brown backs, in perfect health, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; specially picked, larger cocks, for show, muling or contest singing, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6, twelve 6/-; two-year-old cock Linnet, call bird, 2/-. These Linnets are all netted in same part as the many contest winners supplied by me to the Linnet singers of Yorkshire, Lancashire, Durham, London, etc., etc. Cock Greenfinches 6d. each, three 1/-, six 1/6; grand lot young cock Bullfinches in nest feather 1/- and 1/6 each; adult cock Bullfinches, 2/- each; few grand coloured cock Bullies, been in aviary all summer and fit to win, 2/6 each; Redpolls 6d. each, three 1/3, six 2/-; splendid lot nestling cock Skylarks, equal to hand-reared ones, 1/- and 1/6 each; few very steady and in free song, 2/- and 2/6 each; Young German Canaries, as bred, sex not guaranteed, 2/6 couple, 12/- dozen; Goldfinch or Linnet cages, 6d. each, 4/6 dozen; Lark cages 6d., 8d., and 10d. each, 3/6, 5/-, and 7/- dozen; Redpoll cages, 3d. each, 2/6 dozen; 1d. tin drinkers, 6d. dozen, 3 dozen 1/3, or 4/- gross. Dealers please send stamp for trade price list of cages, sizes, and price will surprise and the workmanship will delight you. Thousands of testimonials from dealers throughout the country. See following letters: "29, Handel-street, Halifax. August 7th. Sir,—Please send young Lark. Send one like the one you sent ten years ago and it will do well. The old bird has died this winter. He was one of the best birds in this town.—Yours, B. Holmes." "Crossgates, Scotland. August 8th. Sir,—Received bird all safe and am highly pleased with same.—Yours, Geo. Hutton." "45, Vere-street, Cadoxton, Barry. August 7th. Sir,—Birds arrived quite safe. I am quite satisfied with them. They look fine birds and well worth the money.—D. Jones." "8, Kirkwhite-avenue, Long Eaton. August 10th. Sir,—Goldfinches arrived safe and in good condition, I am quite satisfied.—Yours, C. Kirkby." "10, Stepse-road, Stenbousemuir. Sir,—Please send following. The Linnet I had last year is singing splendidly.—Yours, C. Godfrey." "27, Farie-street, Rutherglen. Sir,—Please send another Lark. I am exceedingly pleased with last. It is a perfect gem, and as you say, worth going a long journey to hear.—Yours, G. Dick." "235, Firs-lane, Leigh, Lancashire. Sir,—Received Linnet alright and it is a grand one. People round here say it looks strange that you can turn out better birds than they get from other dealers. I tell them to trade with you as they know that every bird I have had from you has been good.—Yours, J. Cowburn." Kindly note! I do not sell Irish lime-caught birds as Worcestershire-caught, but every bird I sell is warranted to have been properly netted in the County of Worcester, and none are sent out until thoroughly on hard seed. As the wording of my advertisements is being copied by others, I beg to state that I have no connection with any other person or persons in the trade, and that my only name and address is to D. DE VON & Co., Ltd., 114, Bethnal Green Road, London, and WILLSONS Ltd., 37, New Oxford Street, London.

DIRECT FROM THE CATCHERS

Our agent in Buenos Ayres engaged a practical trapper in January of this year to go into the interior of South America; after travelling to Gran Chaco he engaged native guides, who went up country in order to trap rare birds and animals for

DE VON & WILLSONS.

The catch has proved very successful, and was shipped on board the ss. Veronese on the 20th of July. A photograph of the shipment was taken prior to going on board, which shall be sent to the Editor of this paper in the course of a few days.

We invite private fanciers and dealers cordially to inspect the shipment at both the above addresses, or we shall be pleased to forward list of stock on receipt of post card.

THE NOVICE PROBLEM.

The British Bird Fancier this Time.

A problem with some claim to kinship with the "novico problem" as known to Canary fanciers, was grappled with at the last meeting of the City and Suburban A.C.B. It was the problem of what could be done to render brighter the lot of those good but unsuccessful sportsmen who plod on season after season exhibiting British birds with but a meagre chance of getting higher than the "codding cards" against exhibitors with better opportunities of acquiring "certain winners"—and possibly moro spare cash with which to do it.

Tho credit for the scheme under notice is due to Mr. C. Prior, well known himself in British bird circles, who expounded it with "unmatched sauvity of language" (a felicitous phrase for which the society's hon. secretary, Mr. Wynn, is entitled to take credit). Mr. Prior said that his idea was to try to give the "rank and file" a footing amongst the cash and valuable special prizes put up for competion by the society. In no other society in the country, he was proud to say, had they such wonderful competition in the British bird section. At the City and Suburban, they saw in every class birds which won at the best of the open shows, including the Palace, and they had in their ranks many noted exhibitors. But he recognised that this was a fact likely to discourage the "novices," or, rather, those members who, though coming up smiling year after year, yet from various circumstanees were unable to get birds good enough to win them a prize at their shows. And everyone knew how pleasing and stimulating it was to now and again get a prize card on one's cages. He thought it was but sportsmanlike and fair that such exhibitors as he had in mind should be given a chance of winning prizes, and of standing in for some, at least, of the society's challenge cups. His idea was, broadly, to duplicate the existing British bird classes, and to put a price limit on them, say £1 for Goldfinches, and 12s. 6d. for all others—that was but a rough idea for the members present to discuss and adopt if it met their approval. Personally, he hoped they would carry it out, and show the way to other associations. No doubt many objections could be urged against the scheme (was there ever one yet free from them?), but he thought they could put their heads together and overcome them all.

Mr. Curtis, the chairman, said that, in his opinion, there was great merit in the suggestion. He felt sure there was none so selfish as to wish to deprive those who had consistently figured in the background of a chance to do better. He should be pleased to learn the opinions of those present.

Mr. Wynn, the hon. secretary, also said that he thought very favourably of some scheme on the lines indicated by Mr. Prior. It had always been his desire and aim to put specials in the way of the little exhibitor, but unfortunately it was generally quite impossible to ensure their getting into the hands of those for whom they were intended. He cordially supported the idea put forward.

Mr. Marley said that on principle he must oppose the suggestion. He thought it a backward move. There was nothing to prevent a champion from exhibiting in the limit classes; and the novice who won would most likely get his winner claimed—probably by a champion! He had looked through the list of members, and found they had 25, or over, champions in British birds. (A voice: All the more reason there should be novice classes). He conscientiously considered the scheme would fail to work properly.

Mr. Prior pointed out, in reply, that it was in the nature of an experiment, and they could amend or drop the scheme next season, as they pleased. He thought it their duty to at least try to do something for the "back-markers." None would be allowed to nominate birds in both sections for any cup; all such nominated birds must be in either the limit or the open classes. And no winner would be allowed to "claim in" his own bird. He did not think they had any member who would be guilty of unsportsmanlike conduct in connection with these limit classes. If they found such a one, then the Council could deal with the case on its merits.

After considerable discussion, in which Mr. Page and others joined, it was decided on a vote (there being only one dissentient) that nine extra British classes be added to the schedule (making 27 in all). They are: 1, Goldfinch (any nationality), price limit 20s.; 2, Bullfinch (any nationality), cock or hen, 12s. 6d.; 3, Linnet, 12s. 6d.; 4, Siskin Redpoll or Twite, 10s. 6d.; 5, Greenfinch, 10s. 6d.; 6, any species Bunting, 12s. 6d.; 7, A.O.S. Finch, 12s. 6d.; 8, A.S. Finch or Bunting, hen (except Bullie), 10s. 6d.; 9, A.S. Softbill, 20s.

Club Reports.

WEST OF SCOTLAND.

Usual monthly meeting held August 7th, in Nelson's Hotel, Glasgow, President G. Hunter in the chair. A committee of six has been appointed to get prices and samples of three new trophies for the Crests, Borders and Mules, same to be submitted at next meeting. Mr. Geo. Skinner and Mr. Hamilton Congan were enrolled as new members. At next meeting a washing exhibition will be given by a prominent fancier, and all young members should endeavour to be present. Special prizes will be given for young members joining this year. New members are still being enrolled.—GEO. SMART, Sec.

RUNCORN C.B.S.

Very successful meeting held on August 13th at headquarters, Lee's Temperance Hotel. There was a good number of members present. Mr. W. H. Cawley occupied the chair. The feature of the evening was a discussion on the moulting and colour-feeding of the Yorkshire and Norwich varieties. The principal speakers were Messrs. Guy, Cawley, Peck, and Boote, etc. These gentlemen enlightened the novices in regard to some of the secrets both respecting "Colour Feeding" and "Colour Breeding." The meeting was a decided success. Our next meeting will be held September 3rd.—T. P. BAXTER, Hon. Sec.

GRAVESEND, NORTHFLEET AND DISTRICT F.S.

Monthly meeting held at the Anglo-Saxon's Hall on August 10th, Mr. A. H. Terry in the chair, supported by a large number of the members. Several items respecting the open show to be held in the Market Hall on November 3rd and 4th were discussed, and it is hoped the fixture for this year will bring as great a number of entries as on former occasions. Bringing as it does a large number of visitors from neighbouring towns to Gravesend the society hope the townspeople will support them liberally in their endeavour to make this attraction an unqualified success. Several new members were proposed, and the society seems on the highway to having a successful future. The reports of some of the members go to prove that the breeding season has been very successful. Several other items were discussed relative to the hire of the society's pens, etc., and the meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman.—E. R. FOX, Hon. Sec.

CLAPHAM AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Well-attended meeting held at headquarters, Avondale Hotel, August 9th, for the distribution of prizes won at the young bird show on July 17th, Mr. Vale in the chair. The first business was to consider the various propositions for the great open show to be held October 27th and 28th, 1909. Valuable specials were given by a large number of members and friends. The committee hope to make the forthcoming show one of the attractions this next show season. Their guaranteed full prize money, it is hoped, will attract a full entry. Next the distribution of prize money and specials was gone through, the following members being most successful in Plainhead Norwich: Messrs. Rogers and Mazzoni, S. G. Sprules, T. G. Morris, and L. Priest; in Yorkshires: Messrs. A. W. Masters, Honeysett, G. J. Warley, H. Yeoman, A. C. Askew; in Hybrids: W. H. Vale, A. W. Masters, L. Priest, Rogers and Mazzoni, A. C. Askew; in Goldfinches: Messrs. J. Brighty, W. J. Honeysett, W. Francis; in Linnets: Messrs. W. Francis, L. Priest, A. C. Askew; in A.O.V. Finch: Messrs. W. Francis, G. J. Warley, L. Priest; in Siskin, Redpoll, or Twite: Messrs. A. C. Askew, W. H. Vale, W. Francis; in Buntings: Messrs. W. Francis, S. A. Sandy, A. Emms; in Hybrids, light: Mr. W. H. Vale; in Hybrids, dark: Messrs. W. H. Vale, J. Brighty; in Softbills: Messrs. W. Francis, A. C. Askew, J. Brighty; in Foreign: Mr. S. A. Sandy. After a few well chosen words by the chairman a most enjoyable evening came to a close.—A. C. ASKEW, Hon. Sec.

WALLSEND AND MID-TYNE C.B.A.

A lecture on the romance of British bird life was delivered by Mr. Birchley, author and naturalist, of Manchester, before the members and friends on Augnst 11th at the Station Hotel. There was a splendid attendance. The chairman, Mr. McDonald, extended a hearty welcome to the lecturer, and also to the brotber fanciers from Newoastle and other neighbouring towns. Mr. Birchley received a bearty welcome, and appealed to everyone to study nature. He showed how much more interesting a country ramble might become if only a slight knowledge of ornithology bad been acquired. References were made to the story of the Creation, and to the general babitat of most of our native birds, their wonderful ways and ingenuity in nest construction, their ways of love-making in the early spring, natural protection by colouration of egg and young, wby it is some young are born without covering of any description and others with a distinct dress of down, and tbe why and the wherefore of all these conditions. Among other matters Mr. Birchley dealt with were the pairing and parting of adult birds, tbe schooling of their young, the singing of birds by night and day, incuhation, etc. At the end of his lecture Mr. Birchley made an attack on the wilful and wanton waste of hird life along our countryside, and explained how the various species were gradually diminishing in number, and he asked those present to assist in tbe protection of our feathered friends and tbeir nests whenever possible. Mr. Birchley is an advocate of Nature study by means of a camera as against egg collecting or the taking of young birds. He also suggested that the close season be extended one montb longer to allow the young birds to have a better chance to mature. Mr. McDonald, in proposing a hearty vote of tbanks to the lecturer for his excellent lecture, at once opened up a discussion on the suggestion made by Mr. Birchley. Many of the most prominent fanciers present expressed tbemselves greatly in favour of the suggestion. The proposition was put to the meeting and carried unanimously, that tbe autberities be approached at an early date for the purpose of extending the close season by one montb.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting at headquarters, 60, Paddington-street, W., on August 9th, with Mr. A. W. Curtis in the chair. Letters were read from Messrs. R. L. Crisp, W Mugford, P. Adamthwaite, F. W. Thorpe, J. Simpson, and J. Goodall (apologising for inability to take part in the late cricket match), F. J. Green (expressing regret, tbrough absence from England, at being unable to give his lecture upon the Lancashire Canary), and from the secretary L.C.B.A. (on tbe United Kingdom Cage Bird Championship). Arising out of the latter, it was agreed that the association take part, and instructions were given to forward on the fee. Mrs. Crowder was elected a member, and Mrs. G. E. Weston was nominated for membership. The quarterly statement of accounts, showing an income of £72 14s. 8½d., an expenditure of £36 11s., with a cash balance of £36 3s. 3½d., was read and confirmed. For a donation of one guinea towards the funds of the pair show Mr. C. Prior was enthusiastically thanked. Sanction was given for an expenditure upon extra staging and class cards, rendered necessary by the growing needs of the association. A schedule of classes, consisting of 47 Canary, 4 Hybrid, 27 British, 6 Foreign, and 4 Selling was drawn up and agreed upon. The secretary gave a detailed report of the late cricket match against the "Early Birds" C.C. At the close instructions were given for the secretary to convey the association's best thanks to them for tbe use of their ground and materials, and to offer them a challenge for next year. Mr. A. J. Marley announced his intention of presenting an oil painting for a special prize in connection with the annual show, and was heartily thanked. A vote of thanks to the chairman closed the meeting.—V. WYNN, Hon. Sec.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held August 14th at headqnarters, Mr. Geo. Stead in the chair. There was a fair attendance of members, and several strangers, who had no doubt come to hear Mr. Mennard's address. Before this, however, the business of tbe clnb was got through in quick style. Mr. J. Nicholson, of Skipton, late of York, was elected a member. The secretary then read report of young bird show held July 10th, the financial part of which was very encouraging, showing a profit on show of £1 6s. 5d. The list of points scored at this and our June 5th show towards total points scored at our five shows this season proved very interesting. The chairman then called on Mr. H. J. Mennard to give his address on moulting and colour-feeding, which was very instructive, old as well as young fanciers being able to pick up a few useful wrinkles. Tbe questions which Mr. M. had to answer after bis address showed that our members were at tbe present "wrapped up" in the subject. A hearty vote of thanks, proposed by Mr. Medley, brought a very successful meeting to a close.—J. CHAMBERS, Hon. Sec.

SCOTTISH CREST CLUB.

Committee meeting held in Nelson's Temperance Hotel, Glasgow, on August 7th. In the absence of the president, Mr. Noble (vice-president) occupied the chair. Others present were Messrs. J. Young, C. Campbell, G. McPhail, G. Smart, and secretary. Circular and note were read from the secretary of Vale of the Leven open show soliciting this club's patronage, and also asking for terms to bold our annual club show in conjunction with theirs. But our patronage and club show having been previously fixed (for 1909) we could not grant tbeir request this year. A heated discussion took place regarding the Roberts' Cup. Disapproval was freely expressed at tbe cup's not being forward, and a sub-committee was given a free hand to deal with the matter. It was unanimously decided that we grant a silver medal to each of the nine shows where our patronage has been granted, and a gold medal for most points at these shows, only one bird in each class to count belonging to tbe same exhibitor. Mr. A. G. McDonald (Perth) was proposed as a member by R. F. Duncan, and was accepted. This being the last meeting this season, the secretary was instructed to call only another meeting if required to deal with cup business. A vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the meeting.—ALLAN CHALMERS, Hon. Sec., 69, Hillhead, Kirkintilloch.

Y.C.C. OF IRELAND.

Committee meeting held at Douglas Hotel on August 12th. The following were present: Messrs. O'Reilly, Dowling, Duigenan, Cloke, Carroll, Lambert, McDonnell, and Hyland (hon. sec. pro. tem.). Mr. Cloke resigned his position as chairman, and promised to give the club his best support in the future. Mr. C. A. O'Reilly was elected chairman pro. tem. till the annual general meeting. Mr. C. J. Mulligan (Sligo) tendered his resignation from committee some time ago in consequence of an attack made on the Sligo fanciers in tbe Fancy Press by our late secretary. About the same time Mr. Devins (Sligo) also resigned from committee. Both gentlemen having been written to to reconsider their resignations, and as they had not replied, it was decided to accept their resignations from committee. Tbe following is an abstract from Mr. Mulligan's letter dated May 22nd:—"As our secretary seems to pay no attention to any correspondence received from country members, or acknowledge same—of course, I am aware a secretaryship is a thankless job, but one p.c. would satisfy our country members even to say our letters would be attended to. I am sorry to bave to take this course as being one of tbe founders of the club. I am also sorry to say that a private matter to be settled by Y.C.C. committee and Sligo C.B.S. has caused a considerable lot of talk over the country, and I think Mr. Rooney had no right whatever to write to the Fancy Press on the matter without same first being brought before your committee." The commission appointed to report result of inquiry re election of chairman on March 22nd, 1909, stated that on counting the voting papers which Mr. Powell still has in his possession, Mr. Powell should have been elected chairman by 17 votes to 15 votes for Mr. Devitt. It was proposed and carried that the secretary be instructed to write Mr. Powell and ask him to reconsider his resignation. It was also proposed and carried that Messrs. McKenzie and Neal be co-opted members of committee to fill the existing vacancies.—J. R. HYLAND, Hon. Sec. pro. tem.

YORKSHIRE UNION OF C.B.S.

Silver Wedding of the President.

The council of the Yorkshire Union held a meeting on August 14th at the Market Tavern, Bradford, Mr. R. Halliday (president) in the chair. There was not a lengthy agenda of business, although one or two items proved to be very knotty to deal with. The correspondence which has taken place between the Union and the London Federation was read to the meeting, and was considered satisfactory, although as yet no official intimation has been received as to whether the Cage Bird Union have decided to throw in their lot with the Federation and the Yorkshire Union, to make a determined effort in endeavouring to obtain some of the concessions, which, in all fairness, ought to be extended by the various railway companies to the large section of exhibitors who have patronised them to a greater extent than they are prepared to admit. The show season is fast advancing upon us, and if anything is to be done, now is the time to get into business, and not delay until the season is well nigh spent, and then lament tbat no step has been taken in the matter.

The Great Horton O.S. laid a complaint before the meeting with regard to other societies holding members' shows at the same time as an open show was in progress, but the two delegates who were present representing that society had received no instructions how to act in the matter, and it was therefore proposed that the letter be laid on the table. Mr. W. H. Shackleton having signified to the secretary his intention of withdrawing from officiating as judge at Shipley Show, it was considered advisable to let the matter rest where it was until Mr. Shackleton wrote the secretary to that effect. The chairman asked if there were any new business which might be beneficial to the Union?

The question of delegates' expenses for outside societies, such as Bingley, Brighouse, Dewsbury, Halifax, Huddersfield, Hoyland, Keighley, Skelmanthorpe, Spen Valley and Wakefield was gone into, and it seemed pretty evident, judging by the discussion which followed, tbat something will have to be done in the near future to help these societies that send their delegates to the council meetings. Another item was in regard to new members, who have been returned to the Union since the handbook was printed, and the secretary signified his intention of sending a list of new members' names and addresses to the Fancy Press before the winter shows started in order that the secretaries of the various societies might have them when sending out schedules. This list will appear in the Press about tbe 11th of September; so will secretaries please send all new members' names on at once from this date in order that tbose names may be included in the list? I have already received several names of new members, and the membership of tbe Union is now the largest that has been recorded.

Mr. H. J. Chittenden brought a scheme before the council which is worthy of further consideration. It is patent to all who have had any connection with the workings of an open show that a tremendous amount of unnecessary work and expense is involved in the old system of sending out schedules to each member of the Union for all shows held under its rules. Not only is the expense of printing heavy (and this alone has been the cause of many an adverse balance), but the amount of labour entailed in addressing the schedules and dispatching them to the post office for circulation can only be realised by those who have seen the inner workings of a show. Mr. Chittenden's proposal is, that each society holding an open show should arrange its classification in time to allow of printing same in the Union Handbook, in the page opposite its members' names and addresses, which is a thing that could easily be accomplished if only the different specialist clubs would meet earlier—say, in April or May. Each society could arrange its classification when they knew whose patronage they had received, and by taking a full page advertisement in the Union Handbook at the nominal cost of 7s. 6d. the schedules would be in a compact form, and in the hands of every Union member even before the shows started at all; this would save all the expense and labour entailed in the sending out of schedules, etc. And there would then only be the cost of catalogues to meet, unless a society wished to publish a list of special prizes before the day of show. This could be done in the Fancy Press at a very reasonable cost. This scheme seems to me, after having given it due consideration, one which will be easily workable, and it only requires a start for it to "go"; in fact, I feel sure some of the societies will adopt it another year with many thanks to Mr. Chittenden for conveying his idea to the council.

This brought the business to a close. I feel sure every member of the council and the Union will agree with me when I extend on their behalf the Yorkshire Union's heartiest congratulations to our genial president and his wife on the occasion of their silver wedding, which event was celebrated last week. No more enthusiastic worker than Mr. Halliday has ever held office, and our sincerest wishes are that they may both be blessed with good health and prosperity, and live long to enjoy them. —H. HILL, Secretary.

HIGHGATE, HAMPSTEAD AND DISTRIOT C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting held at headquarters, August 5th, Mr. Geo. Gardner presiding. The Sec. reported to the meeting the condition of one of our old members, Mr. W. Shakespeare, who had been suffering in the Highgate Infirmary from erysipelas. He is now convalescent. The Sec. also informed members of the low water he was in and appealed to those present to give him support financially, however small. Mr. Gardner endorsed the Secretary's remarks A collection brought together £1 6s. 2d., for which the Secretary returned thanks. The next item was the distribution of special prizes, the Chairman remarking he was pleased to present the same to the winners, especially seeing that the ladies were to the front in taking the principal specials, showing they were able to hold their own in exhibiting. Mrs. Giddy received the £5 5s. silver cup won by her for most points at the annual, pair, and young stock shows, and the Chairman said he hoped she would have the honour of doing the same twice more, so as to call it her own property. Mrs. Weston's specials were four, a gold brooch for the best bird shown by a lady, hound volume for best bird in show, and two others for best birds in sections. The gold brooch was handed round for inspection, which made many wish they were taking something home for the wife—a wish, no doubt, the committee will bear in mind when alloting the specials for the coming annual show. Other winners of special prizes were Mrs. Wood, Messrs. Dewbury, Simpson, Lovegrove, Sparks, Pile, Martin, Bush, Penny, Hall, Bell, Milson, Street, A. Knight, Johnson, Dann, Winter, Mound, and Byne. The valuable services rendered by our Chairman (Mr. Gardner), also Messrs. W. Knight, Bush, J. Hall on the day of the young stock show brought them a very hearty vote of thanks. The Chairman, after a few introductory remarks on the Roller Canary, called on Mr. G. W. Dickson to give us his lecture. Mr. Dickson first handed round for inspection a couple of common German Canaries (those that so many people get taken in by), then he handed round a typical Roller Canary, one of the right sort. He also had on view the different types of singing cages for training and show purposes. Having dealt with the breeding, training, feeding, singing, and showing of some at length, he said he would be pleased to answer questions. Some were asked by Messrs. Johnson, Martin, and Gardner, and were readily answered by Mr. Dickson. The Chairman proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Dickson, the Secretary saying it gave him pleasure to second same, and it was carried amid applause.—G. H. NEAL, Hon. Sec.

SOME BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1909 SEASON.

Notes on the results of the recent breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others, and must be accompanied by the sender's name and address in every case.

Dunfermline and District C.B.S.

The results obtained by the majority of our members have been anything but satisfactory, but while visiting the various breeding quarters I have never met a downhearted fancier, which says a good deal for the earnestness with which the members carry on their hobby. The premier honours have been won by the Mule men, and all honour to these men for the splendid manner in which year after year they endeavour to further this very interesting, and at times not too profitable, branch of the Fancy. A fairly good number of our members have changed their residence this last term, which has not improved the results. John Morris, the veteran, led the way with four Greenfinch Mules, five Goldie Mules, three Crests, three Crosthreds, four Plainheads, and as John each year breeds a few songsters, his Canaries bring out a total of 40. Following well up came our worthy chairman, Mr. Rankine, with a substantial 38, including 20 Goldie Linnet Mules, and has 18 Sib-bred birds which he hopes will be useful members of the family in days to come. John had still a number of eggs to hatch from his well-known pair, and still a golden dream of that clear ain. Thirty-three is the total on the spar for John McGorum —14 Sib breds and 19 Goldie Mules. The pick of the lot is a variegated one, hut the Golf-drum room can put out a few grand dark ones. His Redpoll, which did a lot of winning last season, is still looking well, and with a decent moult should still adorn a show cage. Alex. Pringle has bred 30 Borders, which are looking well, especially two variegated Buffs and two Yellowa, which should stand high when placed on the bench. Sandy has introduced a new "hen," in which we hope he will find his heart's desire. Good luck to them both. He is a thorough fancier. By the way, Mr. McCaven, who has removed from the district, has bred 25 mules and Canaries. We are sorry to lose his services as auditor. Mr. Rolland has bred 15 Borders, all his "lonesome," two of which do his stock credit. Robert Culhertra has seven Sibs and eight Goldie Mules, hut I am sorry to record that he lost an almost clear Goldie Mule, but with both the parents there are hopes of another. He had still seven full muling eggs to hatch. James Wright has seven Goldie Mules and two Norwich. This is his first year's experience with an out-door hird-room. His shopmate, John Boyle, has had hard luck, only rearing five Borders, hut is still enthusiastic as ever. Henry Dunn has failed with his Hybrids this year, hut has quite a stock of Canaries. Our vice-president is going to stick to nothing hut British hlood for breeding on and after this date. Too much removing has upset the calculations of Messrs. Campbell Bros., who have only managed seven Borders and three Linnet Mules; hut they have still a few eggs to hatch. George Rae has had a very poor season, hut has great hopes in a Crest-hred he has pulled through. No hetter luck has befallen Henry Kemp, Alex. Bowie, Robert Bowie, sen. and jun., Frank Johnstone, and Henry Fletcher. But some of the members have been killing time hand feeding the British. At this Willie Malcolm and the "wife" combined have been fairly fortunate, and with his Willow Wren he will be heard of later. John Higgins, Hingreat, though out of the world a bit, is still keeping up a team of British. Now that the shows will soon be upon us everyone is anxious to get into a swing of tickets, when it will be hoped they will see their efforts of the recent season crowned with success.—R. THOMAS CAMPBELL, Secretary.

Twitterings.

All the prize money won at Stratton, Bude Show, held August 2nd, has been paid, writes Mr. S. J. Welch, joint secretary.

My last advertisement in CAGE BIRDS has been very successful, writes Mr. Dan Welch (Bengeo), as I sold all my Bullfinches.

Through the resignation of Mr. R. Davies I have been appointed secretary of the Leigh C.B.S., writes Mr. P. Hart, 79, Risley Terrace, Glebe Street, Leigh, Lancs.

Mr. Wilcock, of Eccleshill, Yorks., has been appointed judge for our show, to be held on November 17th and 18th next, writes Mr. P. J. Gaskin, hon. secretary Dundalk C.B.A.

The Houghton-le-Spring C.B.S. will hold their annual show in the White Lion Hotel on December 4th, writes the secretary, Mr. D. Hann. The judge will be Mr. Wm. Reid (Sunderland).

The Tunbridge Wells and Dis. F.A. holds a members' show on August 25th in the Friendly Society's Hall, when there are six classes for cage birds, with Mr. Wraight as judge. The show opens at 3 p.m.

Will show secretaries and fanciers please note that my address is now changed, and that all communications intended for me should be addressed to 48, Ogle Street, Hucknall Torkard, Notts, writes Mr. F. Jacklin.

Will secretaries (when sending out schedules) and others kindly note my change of address, from Norwich Road to 30, Purbeck Road, Bournemouth, writes Mr. M. Cook. I have never missed my CAGE BIRDS since first it came out.

The Grand United Metropolitan Show is to be held on Tuesday, November 23rd, at the Lambeth Baths, Kennington Road, S.E., and Mr. J. Robson has been engaged to judge the cage bird section, writes Mr. A. Watson, the secretary.

In the N.E.R. warehouse at Lincoln this year there have been seen two white Sparrows, with a yellow mark down the back. One was darker than the other, and one of the workmen (according to the "Yorkshire Herald") caught one.

The Bolton and Dis. O.S. has arranged a cricket match, writes Mr. H. Parkinson, the secretary, for next Saturday, August 21st, between the president's team and secretary's team, to be played at Bennett's Lane, Haliwell; wickets pitched 2.30 p.m. Members please attend and see the fun.

Of the mixtures before the public for the use of songster Canaries the "Sing Song" of Messrs. Liverine, Limited, of Grimsby, was introduced by this enterprising firm some years ago, and by leaps and bounds hurried on to the very first rank of recognised foods, and to-day it is undoubtedly one of the best. The firm are equally noted for their Lark and Thrush foods, seeds of all kinds, egg and fruit mixture, Griterine, tonics, ant eggs, flies and peppers. Readers should give them a trial.

I had a fine exchange through your columns last week. Mr. Welch (Etwall) advertised a collie bitch puppy (pedigree) for Canaries. I offered a pair of this year's birds or a last year's cockbird in full song, and Mr. Welch accepted the latter. I received the puppy, and I must say she is a pretty thing and everybody admires her. I only hope Mr. Welch is as satisfied with his exchange as I am. This shows what CAGE BIRDS does for those who wish to advertise or exchange. I wish the paper every success.—G. S. A. BATES (New Southgate).

The Year Book of the Southern Norwich Plainhead Club reaches us from the hon. secretary and treasurer, Mr. F. L. Matthes, and reveals the affairs of the club to be in a highly satisfactory state, the balance-sheet showing cash in hand £13 8s. 7d., against £5 2s. 8d. at the end of the previous season. A good programme has been arranged for the 1909 show season, and Mr. Matthes asks me to remind members that the cup fund is still £3 short of the required £10 10s., and to say that he thanks members and friends for the hearty response received to the present; he hopes he will be able to meet the heavy expenses of 1909.

The August number of "Bird Notes," the organ of the Foreign Bird Club, is as interesting as ever, and contains much that will prove instructive alike to the British and the foreign bird fancier. Mr. H. Willford's notes on "My Birds and their Doings," are continued; the beautiful Minivets form the subject of some remarks by Mr. D. Dewar, F.Z.S.; and Mr. T. H. Hadley tells of a personal experience with the Pectoral Tanager. Under the new section of "British Birds," Mr. Wesley T. Page concludes his article on the Bullfinch, Mrs. E. Warren Vernon deals with the hand-rearing of Flycatchers and Blackcaps, and Mr. F. Howe writes on the "Great Grey Shrike in Captivity."

"The Avicultural Magazine"—the journal of the Avicultural Society—for August contains a deal of interesting matter, both for the fancier and the ornithologist. Mr. F. Finn's notes on "Aviculture at the Zoo" and those on "Indian Birds," also by Mr. Finn, will be found specially interesting. Mr. E. W. Harper writes on the "Verditer Flycatcher"; this article is accompanied by an exquisite coloured frontispiece by Mr. H. Goodchild. "The Nesting of Pelzeln's Saffron Finch" forms the subject upon which Mr. W. E. Teschemaker, M.A., writes. Other articles include that by Mr. R. Phillipps ("The Pied Rock Thrush"), the one by Mr. Hubert D. Astley, F.Z.S., M.B.O.U. ("Nesting of Red-capped Parrakeets and a Hybrid Stanley Rosella"), and one by Mr. R. J. Pocock, F.L.S., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U. ("The Display of the Cock Ostrich"), which is illustrated. There are also a number of "notes" and correspondence, etc.

The Dulwich O.S. have, write Messrs. Woolhouse and Rogers, added a Canary section to their members' show, to be held August 26th. Messrs. W. H. Vale and F. Easterling have been engaged to judge. Admission is free.

Gateshead and District Cage Bird Society are, writes Mr. G. Buck, the hon. sec., anticipating having a record attendance on August 25th to hear Mr. Birchley, of Alrincham, deliver his lecture; so, fanciers, don't forget to come along; all are welcome.

Nesting Habit of the Chough.

The Chough is not easily disturbed, while incubating, and will sometimes refuse to leave the eggs even when a gun has been fired along the cliff. If driven off she is quickly joined by her mate, the two flying along the face of the cliff, "chaaing" excitedly. If the intruder remains perfectly quiet the hen bird will return to the nest, although within full view. Unfortunately for the species, the nest is easily located.

Oakengates Show.

In the report of Oakengates (Salop) Show, published in your last issue, I find you couple my name along with Mr. Ward's as being one of the secretaries, writes Mr. Arthur C. Brotherhood (Newport, Salop). This should be Brothwood. I shall be glad if you will kindly correct this little error, as I should be very sorry to deprive this hard-working official of one word of praise so justly due to him for his share in the excellent arrangements of their first venture.

New Society for Lidget Green.

A number of fanciers in the Lidget Green district, we hear, held a meeting on Monday, August 16th, to consider the formation of a cage bird society. A well-attended meeting was held, and it was decided to have a society called the Lidget Green Cage Bird Association. Subscription 3s. per year. Members' shows, etc., will be arranged later. The next meeting will be held August 21st at 87, Harlow Road, Lidget Green, where anyone wishing to join will be welcomed.

The Interfering Jackdaw.

Some observers are under the impression that the scarcity of the Chough has been a good deal influenced by the interfering habits of the Jackdaw. The daw is a lazy bird, and instead of building a nest for himself likes to appropriate the home of another. He is for ever roaming along the cliffs by the sea (instead of remaining inland as he should do). His prying, interfering habits and strong beak have been the cause of many more useful birds being turned out, and possibly clutches of eggs destroyed.

The Handsome Redstart.

One of our handsomest summer migrants is the Redstart. He is a small bird, but is beautifully coloured. He is to be found upon the skirts of woods, orchards and gardens, and is plentiful in the Forest of Epping, where the old trees afford good nesting sites, and plenty of food. The cock bird in full plumage is a lovely object, and makes himself conspicuous by flitting from branch to branch. He is an insect eater, and worms, beetles, spiders, flies and a host of small green caterpillars form the principal food, varied by berries and fruit. One of his local names is "Firetart."

Eagle Hunt in London.

Hoxton was the scene of an Eagle hunt on August 6th, the event being witnessed by hundreds of persons. The bird, which belongs to a soldier home from Gibraltar, was kept tied by a piece of cord. It bit through the cord and flew out of the window on to the roof. A man named Kerr climbed on to the roof, and after an exciting chase over the housetops captured the bird, amid the cheers of the crowd. The Eagle, which is seven weeks old, is, according to the "Globe," the size of a large fowl, with reddish-brown wings, which, when extended, spread about three feet. Its food consists of raw meat, and it eats about half a pound a day.

In Praise of the Nightingale.

In one of his books John Watson has the following passage in praise of the Nightingale: "To us the delicious triumph of the bird's song is in its utter abandon. The lute-like sweetness, the silvery liquidness, the bubbling and running over, and the wild gurgling jug, jug, jug! But to say this, and more—that the Nightingale is a mad sweet polyglot; that it is the sweetest of English Warblers; the essence and quintessence of song; that it is the whole wild-bird achievement in one—these are feeble, feeble! Unlike the songs of some of our warblers, hers can never be reproduced. Attempt to translate it and it eludes you—only the meagre skeleton remains."

Birds of Paradise.

The Royal Zoological Society, Amsterdam, is indebted to the Queen of Holland, patroness, for a fine male bird of the King Bird of Paradise, which has been placed in one of the aviaries in the Society's gardens. This bird we understand, is one of the splendid collection recently brought to England, for Sir William Ingram, by Mr. W. Frost, whose departure for the Aru Islands was noted at the time in our columns. Mr. Frost, who will be well known to many metropolitan fanciers, landed in England last week, after a highly successful trip, bringing with him 100 birds, the majority Birds of Paradise of various species. These this skilled fancier brought over in exceedingly fine condition. About one-half of the collection has been deposited at the London Zoo (Regent's Park), where it may be inspected. The remainder Mr. Frost is taking out in a week or so's time to Trinidad, West Indies, where they are to be liberated to stock the estates there belonging to Sir William Ingram.

No. 336.
An Easily-made Seed or Egg-food Box.

Sent by John Stephens, 26, Birch Street, Northwood, near Hanley.

I send you a sketch of what I consider the simplest and most easily made seed or egg-food box, and at the same time a very useful one. You get a one-ounce Gold Flake tobacco box, and take off the lid. You will find two holes at each end of the box. A piece of wire (a hair-pin will answer the purpose) through these holes, leaving a short bit of the wire out of the one end, which you turn back and press against the box side. The other end you leave long enough to bend over the rail of the cage (as shown in sketch). I have used nothing else for some time, and find them all I could wish, being cheap and easily made. You can place as many as you like about with the different seeds and tit-bits separate, which the birds greatly like.

An Easily-made Seed, etc., Box.

No. 337.
A Hanging Seed Hopper.

Sent by S. Sutherland, 1, Caerphilly Street, Moors, Cardiff.

Enclosed sketch is of a seed hopper I use in my aviary, which prevents the seed being fouled either by mice or the birds. I use two tomato tins in the making. One, "B," is cut 1½ inches deep and has no bottom. "A" is intended to fit inside "B." The conical top is soldered on to "A"; then the birds can't perch on it. Being all in sections it is easily cleaned. "C," the hanger, is made of half-inch bar at the bottom, suspended by stout cage wire from the aviary roof. "C" should be 2 inches larger all round than "B," to allow standing room for the birds. This can be made out of wood if the fancier is not handy with the soldering iron. The holes I make with a centre-bit. I find it very good for preventing waste.

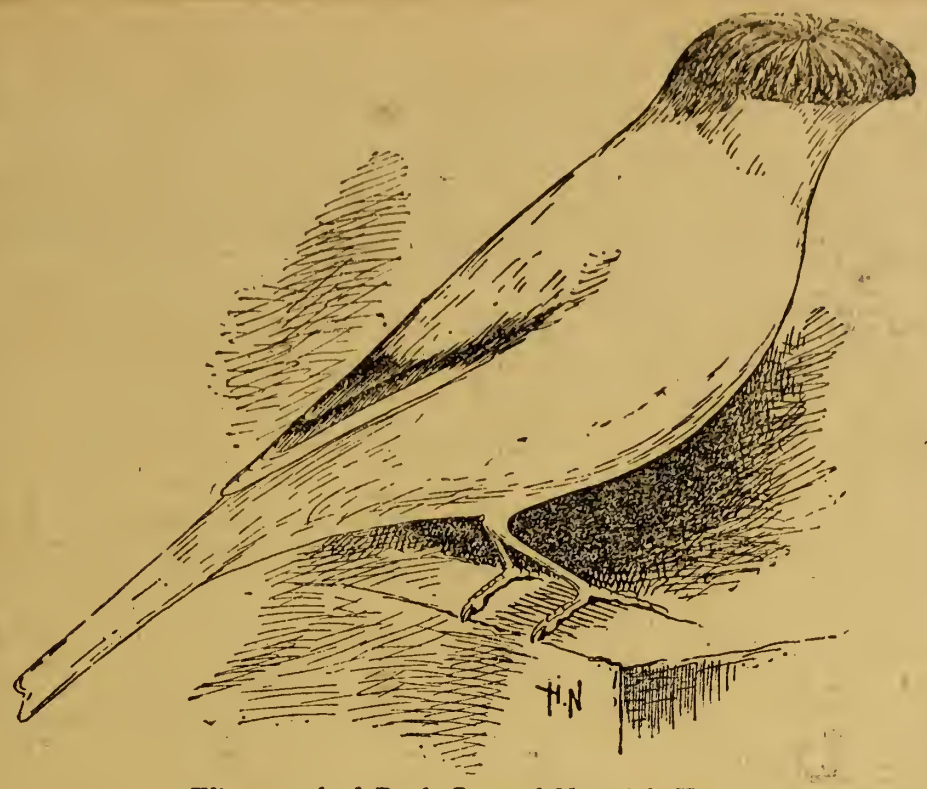
"CAGE BIRDS," 154, Fleet St., London, E.C



Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

 Dick and the Glass.

A friend of mine has a Canary that is often let out of its cage to fly in the kitchen. He placed the looking glass on the table the other night, and it was a sight to see Dick hopping round to find the bird he thought he could see. Not being able to find it he got quite excited and would keep flying at the glass and singing like mad, as though he was pairing to a hen. He would then fly on to a picture or the clock, but would soon return to the glass and his mysterious mate.—Sent by Leslie Clarke (age 11), care of Sml. Clarke, Church Lane, Pinxton, Derbyshire.

*Summer and Winter Dickies.

Summer dickies are warm in the nest.
Summer dickies have all they like best—
Food in plenty and sunshine and love,
Green leaves around them and blue sky above.

Winter dickies feel trouble and care.
Winter dickies find branches bare.
Food is scanty and hard to seek.
How the wind howls, so bleak, so bleak!
—Cutting sent by Alfred Osborne (age 8), Outram Street, Sutton-in-Ashfield, Notts.

* The Changed Canary.

A young lady once entreated Lord Peterborough in the time of the French Revolution to purchase a certain Canary she had seen in a coffee-house window near Charing Cross, London. Its owner was a widow, who, however, would not part with her pet. So Lord Peterborough decided to change the bird, and accordingly procured another of the same colour and, awaiting the opportunity, exchanged it with the other in the cage, frequently visiting the house afterwards in order to avoid suspicion. Some two years after he referred to the bird, and the woman said that even since good King James had gone abroad the Canary had not sung a note. She had not noticed the change.—Sent by W. E. Parrington (age 15), 102, Eaton Mews North, Eaton Square, London, S.W.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following Conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and on addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds." 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

CANARY QUERIES.

Wants Another Nest.

Biddy.—No, you should not allow the hen which has a brood just beginning to come out of the nest to go to nest again this year, no matter how healthy and vigorous she may appear. The chance of the eggs, even if she persisted so far in the nesting desire, being unfertile through the cock being out of condition are considerable, and then there is the risk of the young, if any were hatched, being deserted through the hen dropping suddenly into moult. All things considered, at this time it is much better to risk the hen laying a stray egg in the flight, which will do no harm, than to take all the other risks consequent upon allowing her to begin nesting again. You should at once transfer her to the flight cage, and add six drops of syrup of buckthorn to each ounce of drinking water for two or three days, and keep her on a strictly plain diet for a week, by which time she will probably be quite rid of the desire to nest. You must, of course, leave the cock in the breeding cage with the young ones until they are quite able to do for themselves.

A Trio.

"Avis."—(1) Yes, certainly, young Canaries do moult in their first season. There is, however, this difference in the moulting of the young birds, and of the adults; that the adults change the whole of their plumage, including the large quill feathers in the wings and tail, whereas the young birds in their first season cast off only the small feathers, and retain the wing and tail feathers until their second moult. This is the general rule, though I believe there are exceptions amongst very early hatched youngsters. (2) It is not advisable to mix up cocks and hens in the flight cages for moulting and keeping through the winter, as some of the former are almost certain to come into song, and some forward hens may become very spiteful under such circumstances, and would also probably come into breeding condition much earlier than is desirable. It is much better to run the cocks together in one flight until they begin to come in song, and then cage them separately, and keep the hens in another flight, preferably out of sight of the cocks. (3) Seven or eight Canaries are all the cage you mention will accommodate, and even with this number you would need to pay particular attention to cleanliness.

An Injured Foot.

Novice, Leicester.—Am afraid you put too broad a rubber ring on the hing toe that came forward, and thereby pulled it too far backward, probably close up to the shank of the leg, and by this means caused a dislocation of the joint at what you call the "ball of the foot.' Otherwise you must have injured the foot in putting on the ring. Anyhow, the bird is probably crippled for life. The only thing I can advise you to do is bathe the foot for a minute or two in a warm solution of boracic acid, made by dissolving a small teaspoonful of boracic acid in half a teacupful of warm water. After bathing, dry very gently on a soft rag, and slightly smear it with a little carbolised vaseline. I am assuming you have already removed the rubber ring, but if you have not, do so at once, and if the toe comes forward again you had, in the circumstances, better leave it alone. See that it has properly shaped, and not too large perches, and keep them scrupulously clean until the foot is well; then, if the toe is forward again, you might try the small round perches frequently described in these columns. But do not try these perches as long as the foot remains in its present condition.

Gaping and Coughing.

"One Very Anxious."—If the bird is not in an overfat condition, I suspect it has been exposed to some draughts. Stick to the diet of plain Canary for a week, during which time give nothing else in the way of extras save green food, and of this give a free supply of green plantain stalks, chickweed, or young groundsel tops. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and six drops of syrup of rhubarb in the water daily for three days and every alternate day for the remainder of the week. After this add a fourth part of summer rape to its staple food, about twice a week give a small pinch of a mixture of hemp, inga, and linseed, and every second day for a week give a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with a few grains of maw seed. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whiskey, six of oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, two days in every three for another week, and if the bird is not quite well in that time continue the latter medicine every second day for another week; and on the alternate days give four drops each of tincture of gentian and syrup of rhubarb. Of course, you must see that the bird is quite free from any draughts. Also see that there are no red-mites troubling it.

The Sexing Riddle.

"Beginner."—It is certainly a very puzzling matter for a novice to sex his young birds with any degree of certainty, and it is none the less difficult to convey the information in writing. Practical experience and careful observation for a few years will develop one's intuitive insight—it is really little, or nothing else—sufficiently to enable one to tell the sex of a given bird at sight, but until this desirable stage is reached, others can do very little to make you see and detect what is obvious to them. You may, however, always console yourself with the reflection that the same insight will come to you in due time. Now, to help you as far as possible. You will often find the young cocks swelling their throats, and giving vent to a little twitter as soon as they have left the nest. Later on when they are well grown, they will be found to have a more soft and mellow voice when "twecting," in contrast to the comparatively raspy "tweet" of the hens. The cocks carry themselves more upright, and jaunty, and are altogether smarter and holder in appearance, the eye is more bolting, and they will be noticed pulling themselves together as though conscious of their own superiority when any of the adult cocks begin to sing. They will generally begin to twitter nicely before the moult, especially if caged separately, when the throat will swell and pulsate similar to the adult cocks.

Young Birds Dying.

"Eva," Brighton.—Sorry, but I cannot give you a definite opinion as to the cause of the young birds dying. To do so now would be the merest guesswork. Only a post-mortem could discover the real cause. If you had given more details of feeding and treatment I could have formed a better opinion, especially if you had also said what part of the food supplied was most favoured by the birds. This latter is often an important item, as although one may be supplying a very good dietary on the whole, some birds live practically upon one kind of food and ignore all the other items supplied. You make no mention of green food, and as the young were still with their parents, green food should have been given daily. Bearing this in mind, and carefully weighing the few facts given in your letter, I should say the birds died from the effects of constipation, and you would probably have saved them by giving a little green food daily if you were not giving any, or a little extra in case you were giving it, withholding the egg food for about half a day each day for two, three, or four days, as seemed necessary, and giving in its place a little bread soaked in milk, pressed nearly dry, and slightly sprinkled with soft sugar. A few grains of Epsom salts in the water for a day or two would also have been helpful, but no other drug treatment should be attempted with birds so young.

Catering for Crests.

T.W.—The way to feed Crests from beginning to end of the moult depends upon whether you wish to colour feed them a little or not. The latter is not really necessary, but many fanciers prefer to give them a small quantity just to clear up and add tone to the natural colour. The following method of feeding is without colour, and if you want to add this all you need do is to mix about half the usual quantity of tasteless red pepper in the egg food each time you give it. It will not be necessary to give either the egg food or the colour every day, as is the case with highly-fed varieties. When caged off for moulting give an unlimited supply of good, sound Canary only in the seed boxes. Give about half a teaspoonful of summer rape per bird daily, and every second day give a similar quantity of egg food, composed of one part egg to two parts crushed biscuit or sponge cake, and a pinch of maw seed mixed in it each time until the birds have nearly finished easting their feathers. About once a week or three times in a fortnight substitute a small piece of bread and milk for the egg food, and if they appear to have any difficulty in easting their feathers dust it over first with flowers of sulphur and then with a little soft sugar. Two or three times a week give also a pinch of a mixture of hemp, millet, linseed, broken groats, rice, coarse oatmeal, and chips of sunflower and safflower seeds. Give a supply of green food daily, especially such as the green seed stalks of plantain, shepherd's purse, and seedy sprays of chickweed, and groundsel tops, and if these fail substitute a bit of raw or boiled carrot, or a bit of boiled mealy potato occasionally. A few drops of chemical food in the water occasionally will also prove helpful.

Unravelling the Tangle.

"Hilda."—You have evidently got very much mixed in what you have read, and also read a wrong interpretation into a good deal of it. When one writes of increasing the colour food after the commencement of moult by so many teaspoonfuls, it does not follow that the quantity named must be given to each bird. It means that a given quantity of food, which you will probably find mentioned in each case, is to be prepared in bulk to feed a number of birds for the day, about a small teaspoonful of which prepared food is allotted to each bird. In feeding a single bird you might mix about as much colour as will cover a threepenny-piece in its egg food, and double the quantity when it is dropping feather very rapidly. As the bird eats so little, perhaps you do not make it to its taste. Try giving it three separate quantities for a day or two, one mixed just crumbly moist, another slightly damper, and the third made into a soft paste, and see which it prefers. You may also add a little msw seed, and a little extra sugar, or no sugar at all until you find what it likes best. A bird usually moults the head and neck feathers last, so when it has moulted these parts and gradually ceases dropping feathers altogether, the moult is pretty sure to be completed. You should reduce the strength of colour food as soon as you can see new feathers beginning to show on the head. Many birds sing more or less right through the moult, but not all of them. Yours has perhaps had a little check in its moult. See it does not get any chill or cold draught. Birds in breeding condition do not go off song unless mated, then only some of them, but not all, cease singing more or less when the hens have gone to nest. Your bird will doubtless resume its full song in the course of a few weeks after the end of the moult. The actual time varies; some begin almost at once, others not until the spring is approaching. The earlier a bird starts moulting the earlier it should finish. They do not necessarily all finish, or even begin, at the same time, but very few birds will be quite through with it before September. About eight weeks is a fair average time for the moult to last in individuals. The dirty ring round the bird's neck will disappear for a time when it has completed its moult. Only hand-washing will remove it when it re-appears. To help to prevent it keep the cage and perches quite clean, free from dust, and do not hang it in a dusty or smoky atmosphere.

Crest Coughing and Moulting.

Thomas Williams.—Although you say you cannot think the fits of coughing which have seized your birds the last week are due to draughts, I have no doubt in my own mind that either draughts or the differences between day and night temperature acting upon the birds just as they were about dropping into moult, are the cause. Where you go wrong, I think, is in not exercising sufficient control over the temperature by day and at night. For example, you say your room is very hot, faces south, has risen to 80-86 degrees during the past week, and, finally, that you keep the window open about four inches day and night. Now these last three words, I believe, give the key to your trouble, for although the days last week were so hot there was a big drop most nights, and your room facing south would feel the full extent of the drop at night as well as the excessive heat by day. In such a case as this you would have done much better had you opened the window ten or twelve inches during the middle of the day, say, from 10 a.m. until 4 or 5 p.m., then closed it up to six inches until 8 or 9 p.m., then closed it up to three inches for the remainder of the night. This would have kept the temperature equable at all hours. You see it is all a matter of exercising discretion under abnormal conditions. Other querists should note these remarks, which are generally applicable. To remove the cough give the birds twenty drops of whisky, ten of glycerine, and five each of oxymel of squills, and tincture of tolu, in the drinking water for a few days. The few feathers you found in the cages are an undoubted proof that these birds are now in moult. This would naturally make them more susceptible to any differences in temperature. If you carry out the above suggestions respecting the ventilation of your room during any future spell of excessive heat, you will doubtless find the birds get on with the moult all right without any special treatment.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Preserving Privet Berries.

Ginger.—I keep my own privet berries either by sticking the stems of the bunches in water (which is often changed), and storing them in a dry cupboard, or by burying them in sand, or the material in which grapes come packed in to fruiterers. Elder berries can be treated the same way. I am no believer in "dried" berries; after they are dried up I fail to see how they can be of much use. They could be kept for a long time if immersed in syrup and bottled—like bottled fruits. I may point out that privet berries are to be obtained fresh almost the winter through in suitable places, such as the hedges of allotment gardens, near large towns. When I lived in the country, I could always get plenty from such a spot.

Moulting a Goldfinch.

Dinas.—By all means keep the bird in the unheated room. No "tonic" is needed beyond good and proper food, so long as the moult progresses satisfactorily. If you are colour feeding (it is not really necessary) I have dealt very fully with this recently. The sweet (tasteless) pepper should be well mixed amongst their seed, the latter being cracked, if necessary; or make a mixture daily of colour food, soft food, and cracked seed, and let them eat this. Let the stock food be good, sound teazle seed three parts, canary and linseed one part each. In a separate dish give a teaspoonful of good old hemp seed one day, and a dessert-spoonful of cracked sunflower seed the next day; with a pinch of maw and niger seeds now and again, as a further change. Don't give hemp freely until the moult is drawing to a close. Above all, however, the bird must have a free daily supply of knapweed, thistle heads (especially any with tiny maggots at the centre), milk-thistle, seeding chickweed, groundsel, and shepherd's-purse (not the coarse leaves), any cornflower heads which you can get full of seed—all, or any, of these are liked by the Goldie, and help to get him through his moult in exhibition form. He should have a good-sized cage, with provision for a bath whenever he feels inclined to take it. That he should bathe freely is important. Failing this he must be sprayed on all suitable days; but spraying is at best but a poor substitute for a bath taken of the bird's own free will.

Points about a Crossbill.

Amateure.—I don't think it would be safe to keep the Crossbill with Canaries, Linnets, etc., in a small aviary (you don't say what kind of place yours is). You could try; remove it at once if it attacks its companions. If your bird is greenish all over, and is not house-moulted, it is probably a hen. Even the young cocks, when assuming adult plumage, exhibit traces of red. They have little value; a few shillings at the most. Crosshills are plentiful, and cheap, this season. Most are shown in their wild (i.e., red plumage). After a moult in captivity their colour changes to a yellowish green. Your bird may be given for seed, sunflower, hemp, and canary-seed; and for animal food three or four mealworms daily, with any other insects you can get. A few berries (haw, privet, black, and so on), also the core and pips of apples, smashed nuts of various kinds (walnuts, crack nuts, etc.), and fruit are relished. Offer him any of the other seeds or seed mixtures in general use now and again; also small maize, dari, wheat, and the like. Sometimes he will eat a little, and variety is good. The Crossbill will find a great fund of amusement, and a supply of food also, in a few fir and pine cones, if you can get them with the seed in. He will also find you some employment in providing him with new perches, for he will use his spare moments in chewing these up. It is good for him, too, to have exercise for his curious and powerful mandibles. Don't give the fir-etc., cones in a "green" state. Gather them ripe, when about to open; if necessary lay them in a moderately warm place (such as a cool oven) until they open.

Linnet Matters.

Novice.—Yes; Linnets certainly moult in their first year. Like young Canaries, they moult the body feathers but not the tail and wing feathers. The mixed seed you mention is very good in its way, but I do not consider it suitable for regular use with Linnets. Note the reply given "R.K.M." concerning the feeding. Shepherd's purse is a very common weed, found in most lanes, at the edges of corn, etc., fields, and about neglected garden ground. It has heart-shaped seed-pods, which run up the stem, which bears at top a cluster of very tiny white flowers. It is fully described and illustrated in CAGE BIRDS book on Wild Plants for Birds. As regards the sexing of Linnets, this is exceedingly difficult for the novice while the birds remain in their nesting plumage. A very good guide is to choose a bird with a good edging of white to the tail feathers, and which has the white on the flight (wing) feathers extending right back to the quill (shaft), and white underneath the wing as well as on top. The adult hens are grey in colour, and heavily streaked with markings on the breast; the adult-plumaged cock has a nut-brown back and wing butts, and signs of red are to be observed on the breast feathers, especially if ruffled with a finger, and at the end of winter and the approach of the breeding season, the breast of the cock becomes very perceptibly red. On the breast of the cock the tips of the feathers have a "mooned" appearance—an edging of colour disposed in a shape resembling that of the new moon. Any red feathers on the breast infallibly denote a cock—unless, of course, the "red" has been applied by human hands. A three-year-old cock Linnet in the breeding season develops a really gorgeous crimson head and breast. To sum up: in an adult bird always look for good whites, a rich nut-brown back, and a "mooned" breast, and you can't go wrong.

A Skylark Puzzle.

Song Wanted.—I have read your very lengthy letter carefully, and the only conclusion I can come to is that it is a hen Lark you have, and not a cock. Your methods of caging and management generally are first-class, while the bird, you say, is "finger-tame"; it must, then, of a certainty be a hen. A cock Lark could not help but sing under such conditions. Of course, if you have bought the bird but very recently, it may be about to commence moulting—or even might be as yet not thoroughly over the moult—in which case it could not be expected to sing until this is over and its effects thrown off. At the moment it is really not the time of year to look for song from Skylarks, or any other birds—the majority are silent owing to the moult. I don't know that I can say more. Healthy birds which are being properly fed do not absolutely require anything extra during the moult; still, your Lark would no doubt appreciate a little extra live food of sorts—you can get live ants eggs, wasp-grub, scoured gentles, flies and beetles now, with little trouble. You can spray him (but very lightly) occasionally on sunny days. There is always a percentage of dead, etc., amongst mealworms, but a good sample should not contain much "rubbish" of this nature. Keep them in a flat, fairly shallow tin, the latter two-thirds (or less) filled with bran; store the tin in a dry, warm place. If with a lid, bore some holes in it for ventilating purposes. Breeding mealworms is a most disappointing game; in your case not worth considering.

Linnets and Greenfinches Dying

R.K.M.—Your letter puzzles me; so, too, do the letters which constantly appear in our correspondence columns from fanciers who apparently cannot for the life of them keep Linnets and Goldfinches for any period in health. I can only tell you that I experience no such difficulty myself. I have already bought a fair number of big young Linnets, and they are everyone doing well, though I have had no time to give them any "special" treatment; they are in a flight cage with my moulting old birds. My methods of feeding I have often given in this column. Is it possible you are using inferior seed, or very dusty seed? Even the best of seed should be given a shake in a sieve before being fed to birds. Do not allow the ailing birds to remain with your young Canaries. The healthy and the ailing should never be together. I am sorry you do not give details of your own method of feeding; it is important to know this. I can advise you, for your Linnets, to go to a good seed shop and get the following mixture (by measure): Canary and teazle, one pint each; summer rape, charlock, and linseed, half a pint each. Give this as a stock food, and vary it with a good feed of maw and hemp now and again, given in a separate dish; also a little packet Finch mixture and wild seed mixture, and a few cracked or shelled sunflower seeds. Give plenty of seeding shepherd's-purse and chickweed (these are important), and groundsel tops in season, but strip off old, stringy leaves, giving the young and juicy ones only. If you can get any smothered with green-fly (blight), let them have a feast of the latter. You can, of course, also give hard-heads, plantain, thistles, and the like, while there are many other suitable wild plants (if you know them), such as mouse-ear and knot grass. The Greenfinches should have a good feed of sunflower seeds daily.

Brevities.

A Place (X. Y. Z.).—Mules are often very wild and riotous when young, and I should think your own bird has been knocking about and so caused the place at the base of its beak. If so, it will come right in the course of time. Anointing the place gently twice daily for a time with any healing ointment, such as Zambuk or even lanoline, or cold cream, would help on the cure. There is nothing to worry about unless it develops into a decided growth.

Thrush "Gaping" (H.J.).—I should doubt whether the soft water would be the cause of the "gaping." It does not look like it, seeing that the other two birds are quite well. Probably there is some slight throat trouble, which any bird is liable to contract. Cage the bird by itself and try the effect of adding a little Condy's Fluid to the drinking water, fresh daily, for a week or so. A small half-teaspoonful to a teacupful of water is ample; don't use it too strong, and give in glass or pot vessel.

A Weed (Covert).—It is mouse-ear chickweed, commonly known by fanciers as "mouse-ear." In its seeding stages it is excellent for all seed-eating birds—Canaries, British or Foreign. Linnets, as you have noticed, "simply worry it."

An Ailing Goldfinch (Avis).—The dose of whiskey would be correct. I should not give much of this, however. Probably a few mild doses of tincture of gentian might help to pull the bird together again—ten to twelve drops in two tablespoonfuls of water. The feeding on thistle, dandelion, and niger, with a few shelled and crushed sunflower kernels, will be, however, the most likely to do good. Don't think about the moult; that, in his present weak condition, might well end him.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S. M.B.N.H.S., etc.

About Budgerigars.

B. H. Warbler.—With ordinary luck, even with disposing of your produce to dealers, you should have a bit over after paying your seed bill, but they are not as profitable as they used to be. When buying it is always best to procure the largest and best stock you can; it is cheapest in the end and makes a continuous sale more probable, 8/6 per pair for Greens and 10/6 to 15/- for Yellows should procure good stock. One ought to certainly have two aviaries when breeding these birds in quantities, so as to be able to send out unrelated pairs. More to keep your stock up to high-water mark, it is good practice to turn in one or two really good imported males every now and again to introduce new blood. You should find "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" very helpful. See advert in this column.

"Pick-me-up" for Budgerigars.

Ginger.—Nothing can excel seeding grass (grass in flower), and plenty of it. They ought to come safely through without "pick-me-ups." I should for one day make their drinking water just saline with Epsom salts, and repeat this after an interval of three days. For, say, a month, well colour their drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food, and supply oats fairly freely. You would find our booklet, "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" very useful as an "all-round-the-year-help" in treating these birds. Note advert. in this column. Have several pieces of cuttlefish about for them to nibble at, also a little ripe pear, apple, etc. Some old mortar rubbish (roughly crushed) would also be very helpful if you can obtain it.

About Lovebirds.

Blue-Winged Bird.—You do not give county, nor yet any idea of aviary, both very important points. However, if there is a good shelter shed and flight of sufficient size for exercise, they should do well, but note, Lovebirds rather resent being overcrowded. With the Blue-wings (Passerine Parrakeets is the proper name) and Madagascars, you can keep Green and Yellow Budgerigars, Cockatiels, and Rosella Parrakeets. All would thrive as under. Canary and millet in equal parts in one hopper, and in another a mixture of oats, hemp, wheat, dari, rice in the husk, and sunflower seeds, all kinds about equal quantity. Supply also green food, ripe fruit, and a few pieces of plain biscuit daily; grit, water, and cuttlefish must also be supplied ad lib.

Amazon Parrot.

Jacko Bird.—(1) Diet is satisfactory. Next time it is extra loose, give it one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water for one day (keep this mixture by you for emergencies), and put it on a course of chemical food (this has a constipating effect). Mingle a little grit with its seed mixture, also cuttlefish, crushed to the size of millet. It is immaterial whether cage is cleaned night or morning.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

It is not good for bird to pick over fouled food in cage tray. (2) Procure a ring and chain (light one; state for an Amazon), enclose something about same diameter as the leg for guide, and ask for and follow maker's directions for putting on. You should have no difficulty in doing so, as it is quite tame. If you are able to get one in your town, where you purchase they will give you an object lesson in fixing same. Continue as you are at present, and I opine its noisiness will largely disappear.

Parrot Pulling Its Feathers.

B. J. C.—You ought not to let this vice run on without seeking help; it has undoubtedly been brought about by your diet. Milk and tea sop are condemned almost weekly in this column. A little moistened bread or toast (without butter or fat) will do no harm, but moisten it in water that is well coloured with chemical food. Apart from this, confine your diet strictly to seed mixture, ripe fruit, plain biscuit, and a few nuts. A frequent bath is a great help. It will be sufficient if you permit it to satisfy its thirst twice or thrice daily. For a month, providing its voidings do not become watery, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into an ounce of water, and let this form its sole drinking water every third day. In between, that is, when not giving the Magnesia, well colour its drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. I should also advise spraying the bird with quassia solution. Keep a supply of clean cuttlefish in the cage.

King Parrakeets.

R. H.—The King Parrakeet is not a fragile bird if kept out of draught when it is once acclimatised. It is always best to get an acclimatised bird when the pocket will bear the higher price. There is always a risk with a newly-imported bird, no matter what species it is. Of course, with some this is greater than with others. With care, however, if you secure a lively, healthy-looking bird in fair feather, you should be able to pull it through. (2) An ordinary Parrot cage, sufficiently large for it to rest on its perches (it is about the size of a Grey), turn and hop or hound from upper to lower perch without breaking its feathers. If its regular cage is bright and clean, this should suffice, but if you have a special show cage, have it one size smaller than the living cage. (3) Seed mixture: Three parts each Canary and white millet, and one part each oats, hemp, and sunflower seeds; well mix, and keep up a constant supply. Also supply ripe fruit, plain biscuit, nuts, green food, grit, cuttlefish, and water ad lib for drinking and bathing.

Taming a Grey Parrot.

W. B.—(1) I should say it was probably a youngish bird, but you should soon be able to judge of that by a little observation. Its legs and feet should suffice for this; if it is an old bird they will be very scaly, almost horny, in fact. A Grey Parrot should talk, but you cannot expect this while its terror lasts. (2) This is rather a difficult task and will require much patience, as the bird has evidently been badly scared somewhere. You will have to try kindness and gentleness. Be very quiet in your movements when in its vicinity; never approach it in a hurry, and if you have a family, do not permit the young folk to play around its cage for a time, at any rate. Keep it in your midst, but arrange a screen partly round its cage; it will get accustomed to sounds and movements, hear plenty of conversation, and will gradually settle down. But I expect your patience will be sadly tried with noise before this happy consummation is reached. By maize, I presume you mean boiled maize? This only keeps fresh one day, and the food tin must be kept strictly clean. Mix a little dry seed mixture with it and the bird will gradually become accustomed to it. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit, but do not give table scraps, slops, or animal food of any description. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish hanging in the cage.

PARK AND LAKE AVICULTURE.

Feeding Young Doves.

Ring.—There is no need to give egg; some dry crushed biscuit alone will be sufficient, and they will rear even without this, though something soft as well as corn is desirable for them when feeding young. They themselves will see to it that the food is harder as the young get older, as they then do not keep the food in the crop so long as when the young are smaller.

Dove Pulling Out Feathers.

S.E.S.—I fancy your previous query was not sent on to me, as I do not remember it, and there was none such in "C.B." issue of May 22nd (not 23rd); however, here goes. Your treatment seems to be all right, but if I were you I should give wheat as well as millet and dari; also get him to eat green seeding grass as much as possible instead of the corn; tie it up in a bunch. You do not say that he is mated; very likely he would do better if paired, as it cannot be healthy for birds like this, which are naturally constantly nesting, to live alone. I suppose you hang the cage outdoors most of the time; if not, you should do so, and also give a bath daily. It may be that the bird is very considerable in age, and 17 years may have something to do with the skin irritation, but they live much longer than this.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. J. North, 435, Oxford Road, Reading, will examine cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to J. North, with fee. Any sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Young Canaries (E.A.M.).—These deaths have probably been caused by the neglect of the parents, in their desire to nest again; too often the case with domesticated stock. I should advise you to give more green leaves.

GENERAL.

Answered by the Editor.

A Poem (R. Farmer).—We are afraid your poetry is of rather too personal a character to warrant publication.

Weasel Proof Cage (A. H. Taylor).—This shall receive consideration in due course.

A Noiseless Door (F. Jackson).—We cannot quite understand the idea embodied in your letter. It needs more fully explaining.

No Stamp (J. Brown).—Thanks for your letter. Boys will be boys—having been that way ourselves we quite appreciate the trouble.

Pigeon Caught (G. Smith).—We have sent your letter along to the Editor of the "Racing Pigeon," as the bird is likely to find an owner through the columns of that paper.

REVIEW OF SCHEDULES.

Stocksbridge.—August 28th.—Judge, Mr. J. N. Harrison. 2 classes: Yorks. 1, Nor. 1. Prizes, 8s., 4s., 2d. Fee, 1s. 3d. Entries close August 23rd to J. T. BROWN, Stocksbridge, nr. Sheffield.

Crowthorne.—September 1st and 2nd, Recreation Ground.—Judge, Mr. G. H. Billett. 1 open class: A.V. Cage Bird. Prizes, 10s., 5s., 2s. 6d. Fee, 2s. Entries close August 28th to REV. A. WHITELEY, Broadmoor, Crowthorne, Berks.

The Shows.

LLANGENNECH (Carm.).

At this show, held at the National School, on August 14th, Mr. J. N. Harrison judged. CANARY (10): 1, Davies, Belgian cock, very large, good condition; 2, Jenkins, a typical Yorkshire, good length and pipe tail, we liked; 3, Pudner Bros., large, shapely Norwich; res, Wilson; vhc, Jones, Ray. BRITISH (8): 1, Ray, the Llanelly and Bynea winning Goldfinch cock, lovely head, nice blaze, large, shown in the pink of condition; 2, 3, Hughes, Lesser Whitethroat, gem, greatly admired; 3rd, Meadow Bunting, nice colour and condition; vhc, Sanders.

EXETER AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

First Feather Show held August 7th. The quality of the exhibits was A1, and reflected every credit on the exhibitors.

NORTHALLERTON AND DIS. C.B.S.

First annual young bird show held on August 14th, in the Malpas Auction Mart, an ideal room for the purpose. Owing to the late date the birds were not at their best, as the larger number are deep in moult. The members are to be congratulated on making such a good entry for the time of year. Some grand youngsters were on exhibition. The judges were drawn from the cage bird sub-committee, each taking the section they were not exhibiting in—Mr. Gilbank (Norwich 1909 bred and Goldfinch, or Linnet adult), Mr. Marwood (Yorkshires), Mr. Cooper (Mules and A.O.S. British Hardbills)—and their awards were well received. It was decided to hold another member's show in October.

YORKS. YELL.: 1, Robson; 2, Dunnington; 3, Peacock. BUFF; 1, Taylor; 2, Dunnington; 3, Robson. NOR.: 1, 2, 3, Marwood. GOLDIE OR LINNET: 1, Prest; 2, Dunnington; 3, Marwood. A.O.S. VAYNOL PARK.

Held August 14th, in connection with the horticultural, sports, etc., show, a good well-ventilated tent being provided for the cage birds. The weather was glorious, and a large crowd assembled, it being the best attendance we have seen in North Wales at any show. The chairman is Mr. H. Weaver, the vice-chairman Mr. T. Francis, the treasurer Mr. R. Hughes. Mr. W. T. Davies is the efficient secretary, and he was ably assisted by Mr. T. Williams. We were very pleased to see a few of the old exhibitors coming forward, and these shared well in the prize list. Mr. J. O. Rowlands secured the special for best Canary in show. Mr. E. D. Owen staged some good birds, very fit. Mr. Bell staged an ideal Hawfinch of rare size and quality, and in nice form. Norwich and Yorkshires were good in numbers and quality for this time of the year, when so many birds are in the moult; the majority to-day, however, were through, and the others had not started. A few good Mules and Britishers were shown. We hope to see a few more specials another year; there were only three altogether. Mr. R. W. Roberts won the special in local classes, with the buff Yorkshire, which was well ahead of anything in the classes; it never looked better, and was a credit to its owner. Mr. W. T. Turner (Rotherham) judged.

NOR. YELL. (4): 1, 2, two specials, J. O. Rowlands, nice team of typical Nor., grand size, quality and class of feather, winner stood well out, a grand yellow; 3, E. D. Owen, another clear yell., immense size, good type and stand, well up. BUFF, TKD., ETC. (5): 1, E. D. Owen, typical buff, rare size and quality, well shown; 2, J. Williams, rare substance and type; 3 we could not find; res, W. Roberts. YORKS. (11): 1, R. W. Roberts, cl. buff, medium size, nice type and position, extra good feather, rightly won, also took special in local classes; 2, 3, T. Owen, nice type and condition, former good colour, very showy; res., vhc, Thompson, nice feather and condition; vhc, Walker and Alcock; c, W. H. Williams. TICKED, ETC. (6): 1, Owens Bros., wing tkd. yell., nicely drawn, very nice length, style and quality, good class of feather, A 1 colour; 2, R. W. Roberts, another wing tkd., nice class of feather and style; 3, Walker and Alcock, varieg., nice youngster of medium size; res, W. H. Williams, very fair bird, all round, of good colour; hc, J. Williams, good lengthy bird, grand stand and contour, some thought an easy second. YORKS. HEN (4): 1, J. T. Jones, cap and wing marked buff, very nice hen, excellent position, in tight condition; 2, J. Williams, good buff, grand length and style, not in her best form; 3, W. H. Williams, slashing cl. yell., right length, type, and position, well up on leg, in tight condition; res, T. Davies, very moderate buff. CAN. A.O.V. cancelled. MULE OR HYB. (6): 1, E. J. Jones, dark, good size, Goldfinch Mule, in fine form; 2, Owens Brothers, variegated. Goldfinch Can., nice size, type and quality, grand blaze, made a good second; 3, Ebenezer Williams, same colour, not so distinct in markings, perhaps, very nice all round bird; res, Jackson, well known buff Linnet Mule, through the moult, and looking his best; hc, W. H. Williams. BRIT. GOLDFINCH (8): 1, E. J. Jones, good Finch all over, very fine blaze, nice size and tanning, often described; 2, Owens Brothers, nice colour, tans, and buttons; 3, vhc, c, G. H. Pritchard, trio of good Finches, different types, latter an old winner, extra good in size, square cut deep blaze, well carried back; 3, Smaller, nice all round Goldie, best of buttons; res, hc, William Ore, good coloured bird, not at his best, just yet; hc, very fair, when ready. BRIT. HARDBILL (4): 1, W. H. Williams, extra good size Greenfinch, lovely colour and feather; 2, Bell, good Redpoll, in nice form; 3, Salter, beautifully coloured Bramble; res, White. A.O.S. BRIT. (2): 1, Bell, good Hawfinch, rare size, colour and quality, looking very fit; 2, Thomas Davies, good Blackbird. SELL. (12/6) (9): 1, W. H. Williams; 2, vhc, J. O. Rowlands; 3, E. D. Owen; res, R. W. Roberts; hc, W. Ore. LOCAL CAN. (6): 1, res, R. W. Roberts, already noticed; 2nd, Owens Bros., good youngster; 3, vhc, T. Owen, nice yell. Yorks.; vhc, W. Ore. BRIT. (4): 1, 2, res, Hughes Bros., very nice Bullie, slack in feather to-day; 2nd, Goldie, medium size, nice blaze, nice tanning, another Bullie, good size when ready; 3, T. T. Roberts, fine-sized Greenie.

Singing Contests.

LEEDS.

Usual contest held at King's Head, Shannon-street, August 14th, when some very good singing was heard. 1st, Hardcastle; 2nd, Sissons; 3rd, Stead. Judges, Messrs. Summers and Naylor. Also on August 15th, when 15 birds faced the judges, Messrs. Jennings and Naylor. 1st and 2nd shared between Sissons and Hardcastle; 3rd, Stead.—WILSON NAYLOR.

ORNITHOLOGICAL ODDMENTS.

By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S.

Author of "The World's Birds."

The Best Bird in Australia.

"There," said a visitor to the Small Bird House at the Zoo the other day in my hearing, "that's the best bird we've got in Australia." He was speaking of the exquisite little Blue Wren, of which the Zoo have had three specimens, two cocks and a hen, for some time, though the older male is now dead; and anyone who looks at this little gem will understand its popularity with our fellow subjects "down under." In size it is about the same as our Wren, but has quite a long tail, carried, however, just as "gaily" as Jenny's; in colour the male in full dress is a perfect revelation of beauty, the chief tints being brilliant turquoise blue, with a gloss like enamel, and velvet black, the blue occurring on the crown, cheeks, and upper back. The hen is a plain brown bird with a red eye-streak, and a dull orange bill, and the cock in undress—for he goes "out of colour" periodically like a Weaver—is like her, except that he has no red about the eye, and his bill is black.

A Garden Favourite.

There are many beautiful birds in all countries which are not appreciated because not familiar or common enough to be known; but this is not the case with the Blue Wren, which is quite a garden bird, like our Hedge-Sparrow, which it seems much to resemble in habits, hopping about on the grass, but not venturing far from cover. In captivity it may be observed that cock and hen are much attached, and often sit side by side and plume each other like love-birds. These little creatures are of course insectivorous; but for small Softbills they are wonderfully easy to keep; those at the Zoo were all that were shipped from Australia in the first place, and they had hardly any live insects during all the long voyage home. Moreover, years before the Zoo got their specimens, Mr. R. Phillips had not only kept but successfully bred this bird in London, so that it can safely be reckoned as a good subject for aviculture, and I hope someone will be enterprising enough to import a few more.

The Blue Wren.

Something Like Aviculture.

I was very glad last week to meet again Mr. W. Frost, who is well known to many readers of CAGE BIRDS, and has safely returned from an expedition to the Aru Islands, the only home of the Great Emerald Bird of Paradise, which is the largest, finest, and most interesting of all these splendid birds. Mr. Frost's commission was to collect living specimens of these to stock a privately-owned estate in the West Indies, and as he has got several dozen, this ought to be satisfactorily accomplished. There is practically no danger of the birds trying to leave the island, as he tells me they either cannot or will not fly far; he has never seen them even cross a creek less than a mile wide, and if one escaped it would dodge about the verandah and into the nearest bush, instead of making straight off to the forest as the little King Bird of Paradise would do. Several of the latter were also procured, and together with other rarities brought at the same time, may be seen in the Small Bird House at the Zoo. The Birds of Paradise, it seems, are caught with bird-lime which is very strong.

The Indian Crow Again.

To turn from the top perch of the bird aristocracy to a very plebeian fowl, I see from a note and photograph in more than one publication that my old friend, the Indian Crow, has been distinguishing himself again. He has succeeded in penetrating into a Calcutta furniture warehouse, and there, between the legs of a small table turned upside down, making a nest with a pleasing collection of bric-a-brac, including hoop-iron, wire, tin, spoons, and bones! I don't think this can very well be beaten for variety and uncomfortableness of material, but it is not the top notch in the crow record, for some years ago a pair of Calcutta crows built a nest of gold and silver spectacle frames which they stole from a factory; I believe the value of this expensive bit of architecture was estimated at 300 rupees, equal to £20.

Correspondence.

Y.C.C. of Ireland Matters.

SIR,—In reply to R. F. Duigenan's letter, I wish to inform Mr. D. that neither myself nor any other of the Sligo fanciers are going to enter into any fishwomen's gossip with him. I see he takes to getting out of the difficulty of answering my questions by putting others. Answer first and then you will hear more.

M. J. MULLIGAN.

Goldfinches Rear their Young in a Bird-room.

SIR,—In your last issue I see Mr. G. Backhouse would like to 'know if any of your readers have known of Goldfinches being bred in a flight. For that gentleman's information I may say I had a Goldfinch in my possession some eight years ago that was bred in an ordinary breeding cage, in the living room of a small cottage, in the vicinity of Newport (Salop), from which I bred several nice mules.

A. C. BROTHERHOOD.

A Favourite Spot for Albinos.

SIR,—We have in the district very many rare Albino birds, and a certain part of the district of Hawick is quite famous for them now. A fancier had two pure Albino Blackbirds, and this year he has got two Albino Thrushes. The last-mentioned he got in Wilton Lodge, one of our public parks, and the Blackbirds in or near the park. Last year an Albino Rook was shot at Borthaugh. This is near the park, too. And on Tuesday, a friend of mine saw a flock of Starlings rise from a field, and he distinctly saw a pure white one amongst them. This was near Stobs, the military camp. At Haughead Farm there has been for a few years a white Sparrow, and I saw in a fancier's bird-room a lovely variegated Chaffinch caught at Lindean Park; both of these two birds were caught within two miles of Hawick. Now, can any fancier tell me the reason so many of these Albinos, etc., should be in and around this town, as I am interested (and I notice lots of other readers of CAGE BIRDS are also) in these wonderful sports of nature, or whatever they are.

THOMAS INNES.

The Sensational Scottish Disqualification Case.

SIR,—Being disinterested, and not knowing any of the parties personally, I can approach the McQuiston case with an open mind. I see Mr. McQuiston states that Gemmell's Bullfinch, shown at Ayr, was exhibited by a Mr. Wilson. Who is Wilson? This I take to be a barefaced acknowledgment of borrowing and lending; so now we have acknowledged staining, backed up by acknowledged borrowing and lending, and two cases of the latter (Ayr and Dalmellington). I make no pretence to saintliness, and I don't suppose I go to the "Kirk" as often as the "Unco' Quid," but I do object to miserable pot-hunting like this, by men who have not an atom of sport or of straightforwardness in them. Are not the facts admitted sufficient to stir up the Scotch societies, especially the best of them, both specialist and local, to deal with this kind of thing manfully, shrewdly, and thoroughly until they get it under? From what I read, this case is not by any means unique in Scotland, and the best men in the societies must take the matter up forcibly. It was cases of injustice to the general body of exhibitors, similar in character to this case, that led to the formation of the C.B.U. South of the Border, and although the C.B.U. has not accomplished all that was expected, it is not dead, by any means, and it has no doubt acted as a deterrent. I have no confidence in any bare statement proceeding from either McQuiston or Gemmell, and I should require any statement by either proved up to the hilt. One important point in Gemmell's letters is that whereas his letter considered by the Scottish B.B. and M.C. denied staining the Bathgate Bullfinch, his letter to the National B.B. and M.C. admitted staining the same bird. It therefore seems to me the National B.B. and M.C. have been fooled or imposed upon, and that it is a necessary act of justice for them to re-open the case, probably after the coming meeting of the Scottish B. and M.C., the result of whose deliberations I do not attempt to prejudge. I think, however, that the two societies should work together in this matter.

SOUTHERN FANCIER.

SIR,—Might I crave a small space in your splendid journal for fanciers who would like to see more clearly into matters concerning the Fancy in Scotland. I feel compelled to agree with Mr. G. McPartling. He remarks, referring to the Scots, "are they all knowingly yet covertly tricking each other?" It would seem so, Mr. Editor. Although it may be hard to believe, Scotland, the land of religion, is in the Fancy a land of hypocrites. Strong language no doubt for me to use, and probably some may resent it. Others, young in experience, are halting between two opinions, lacking in experience in the ways of clubs, etc. In the correspondence which appears in your journal the writers, strange to say, are asking questions from an expelled exhibitor, and, according to the report of a secretary, a man is charged with dishonestly showing a bird contrary to the rules of a club. I sometimes wonder if the men that judge and disqualify birds ever break, or have broken rules. Have they never lent birds, and never "faked"? I am asking very personal questions, no doubt. But, under the Rule 11, can they say to the Fancy: We have clean hands? Shame on those of us who talk loudest at meetings. Let the matter be put to each and all: Have I clean hands? Be the last to cast a stone, and keep your own doorstep clean. It is said that young fanciers in Scotland are in the balance, and weighing up whether they will leave the Fancy or follow the man with the cloven foot, or act the Pharisee, a wolf in sheep's clothing. Take time to consider those of you who by a single word or act are passing your vote on any fallen man. If you are pure yourself, and have done nothing contrary to the rules of your club or association, then extend the right hand of fellowship, and welcome your fallen brother, and lead him in the paths of purity. If you have done things in secret which no one knows but yourself, think on the words of Scotland's famous poet, Robbie Burns: "O wad some power the giftie gie us, to see oursel's as ithers see us."

NON SUM QUALIS ERAM.

The Crested Canary Club and Its Patronage.

SIR,—It is with regret that I have to pen a letter of this description, but I must confess that I was very disappointed when reading your valuable journal to find that we, the Long Eaton and District Society, had not been granted the above club's support. We have appointed a club judge in Mr. R. Rhodes, and were prepared to give what classes the club should decide upon, whilst we have again booked the Peoples' Hall, which is one of the finest and most suitable halls in the country. Surely it must be an oversight on the part of the committee to only have one club show in the whole of the Midlands (that, of course, the good old Nottingham), whilst the two nearest are a matter of about 180 miles apart, viz., Manchester and Cambridge. Surely this hits hard on the members situated in the Midland district. If this sort of thing continues what will become of the Fancy in the Midlands? I hope this will catch the eyes of any interested persons, so that we may have other opinions on this matter.

Sixteen from One Pair.

An Encouraging Record.

SIR,—I have not reared Canaries for many years. At one time I reared them yearly and kept large aviaries; but not for sale, only my fancy. This year I bought a deep yellow cock bird, and a buff hen, both Yorkshires; but they were not fit for show, as they were not colour fed. I never use colour-feed, as I think it is horrible as a colour, and cruel to the birds, too. The cock bird is four years old, and the hen one year. The hen has laid twenty-three eggs, and would have hatched all but I thought it too much for her. They have reared sixteen beautiful birds—I think a good number from one pair. The hen is now trying to go to nest again. I wonder if she can lay more eggs? Both birds are looking as fresh as ever. I take in CAGE BIRDS, and have a number of books on Canaries besides. I still adopt the same old-fashioned method of feeding on pure egg (minced through the machine, and fresh glassfuls given four or five times a day, so it never goes sour), Canary and hemp seed. I clean the cage daily. The birds never mind this, and I have not had any red mites. I put insect powder over the cage, and under the lining of the nest and bags of stuff given the hen to build with. So I think I am fortunate, as I hear of so many complaining of red mites.

A Remedy Wanted for a Fatal Disease.

SIR,—I have been reading the letter of Robert Oddy on this subject, and I am free to confess that I rubbed my eyes in astonishment at some of his statements. But the champion assertion of all was the one in which Mr. Oddy declared: "I thought sometimes it was septic fever. If it had been they would have gone faster, for I only lost one out of 15 in a flight cage. With the bowels, etc., being all right, I think that proves it was not. I put them back in the attic again this week, and put ½lb. of rock sulphur on some fire at night, and let it burn. I went up to have a look about two hours after, but one smell was enough. I fully expected finding all dead in the morning, but not one. So I am hoping that I shall get good results from it. I got the idea from some old fanciers who had done it, and did not lose any more birds that season." The first thing that struck me on reading the above was that the man had lost his head. Mr. North had told him that the case looked like one of pneumonia, so he proceeded to cure it by applying the remedy which a friend of mine in the house-decorating line tells me is always done when it is desired to asphyxiate those unpleasant insects which sometimes get into houses (especially in London and big towns) called "mahogany flats." Mr. North is an expert, and it seems to me to be such a far cry from his diagnosis of the disease as pneumonia to Mr. Oddy's application of sulphur fumes as a remedy, that I am nonplussed. Might I gently advise fanciers—especially young beginners—unless they desire to kill their birds as a cure for disease, to hesitate before adopting Mr. Oddy's remedy; and may I also appeal to Mr. Oddy to bear in mind that advice of this kind, recklessly given, may on occasion spell the death of an inexperienced man's whole stock. I am not saying that Mr. Oddy does really advise the use of burning rock sulphur. He is merely telling his experience! Probably Mr. Oddy may have set about trying to eradicate the disease—birds and all. The birds escaped, but that was not to be attributed to the caution or knowledge of Mr. Oddy. "One smell was enough" for himself, and it strikes me that if he avoided a second inhalation, and his birds escaped (though he "fully expected finding all dead in the morning" he would have been wise to avoid indulging in such hare-brained chatter as he employs in retailing such a remedy for others to copy, who—through inexperience or goaded by that despair which sometimes seizes people in the face of bad luck—might adopt it and destroy stock which common-sense treatment might have saved. Mr. Oddy is, I believe, a splendid fancier, but he has got hold of some "old fanciers" with curious whims, and I have no doubt they have disturbed his judgment a little as to the uses and abuses of sulphur. His birds have escaped, and he has told the story of it; but let me advise all who read Mr. Oddy's experience to avoid the use of sulphur with birds in the room, and not to allow their mental balance to be turned turtle, even for the pleasure of "one smell," which may not only prove enough for themselves, but for the birds as well.

LANCASHIRE LAD.

SIR,—I can sympathise with your correspondents who have lost many birds this season, and are at a loss to know the cause of the deaths. I have also lost upwards of seventy birds, old and young (the latter not counted) all going the same way. When it first commenced I blamed the cold weather, as hens which were feeding young died first; young in the nest also dying, sometimes through being only partly feathered when their mothers died. As time went on I lost more, and transferring some of the young to other hens, I found they still died, and generally their foster mothers also. The cocks with one or two exceptions, outlived all the hens, although they were helping to feed the young. I began to suspect it was contagious, for whenever I had a death I could trace direct contact with others I had previously lost. As time passed on the cocks began to die, and, last of all, the British Birds. The deaths have extended over the whole of the breeding season, and only recently I lost a Bullfinch, and a Corn Bunting, the last of my British excepting two Bramble-finch hens, and one Chaffinch cock. Of the Canaries, I have three cocks left, which are now moulting, and not a Canary hen of any description. I enclose a photograph, which I have taken of one of my Canaries which has just died. It shows the peculiar position many of them have died in, generally sitting on the cage bottom with the head turned upward. At the commencement of the disease they appear cold, and the feathers are all puffed out. The bowels are sometimes loose, though more frequently the excreta was solid, but accompanied by a watery fluid, and just before death there is a small quantity of pure blood. They also continually move the head backward with a jerky motion, and generally die with head held up, and feet cramped as though they suffered great pain. Some of them died in about fourteen days, while others seemed to take more killing. The Corn Bunting had been ill six or seven weeks when he died, and he had scarcely a particle of flesh left—simply bone, skin, and feathers. They seem to last as long as they can keep flesh on, and when they die they have a dried up appearance, and are as light as an ordinary preserved skin. It is a mystery! What is responsible for their deaths? I have proved it is not the food, for I have brother fanciers doing well with precisely the same treatment. Seventy-five birds to start the season, and not half a dozen! Truly a depressing state of affairs, and enough to weary the most ardent fancier.

THOS. ROBSON.

This photograph of one of Mr. T. Robson's dead Canaries, shows the curious position on the cage-floor in which many of them met their end.

The Cuckoo in Confinement.

SIR,—With reference to your correspondent's (Mr. Edward's) question in last week's issue—Yes. A Cuckoo was reared from nest; and lived through two winters in 1892 and 1893. This bird was reared by a patient, named Thomas Osborne, at Hants County Asylum, Knowle, Fareham, Hants, in the kitchen. I myself was chef there at the time, and the same comments were passed as in Mrs. Sargeant's case. The bird was thought to be a Hawk, and not until the following April was the thought exploded by the bird itself giving its well known call, "Cuckoo," which at first was very crude. But the superintendent of the institution gave the patient a present on hearing the bird give its first call, which happened on Easter Sunday morning, and which proved beyond doubt what the bird was, which was thought by many to be a Hawk. This Cuckoo lived 2½ years, and was fed on raw beef, mealworms and egg and biscuit, crushed hemp and bread sop. It was a lot of trouble because it could never feed itself. The plumage was in good condition, except the tail, which was always broken. Every attention was given to it by this patient, and when this bird passed into other hands it soon died. I wish CAGE BIRDS and its readers every success.

W. J. B. HOPKINS.

SIR,—Please thank Messrs. Kershaw, Clegg and Wills for their letters. After such good wishes I ought to succeed in rearing a Cuckoo. Since writing I have obtained another specimen. About four miles from here there is a pool where people go to bathe; at the side of the pool a small shelter is built of boughs and bracken. In the roof of this shelter a Jenny Wren built its nest, and in the nest a young Cuckoo was hatched on July 11th. How the parent bird managed to place the egg in the nest is a mystery, for it is in about the centre of the roof inside the shelter, and the opening to the nest would only admit two fingers. The Cuckoo grew rapidly, and at seven days old the nest was stretched to its utmost limit, and must have burst during the night, the Cuckoo being on the ground next morning and the nest a wreck. The young Cuckoo scrambled to a heap of bush wood near, and by next day the Wrens had built a semblance of a nest of twigs, leaves, and hair round the bird. The Wrens continued to feed their ravenous foster child till it was seventeen days old, when it got frightened by the bathers and moved into the grass nearer the pool. It was now dangerously near the water, so I decided to take it home and rear it by hand. It is a larger bird than the first one I had, and its feathers are of a deeper colour. For a young bird, it has had quite an eventful life, and will, I hope, repay the trouble taken in feeding by living to a good age. While at Bewdley in Worcestershire last week I saw a small flock or covey of Cuckoos, consisting of seven or eight of this season's birds; they were feeding together in a field, and I got to within five yards of them before they rose, settling again in the next field. This interested me, for I considered the Cuckoo a solitary bird, and here were quite a party amicably feeding together. Like the Owl, the Cuckoo disgorges all undigested food, not in little balls, but in elongated egg-shaped bodies about the size of an almond. This was quite fresh to me, and perhaps others may not have noticed this. After feeding the Cuckoos on large brown moths, the ejected portion consisted of the wings and legs of moths, mixed with some of what I thought were the skins of ants eggs which the birds had taken at the previous meal. After a meal of hairy caterpillars, the skins were easily separated from the rest of the ejected matter. Foreign substances found among ants' eggs, such as bits of twig, leaves, small stones, etc., are all eaten but ejected afterwards. I gave the first bird a meal of wasp cake, with the grubs inside; between two and a half and three hours afterwards two portions were ejected, one about as large as an almond and one about half the size, consisting almost entirely of the paper-like substance of which the wasp cells are made, but in a pulpy condition. I have seen one ball disgorged, and it seemed a perfectly natural operation without strain. The bird was sitting on the perch calling for more food, when I offered a mealworm, the Cuckoo seemed to gulp, and gave a quick shake of its head and out dropped the first and largest ball mentioned previously in connection with the meal of wasp cake. This has been a very interesting experience for me, and I hope will interest others. I have picked up many useful hints from letters published in your valuable paper, so shall be pleased to send you any items I may come across.

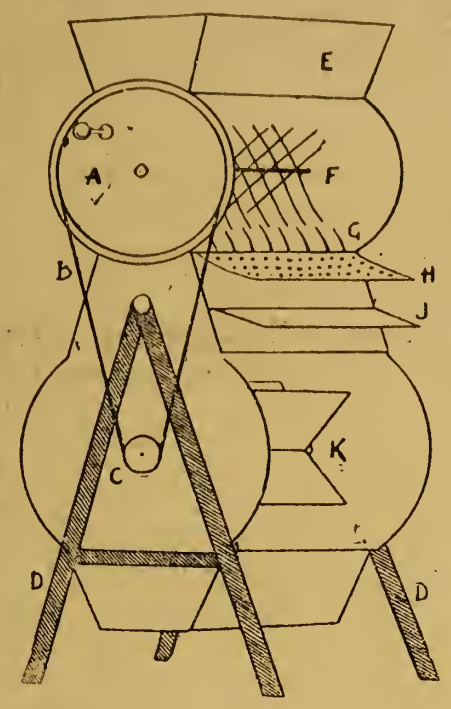
J. SHADDOCK.

SIR,—In reference to the keeping of young Cuckoos, I may say I have reared about six since I started keeping Softbills some eight years ago. The longest I ever kept one was from June till January the following year. I fed mine on maggots, wasp grubs, etc. They are very tame, but when the time of migration comes round they fly about the cage and break both wing feathers and tail feathers till they bleed. In conclusion, let me congratulate Mrs. Sargeant upon keeping the Cuckoo for 15 months. I might say the Nightjar is just about as difficult to keep as the Cuckoo.

CHAS. MACKWELL.

A Swallow Comes Aboard.



SIR,—I find the enclosed account of a Swallow's visit to one of our warships in my weekly paper, and forward it in the hope that it may interest other. "C.B.-ites."—While cruising back from Spain lately a Swallow came on board when we were about 100 miles from the Lizard. We were only steaming seven knots at the time, and for half-an-hour or so before actually alighting on the ship the bird flew round enquiringly, every now and again uttering its twittering call-note. It appeared in an exhausted state, and at length flew on to the quarter-deck, where it remained quite motionless. The sentry had evidently designs on its liberty, but was prevented from capturing it by the Admiral—a keen sportsman and an enthusiastic ornithologist. The bird had ultimately to change its quarters, however, as several of the officers on board—with the most praiseworthy but mistaken motives—brought breadcrumbs and a dish of water and placed them beside the Swallow, which, unfortunately, misunderstood their intentions and flew off the ship. It was plain, however that it was not going to leave us, and, after flying around for some time, it entered the commander's cabin through the porthole—unseen by the commander—and went to roost. The commander afterwards informed me that he was aroused in the early morning by a strange twittering, and was very surprised indeed to find the Swallow in his cabin. On being disturbed the bird flew out of the porthole, and, after circling once or twice, made off for the land, now only a few miles away. About the same time that the Swallow came on board a pair of rose Linnets were seen flying round the cruiser, and, after numerous tours of investigation, came to rest on the stern walk, behind the Admiral's cabin, so that we were the means of doing a good turn to at least three of the army of emigrants which cross the seas both spring and autumn.

How to Get the Seed Out of Thistle Heads.

A Description of an Ingenious Machine which Performs the Operation.

SIR,—I am sending you a photograph and a diagram illustrating a home-made machine which I use for getting the seeds out of thistle heads. I found this operation a very tedious one to perform by hand. This machine works perfectly, and does all that is expected of it. Both sides are made of wood, and the curved parts of tin. The two wheels I got from an old sewing machine. There are 14 fixed teeth (7 each side) and six revolving teeth, which go right through the spindle, so making 12 "tearing" teeth. The machine is two feet from top to bottom of legs; the "box" where fan is enclosed is eight inches. This fan is made of tin, soldered at both ends to keep it in its place. Such details as these could, of course, be varied to suit the users' convenience. I have tried to make everything plain in the sketch, but if anyone finds difficulty in making it out, I shall be pleased to answer them if they will write up.

The Parts Explained.

To explain the various parts: A is the large pulley wheel which carries the handle for turning the machine. B is the belt which allows the turning to work both the revolving teeth and the fan. C is the small pulley wheel which turns the fan. D D are the wood legs of the machine. E is the hopper into which the thistle heads are fed. F are the revolving teeth which carry the thistle heads against the two rows of fixed teeth, G the operation tearing them to pieces. H is a perforated drawer, and the seed falls through the perforations into J, which is a solid drawer. Both H and J are removable, and when out allow all the remains to drop into K, the chamber containing the fan. L is another removable perforated drawer which permits any seed remaining to fall through, and when pulled out allows the whole of the rubbish to fall out of the bottom of the machine.

The Song of the Linnet North and South.

SIR,—I have read with much interest other people's views. Now, they all seem to have different ideas on the Linnet's song, but it is very seldom when you are in the fields that you hear the birds sing like they do at the Linnet contests. I have been to a few places, but I must say that I don't understand the Leeds style of quality. You can sit in the room with the judge and timekeeper, but you never hear anything called out. A novice does not know whether the bird is doing good or bad. To my mind, a bird that is not "mad proud" is no good for quality singing. Now Sheffield singing is different. They hang two birds together, but you can hear them call out what the bird is doing, and all the time is booked. The Sheffield birds are mad proud, or else they won't sing at one another. Now Barnsley singing is another style, and far different. There is a man with the watch, and another with the book, and all the time the bird is singing they are calling out. If a bird was to do a run of 29 seconds, it would be called out in this style: 5, 5, 5, 5, 5, and 4 over. I have heard a bird belonging to J. Chadwick, of Barnsley, do runs like this at one contest: 76, 41, 19, 23, 38, 23, 80, 31, 21 out of a possible six minutes. The bird has been broke when it ought not to have been. Of course, they only hang one bird at a time. If any other gentlemen have been to Sheffield, Leeds and Barnsley, I should like them to give their views on the different styles.

A VISITOR.

SIR,—If "Linnet Fancier" is a fancier, as he terms himself, let him come out in a true fancier's spirit, and not under a nom de plume. It is no "guessing competition." What matters whether he comes from Lincolnshire or Jerusalem? Some one must be wrong. If I am, then it matters not to me. "Linnet Fancier" asks: "Can't they be raised under Skylarks, Tit-Larks, or Wood-Larks?" Certainly; he has the chance to try. Can he inform me where time singing is done in or around London, as it is unknown to me? Again, he says he dares say Mr. Rostron only gets an occasional good bird out of several dozens. Mr. Rostron said himself they only got a good one out of a thousand. So there's not many working men get a good one. I am proud to say I have three decent birds out of eight caged last season; one especially can fight and thrash some of the best old ones. But I should not stop bird singing if I heard a superior bird to mine. I am always pleased to hear anyone come out with a good one, and would treat him rather better than the reverse. I told you last week the three best notes any Linnet living can sing, and I keep my own caught youngsters specially from one place for song. To prove that the Linnet has its song from the nest, has the Editor anyone he will appoint to keep two or three young branchers by themselves—no other birds whatever—no Crows, Ducks, Waterhens, Landrails, etc., as some of the supposed cracks say they take their song from. I expect it will be camels and tigers next! If my offer is accepted, I will state the three or four notes these youngsters shall do. I daresay after my experience of 40 odd years, I want teaching by a mushroom fancier! Again, it's not the best bird that catches the most on the field; don't forget the tackle, etc., and the way it's used. There is a little in everything. I expect if a man was fool enough to sit down and write all his hard-earned experience, he would be a good man; I say live and learn. It has been a hard, dear hobby to me.

Prize-money at Dulwich O.S. Annual Show.

SIR,—Far from needing Mr. J. Halliday's catechism, I think Mr. Woolhouse, the respected chairman of the D.O.S., and also his committee, deserve to be congratulated on their efforts for the Fancy. They have proved themselves to be not white-feather tacticians, but capable of playing a good game, with their backs to the wall, facing onslaughts by correspondents with characteristics worthy of fanciers and gentlemen. I wish them every success.

The Feeding and Keeping of Linnets in Health.

SIR,—I had an agreeable surprise when I read "Spartie's" enquiry on the feeding and keeping of Linnets. Probably it would be more interesting, and certainly more practicable to hundreds of your novice readers to know how to feed Linnets properly, so as to keep them in health; and they should have a chance of hearing them sing themselves (which some never have the luck to do), instead of grumbling and arguing about the quality and niceties of their song, which seem Greek to those who have never heard a good singer. How many have had Linnets and in despair have given up keeping them because they could not say they had ever heard them sing? Give us a chance of knowing how to feed them, so as to get them in full song instead of having to cremate them at the rate of three or four per week just when we are expecting them to start singing. I am glad to see the vexed question of "Remedy Wanted" cropping up again. I hoped some time since, when writing on this subject (asking for information) to get some help from older and experienced fanciers as to a remedy, but I sadly failed, and I fear that neither G.B., nor Bert, in this week's issue solves it at all. I know I never used brass water utensils, yet have lost two score of birds this last twelve months, and look like losing more still amongst my Britishers. I have never had my Canaries troubled with it at all somehow. I have scoured my cages time after time with crude carbolic, and having kept them outdoors for a week, and have started with a complete change of seeds, yet I have lost two more recently. I thought a Solomon had arisen in the guise of Mr. W. H. Thomas, who promised some time since to send a bottle of a certain remedy to me, and to the first gentleman who started this subject; but as yet I have neither heard from him nor received the so-much-needed bottle. If he is still of the same mind, and possesses such an invaluable remedy, why not advertise it, and cease from hiding his light under a bushel? I am sure there is a large demand for such, and I for one would be willing to pay any reasonable amount for such a remedy, providing it proved successful. My opinion is that the root of the matter is a kind of colic, or bowel complaint, invariably terminating in diarrhœa. Although the bowels are inflamed at first, they seem to turn whitish at the end, after which it is a thirty-to-one-chance of recovery. I hope still we may yet discover a remedy, and I remain a hopeful reader of CAGE BIRDS.

Bird Life in Trinidad.

Concerning Red-crested Cardinals.

SIR,—"Ornithological Oddments" by our friend, Mr. F. Finn, are always most interesting, and I look forward with pleasure to this page each week. But I was more than pleased to find the remarks about the Sulphury Tyrant. I spent part of my childhood in Trinidad, West Indies (my father was very fond of travelling), and one of the commonest birds (at the same time a great beauty) was the Kiskadee, as we used to call it out there, and I have always thought this only a local name. I don't remember ever seeing a living specimen in England. I have a stuffed one, the skin of which we brought over with us amongst a lot of Humming Birds, etc. The bird life in Trinidad was always a great pleasure to me when I was there. I saw many fresh and beautiful birds, although then I did not know their proper names. Whilst writing I should also like to make a remark on an article I read in CAGE BIRDS a week or two back. It was about the Grey Red-Crested Cardinal; but I cannot remember the date or the writer, and I have been looking up my papers, but think I must have given this copy to a young fellow who is just starting bird keeping (I think this is much the best way, instead of keeping them, as there are so many things one just starting can learn by reading CAGE BIRDS that it would take years to find out for oneself with many a sad loss). It was about the sex of the Cardinal, and in mentioning the difference between the sexes the writer stated that the hen had no song. I should like to correct his statement, as I have kept Cardinals for years, both indoors and out, and have found that the hens sing quite a good deal; in fact, sometimes more even than the cocks. I had one hen some time back that used to puff herself out and chase the cock and sing to him. She used to sing more than he did, in fact, and she proved her sex for certain by laying quite a lot of eggs, but these generally managed to get broken. The hen, too, of the pair I have at present sings nicely—quite as loud as a cock. She has laid this year, but did not hatch, as they were only in a bird-room aviary.

The Critical Period for Young Birds.

Hints on their Treatment.

SIR,—Perhaps the most critical time in the lives of young Canaries bred by a comparative beginner in the hobby is the first month after they are taken away from their parents, or from six to eight or ten weeks old. To get over this difficulty is the one great desire of every novice who has experienced the chagrin which such losses, just on the threshold of success, cannot fail to bring. Yet the remedy (if such it may be called) is simple in the extreme. Of course, it lies in prevention, which is proverbially better than cure; and the method of prevention is in supplying a wholesome and good diet suited to the needs of the birds. To begin, say, at four weeks old, when the majority of the young will be separated from their parents. Do not fix any hard and fast rule for separating them at a given age. Most young will be able to do for themselves at a month old; a few rather earlier than this; and yet, again, others will not be fully able to provide for themselves at this age. Don't be in a hurry to separate them, so long as the parents will feed even a little, and refrain from plucking. In every case it will be better to leave the young with the parents a few days longer than is really necessary than to separate them even half-a-day too soon. It should be ascertained without doubt that they are cracking Canary seed fairly easy, which, of course, they will help themselves to out of the seed hoppers, or from a separate dish if one is provided. If a supply of soaked rape was allowed the parents in feeding, this should be gradually replaced with dry rape. One will almost invariably find that the first seed the young are able to negotiate themselves is the rape, and from this they go on to the Canary, finally to the slightly cracked hemp. But the Canary, which is to provide their staple food, is the one they must be able to crack without difficulty. Egg food will still be forming a portion of their daily food, but it should be diluted by about two-thirds its bulk of powdered biscuit, or bread crumb, etc. A very good and generally useful soft food is composed of one part each of egg (white and yolk thoroughly minced may be used), stale bread crumbs, and powdered sweet biscuit, or sponge cake. This should be mixed together without the least trace of "sloppiness." No water or other moisture should be necessary. When minced and well blended together in the above proportions it will be rather on the dry side. The average novice would at once vote its being "too dry" to give to the birds, but that is precisely where he makes one big mistake. The condition described is, in fact, the ideal one. If the young have been flying loose in the breeding cage with their parents, they may be placed at once in a flight cage; but take care they are not turned in with a lot of other birds stronger and more vigorous than themselves. But if they have been finished off by the parents in a nursery cage, they should be kept for a short time in an ordinary breeding cage before being placed in the flight, in order that they may exercise their wings and legs a little. The actual separation being accomplished, one must be on the look-out for a day or two to see if any of the birds go "thick" through being separated too early. A constant plaintive "chip, chip," beginning a few hours after the separation, is a sign that one had better be on the look-out for the author. If matters seem to be getting serious, such a bird must be placed in a nursery before it gets weak, and hung on its parents' cage again for a few hours. Here again it must be watched to see if its parents feed it. If they do not it should be tried on the cage of any pair whose young have very recently been taken away. Hand-feeding is the only other remedy. An unlimited supply of good sound Canary seed should be provided as the staple diet as soon as the birds are separated. A limited supply of dry summer rape should be given (separate) each day, and for a week or so a small quantity of egg food, prepared as described above, should also form a daily item. For the first day or two a dessert spoonful of egg food may be given to each brood of four or five birds each morning, and in the afternoon a heaped teaspoonful of rape should be given. After the first few days the quantity of egg food may be gradually diminished, and a little extra rape added, and three or four times a week a small teaspoonful of cracked hemp given in its place. After about a week or ten days the supply of egg food should be dropped for a day now and again, and by the time they have been separated a fortnight the supply of egg food may be reduced to about three times a week. Later on this may be further reduced to twice a week, and its place occasionally taken by a supply of stale bread scalded with milk, pressed nearly dry, and sprinkled with a little soft sugar. No green food should be given for a few days after removal, and afterwards a ripe plantain stalk should be given for a few weeks. Seedy chickweed may be given later, and if any signs of constipation occur a flowery head of tender groundsel will correct it. But at all times give only wholesome green stuff, and never a bit that is stale, or sodden with water either from rain or through rinsing after being gathered. Cleanliness in everything is the keynote to prevent the great majority of young bird troubles—clean cages, clean sand, clean food, clean water, clean vessels of all kinds, and much trouble disappears.

AN OLD FANCIER.

The Breeding of Mealworms.

SIR,—Would Mr. C. Houlton or any of your readers kindly advise me (being quite a novice) as to breeding mealworms? I have read Mr. Houlton's very good article of March 13th last, and want to know: How many mealworms per week Mr. Houlton's boxes would produce? I wish to breed and use 100 per week. How big should the boxes be? How many beetles must I start with? How long before I can expect to start using from a box? J. HARDS.

An Appeal for a Metropolitan Fancier.

A Fund for Mr. W. Shakespeare.

SIR,—Kindly grant me a small space to thank the undermentioned for their kind support tendered our old friend, Mr. W. Shakespear, who, I am pleased to say, is now out of the infirmary, and is about to have a week at Southend-on-Sea, with Mr. A. Chilcott, of South Avenue, who has kindly offered to entertain him free of all cost. I might say that I received a like offer from Mr. J. N. Jeffery, Winner-street, Paignton, but funds would not allow the train fare, etc. I have received in cash £1 6s. 2d., collected at the Highgate and Hampstead Society's last meeting; also from Mrs. G. E. Weston 5s., Miss N. Nickels 5s., and Mr. G. Wood 6d., making a total of £1 16s. 8d. I trust that fellow fanciers will respond to my earnest appeal on behalf of one who is in need now, and who has done much for others in times past.

The S.B.B. and M.C. Patronage and Its Trophy Competition.

SIR,—The result of the forthcoming meeting of the Scottish British Bird and Mule Club is being eagerly looked forward to, as the result of the recent correspondence in your well-known and most popular journal. Not a few of the fanciers who were members are now being asked to rejoin, while many are retaining till after this meeting their annual subscription. This to me seems a pity, and cannot be otherwise than discouraging to the officials who devote their time to the welfare of the club. While any club has the right to expel any members for infringement of their rules, by the result of a vote, yet under the present condition of the Fancy in Scotland, when clubs expel and others receive with open arms, the expelled fanciers, is it a wise step to pass resolutions of no avail? To do so, in my opinion, is neither reasonable nor practicable, and shows a want of common sense. Let us look for a moment at the latter clause of the minute as given in the report, "that all Societies asking for the patronage of the S.B.B. and M.C. be not granted it if entries be accepted from the expelled parties, or if either of the two be officiating as judges." Let us assume that two prominent societies, such as the Scottish National, or a Western open show, decide not to interfere with the external business of the society, and to have nothing to do with club's squabbles. The S.B.B. and M.C. would take upon itself (according to the minute) to refuse its patronage. But why should they do so if a show provides the necessary classification for their members? Another important point they must consider, now the trophy is a reality, and the trophy conditions did not specify this when subscribers were asked to contribute. The trophy conditions one and two were: I. The trophy shall be competed for annually at four shows. II. The trophy or cup shall be competed for annually at the Scottish National and City of Glasgow (or other western show). They agreed to include this clause at their meeting in Kirkcaldy in 1907. The trophy must go to the S.N., and the other show, irrespective of any decision which may be made by the club, since the subscriptions have been given, and on these conditions only. I appeal to the wisdom of members to adhere to them, otherwise I, as one of the large subscribers, will certainly object. Does it never strike the members that a fancier would never dream of sending entries in his own name, but under another name, and share the spoil, and thus evade any law passed by a club? If the S.B.B. and M.C. were the only one catering for British fanciers, I could understand their taking up a strong position; but can they afford to do so now? Other kindred societies now catering for British fanciers are increasing their membership, and the membership of the S.B.B. and M.C. is not too high. Let us assume that the large societies lose the patronage, say, the S.N., for example. Many fanciers who generally sent their entries elsewhere would very likely under the circumstances send their entries to the National, knowing that a lot of the champions would be at other shows for the medals and trophy. I am showing fanciers the two sides of the question. The Scottish National would possibly reap more entries than when the patronage was given, as there are many fanciers who would like very much to get a prize card at the S.N. The S.B.B. and M.C. this year has a gentleman of exceptionable ability for chairman, and no doubt he will guide the members in a spirit conducive to the welfare of the club. EXPERTO CREDE.

Teaching the Young to Pick.

After the young ones leave the nest, it is very important that they should learn to pick for themselves as soon as possible, for fear of anything happening to the cock, for by this time the hen will very likely be sitting again, the cock doing most of the feeding. Although we must not be in a hurry to wean them altogether from the old ones, the sooner they learn to do a little for themselves the better.

A method by which I have taught many a young one to taste what is good is as follows. When the young first leave the nest they are very tame, and, for instance, will allow you to touch them with a stick. By touching their beaks, or holding the bit of stick close to them, they will start to nibble at it; all we have to do is to put a little egg on the end, and they soon find out what's what. You must also put in the cage for them some seed that has been cracked with a rolling pin or bottle; and as they come on to the seed gradually wean them off the egg-food.

But do not be in a hurry to take the egg-food away from them altogether, although you must not of course give it so rich as when they were in the nest; that is, you must add more bread or biscuit to it. I know some will advise you to take it from them altogether, but my opinion is that more birds have died from want of egg-food than from its use.

Hemp seed, after a bird is six weeks old, I do not believe in, and very rarely use. I give them German rape, which is very beneficial to them, say, twice a week. Don't give them any green food until after their first moult. Bread and milk should be given to them once a week at least; this will help to keep them right. No doubt you know how to prepare this. Take the quantity of bread you require, then scald sufficient milk to thoroughly soak same when it is poured over it; sprinkle a little soft sugar on the top of it and also a little maw seed. This diet is the best thing possible for a sick and ailing bird, and the gentleman that first introduced it to the Fancy deserves to be honoured; his name, I think, is Sam Drake, and it came out originally in an article written by him for CAGE BIRDS, and was afterwards published in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. When I see one of my birds looking mopey, sitting with feathers puffed out, I immediately bring it into the kitchen, where there is more heat, and put it on this diet. But instead of sweetening it with sugar, as I do in the ordinary way, sweeten it with best glycerine, and many a young, and old one too, I have brought round by this treatment. Also take away the water and give scalded milk to drink instead, or, at least, milk and water.

Two Sides to Every Question.

What I have said is only the bright side of the question. There is another side: and while I do not wish to discourage the beginner, I would prepare him for disappointments and drawbacks, for the man that starts Canary keeping with the idea that all will be plain sailing, will be sadly taken aback; in fact, it is the effort to come out on top that makes the Fancy the more interesting and the more creditable to the fancier that does succeed. If our birds could be produced with no trouble thoy would become as common as Sparrows and we should not know what to do with them. But it will require patience and persoverance, and I would say to you, "if at first you don't succeed try, try again," and always remember that if anything is worth doing at all, it is worth doing well. If you bear this in mind you will sooner or later come out on the top, and the happy sensation that thrills you as you see the bird you have bred and developed before your eyes, will be worth all the expense, trouble and disappointment you have experienced.

I have said nothing about doctoring birds that are ill. It is very difficult, however, to know what to advise, for what would be good for one ailment might only add coals to the fire in another case. Prevention is better than cure, and our one aim must be to keep the birds in health.

Cleanliness Next to Godliness.

To do this, cleanliness, which they say "is next to godliness," should be our constant study. A very important thing is to keep the water glasses sweet and clean. Remember it is not enough to merely throw out the stale water and fill up the vessels with fresh, but they must be washed out every day. The proper and most effective way to go about it is to take a pail of clean water, and another empty pail; then take your drinkers, empty the stale water into your empty pail, fill your drinkers, and with your finger wash all the slime off from the inside; empty and refil again, and replace on the cage. If you make it a rule to do this every day your drinkers will never get dirty, and your bird will always have clean water, which is very important for keeping the birds in good health. The same thing applies to your egg drawers, the cages themselves, and everything; in fact, from beginning to end, our motto must be cleanliness and plenty of fresh air, without draughts.

But, of course, sickness will crop up in the best regulated bird-rooms, and birds, like the human race, must die, and as all the doctors in the world cannot save us if our time has come, so our birds cannot live for ever, but sooner or later must go. But it is our duty to try and save them if possible, and milksop is the first thing to try. At the same time bring the patient into a hotter atmosphere, as this sometimes has the desired effect. If it does not, I still keep them on this diet, but I try aconite, which I have known to work wonders with some birds, but it requires great care in its use, as it is a deadly poison. It should be given in the drinking water. One drop to one tablespoonful of water for birds that are down in condition will be safe. Cod Liver oil is about the best thing, and soon makes an improvement if anything will. Parrish's chemical food is another good thing, but I am told by a chemist that it should be given in distilled or boiled water. I like magnesia as a cooling medicine—as much as will lie on a sixpence in the drinking water.

I will bring my remarks to a close. Moulting, colour-feeding and preparing for exhibition must form material for another talk. If there is any question any member would like to ask I shall, if able to answer it, be only to pleased to do so. I thank you for your attention, and if anything I may have said in my simple remarks will be of use to you I shall be repaid for my coming. I wish all of you a successful breeding season, and hope you will breed what the reporters call, an eye-opener, the first try. After a little conversation a very hearty vote of thanks was accorded to the lecturer for his kindness in coming to Cramlington.

The Moulting Season.

Some advice on the Treatment of Birds which are Moulting, with a "Tip" or two on helping them to make a good start.

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Just now our British soft-billed birds will be deep in moult, or else clean moulted. In all cases where the birds are accustomed to being hung out in the open in their cages, the practice which, when used with discretion, is a very good and healthful one, should be continued right through the moult, save that one should exercise judgment in the matter, and not expose the bird to a blistering hot sun one day and a cold shower bath for the greater part of the next day. It is only when the weather is fair and settled that they should be hung outside at this time. If no other shelter can be found, a leafy branch or two from some harmless plant is a good thing to arrange before the cage, and will very often serve a second useful purpose—that of attracting a variety of insect life to flutter about and rest upon it, which the occupant of the cage is not slow to appropriate as an addition to its bill of fare.

Encourage the birds to bathe as freely as possible, and always endeavour to use clean, pure rain water for the baths. Try as far as possible to supplant, rather than supplement, the useful mealworm with a good variety of live insect food freshly collected as required. Exposure to fierce sunlight will in all probability detract from, rather than add to, the natural colour of a bird, and is to be deprecated on this score as well as the one previously mentioned. What is really wanted is abundance of soft diffused light. This is easily managed by shading the cage as already suggested. Never hang the cage in a shady corner that is being constantly swept by a cold draught of air; never let it stay out in a cold shower. Finally, never put a bird out for hours at a time which is moulting very heavily, or seems to have a difficulty in casting its feathers. Treated on these lines, with plenty of opportunities for frequent bathing, and a cage large enough to allow of fairly vigorous exercise, the birds will come out of the moult with a brightness and polish of plumage which is not to be found in poorly-fed, closely-confined specimens. Birds treated in this way will need no "feeds" or nostrums to add to their natural beauties, but will be able to hold their own in competition with artificial aids—living examples of the adage that "nature unadorned is most adorned."

Insect Life for the Hardbills.

In all normal cases our British seed-eating species will have broken into moult, and may with every advantage be treated on similar lines. Let the object be to encourage a healthy moult under conditions most nearly resembling the natural life of the species, with good generous feeding—pure water, pure soft water baths, and last but not least pure fresh air continually. As an important item in the dietary see that there is always a liberal supply of green food in variety, and especially such things as are haunts of tiny green caterpillars, larvæ around the roots, and green fly, and spare yourself the trouble of clearing off these "small fry" when giving the herbage to the birds. They are, perhaps, even more important than the green food itself, though the latter is by no means unimportant.

Very few common things are more rich in a variety of insect life than chickweed and shepherd's purse, and, fortunately, these are things which may be quite safely offered with great freedom to all cage birds. Whenever the size of the cage will permit the whole plant to be given, pluck it up by the root, and shake only just the superfluous soil from around it, and put it bodily into the cage. Do not attempt to shake the root quite clear of all dirt, as both these plants are the hosts of numerous larvæ which feed around the root, and which form a most valuable item of the birds' food. Utilise also wild seeds just ripening, and in an half-ripe condition, and small fruits and berries as they ripen and come into season, upon which the birds feed largely in a wild state as far as possible. This kind of semi-open-air treatment used with judgment and discretion, combined with generous high feeding, puts the birds practically on an equal footing with those in large outdoor aviaries.

Colour-feeding Britishers.

This brings one to the question of colour feeding, which is a point on which opinions greatly differ. Many fanciers systematically feed British birds intended for show, and some judges have a leaning towards colour-fed specimens. But at the same time, the fact remains that very few indeed of our native birds are really improved in appearance by the process, and, in the writer's opinion at least, a naturally good coloured bird, well moulted without such aid, and with its natural colour and markings unpolluted and developed to the highest possible degree, will, under any save absolutely colour prejudiced judgment, in every case score over a colour-fed specimen of only equal merit in other respects.

The only really sound and rational colour food for these birds is plenty of natural food. The use of some form of iron occasionally during the moult is undoubtedly beneficial, by giving tone to the system, and enriching the blood at just that time when such assistance is most needed, and thereby indirectly aiding the deposition of good natural colour in the growing plumage. A crystal of the sulphate of iron, which will dissolve very readily in water, added to the drinking water every few days, will have a good effect; and either this or a slight dusting of the saccharated carbonate of iron on a little soft food, or bread and milk every few days, should be all the colour food that British birds require. Some may object to the term "colour food" being applied to these articles, but, after all, they are really and truly colour foods.

One thing must be always borne in mind, viz., that any form of iron almost invariably produces a very constipated habit when given repeatedly, so that its effect must be watched, and if any serious constipation occurs, each dose of iron should have combined with it a few drops of glycerine, or honey, or even molasses, to counteract this effect. But the probability is that the free supply of green food and fruits will have quite sufficient laxative effect to render any other antidote unnecessary.

Abnormalities Considered.

Many cases occur among weakly, badly kept, or old birds (not to speak of accidental causes) where the moult proves quite a severe task upon the system of the subject. For example, when an aged bird has an obvious difficulty in breaking away into moult, and sits mopy, and sleeping on its perch every now and again for many minutes at a time, it would be folly to put it out in the open-air at all except for an hour or so, when the weather was quite warm and sunny; then it should be placed in the sun, in a position where it is not too scorching, for an hour or two in the middle of the day. Even this much should only be given when the birds show some degree of activity. The chief danger is that whilst the bird is sitting so still and mopy it is exceedingly liable to contract a chill, which will always have a serious effect, and is very often the last straw that makes it "go under," and provide a fitting subject for the avian undertaker.

The proper treatment for such birds is to keep them indoors, and in a rather warm place, where the heat is constant and regular. If there is any risk at all of draughts being felt, keep the cage covered over with some light material that will admit sufficient light for the bird to get about comfortably, and find its food and water easily, and also allow air to pass readily. If a few shreds of hay saffron and five or six drops of sweet spirits of nitre are given in each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water for a day or two, and the birds kept fairly warm and covered over during the time, it will assist them very materially to get a fair start in throwing off their plumage. After that give a fair supply of maw regularly until the moult is beginning to draw near its end, when this should be gradually withdrawn, and a limited supply of linseed substituted in its stead. The latter seed given at the end of the moult, and for a few weeks afterwards, whilst the colours of most British birds are developing, adds much to their beauty and sheen. But one needs to be careful how this seed is given. Whilst it is no particular favourite with many birds, others, especially the Linnet tribe, are very partial to it, and if it is consumed in any quantity it is apt to upset a bird's health, and set up diarrhœa.

Among the Canaries.

Curiously enough it is among the Canaries, which of all other birds should be the best understood, considering their long years of domesticity, that one hears of the greatest number of deaths just before or during the period of moulting. It is sad at times to hear of the numerous losses which occur among the young birds of the year at from seven to ten weeks—just when the owner must be thinking they are well beyond the usual infantile risks, and be congratulating himself on having had a very successful season. In the vast majority of such cases when the young are dropping off in this way, enquiry will almost invariably elicit the fact that the diet has been, to say the least, injudicious. They have been brought into a generally "soft" condition by being kept too long upon "baby food." That may not be quite a scientific way of putting it, but it will be intelligible enough to the average fancier.

To avoid such losses the young should be gradually weaned after leaving their parents on to a diet consisting chiefly of dry seeds, of which good sound Canary should form the principal part to the extent of three-fifths of the bulk, and the remaining two-fifths should consist of at least one-fifth of summer rape, given dry, and the remainder chiefly of hemp, varied occasionally in part with maw seed as the moult is approaching, and a small proportion of linseed at the end of the moult. By the time the birds are six weeks old this weaning process should be almost if not quite completed.

Of course, one may say this is all "old history"; we have it dinned at us every season. Just so. But what does one usually find carried out in practice? At eight or ten weeks old, and even later, the birds are being treated on lines which would be very suitable at four or five weeks old, but which are decidedly bad for birds which should have left "babyhood" some distance in the rear.

Wild Bird Life.

The Swallows in August.

August is generally a month of sunshine, and after the experience of the earlier summer months the almost tropical heat of the present time is quite enjoyable. But one needs to be off the street and the dusty road, and away in the deep shadow of the elms listening to the contented cooing of the Turtle Dove, and watching the mad revels of the Swallow tribe, which, of all birds, appear to enjoy most the sunshine and heat. They are as frolicsome and gay now as they were in the early spring. In the heat of the day they leave the village streets and roam the fields and meadows, hawking above the ripening corn, where hundreds of insects are constantly on the wing, disturbed by the swaying of the stalks in the gentle breeze. At times they travel far from the village. I have seen them along the sand dunes by the sea shore, some miles from any house or building, their wings at times touching the tops of the coarse sea grass, thus disturbing food one for the other.

With the harvest comes the cessation of the bird song of the year; for we must look upon the singing of young birds and old ones after the moult as the commencement of a new chapter in song. Within a few days the song of the Turtle Dove will be finished, and the family parties band together to form the huge flocks seen during the early days of September. Of the Finches the Greenbird alone is in song. We hear him along the hedgerows and in the plantation. He warbles a few liquid notes, finishing with the long-drawn out "chee" so characteristic of the species. He and his wife are tending the last brook, which are easily located in the thicket, where the wild clematis hangs in thick clusters. The lusty youngsters with open beak pant in the summer heat, alert to leave the nest at the first sign of danger. They are shy and wary. This shy habit in young birds at a certain age is still seen in the common Canary, although generations of their ancestors have been reared in captivity. By domestication we can alter the plumage and outward appearance of any wild creature, but the inherited instinct of self-preservation still remains.

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insistedupon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—Three Words a Penny up to eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 12 words, 4d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Fourpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARR.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post In each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.
